Glandstone on the Church of England.

In a letter addressed to Rev. Eubule-Evans, with reference to certain reforms relating to the Church of England, suggested by that gentleman in a paper contributed to a leading periodical, Mr. Gladstone says:

"I cannot decline your invitation on the ground that the subject of your interesting, able, and incisive paper is foreign to my thoughts. But I admit my inability to treat it even inadequately. In your strictures I find much truth (forgive me if I add) with some exaggeration. As regards the intellectual quality of the clergy, I think the most marked want is the want of great men as leaders. I admit the church is losing ground in this respect relatively to the lay mind of the country; but when I look to moral tone, if nobleness is repelled from holy orders, I know not where it takes refuge. There is far more of it, as well as of bounty, devotion and self-sacrifice, among the clergy, out of all sight, than among the laity. In writing this I do not presume that I am offering it as any solution for your problems. I have none to offer. If the establishment is hard to maintain, it is harder to destroy. But I do not anticipate that reforms of it such as you desire will ever appear except on paper. I have one advantage over you. The Church of England was, in my view, founded not 300 years ago, but 1800, and I am persuaded that there is that in her which, with Establishment or without it, will keep or find for her, great as are her sores and her sins, a place and a name in the final record of God's dealings with mankind for their salvation."

The right honorable gentleman adds in a subsequent letter: "Pray understand that I do not intend to pass any judgment, condemnatory or otherwise, upon the reforms (in which I found much that was excellent), but only to treat the likelihood of their adoption as a matter of fact. At a certain point the framework of institutions becomes too stiff and stark for changes of a certain kind and extent."

New Patents.

Through dispatches to Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, S. F., we receive the following advance list of U. S. Patents granted to Pacific Coast inventors, viz: C. R. Donner, S. F., horseshoeing tool; W. Eppelsheimer, S. F., device for propelling cars; W. Eppelsheimer, S. F., means for turning cars on short curves; A. Paraf, S. F., fluxing composition; J. Walker, Sonora, Cal., stamp mill feeder; M. P. Boss, Virginia, Nev., distributing quicksilver in quartz mills; A. S. Buckelew, Colusa, Cal. watch case spring; P. Hinkle, S. F., device for operating throttle valves; W. H. Richardson, S. F., air and water heater; F. H. Ruhl, Stockton, Cal., lift pump valve; J. Steiner, Mendon, Cal., wagon wheel; L. D. Stephens, Gold Run, Cal., ore washer; Kwong on Cheong, S. F., trademark for tea.

Effect of the Bank's Resumption of Business.

It is impossible to set forth in a single article the financial results which will flow from the resumption of business by the Bank of California. The industrial interests fostered by the bank will thrive and expand, the mines under the bank management will yield more and more bullion, various mercantile interests will derive benefits by the fortification of credit, and the Comstock lode will gain a prominence compared with which its present position is obscure. Every civilized community will gaze with wonder upon the financial recuperation of the State, and the prestige of San Francisco as a financial centre will ever surpass the expectations of local financiers before the monetary disturbance. It is worth while to work for this prestige.—[Stock Report.

Remedy for Croup.

Dr. Oliver Holden, of Chicago, sends The Western Rural the following directions for treating this disease: Take a knife or grater, and shave or grate off in small particles about a teaspoonful of alum; mix it with about twice its quantity of sugar, to make it palatable, and administer as quickly as possible. Almost instant relief will be afforded.

—The late Judge Grover's sense of humor was very acute, and to quote one of his expressions may not be out of place. Meeting a friend at Saratoga, about a year ago, the subject of the Beecher scandal arose, and naturally the Judge's opinion was anxiously awaited. "Waal," said he, with a drawl for which he was noted, "it may not be jest the thing for me to express an opinion, but after reading them letters of Beecher's, all I ken say is, if he is innocent, he is the longest-suffering Christian I ever knew."

—There is a very wealthy misanthrope in Paris who never smokes anything but the vilest cigars—those which are sold for a sou. The other day, a friend asked the cause of this eccentricity. "It gratifies me in this way. I arrive at the theatre in my carriage. The prancing horses are pulled up, and I alight with dignity, at the same time throwing away my half-smoked cigar." "Well, what then?" "I think how badly sold the fellow is who picks up the stump, thinking he has hold of a fragrant Havana!"

—An Indiana farmer after drinking some hard cider, endeavored to milk his pet mule, and will in consequence have to repair the roof of his barn in the spot where his head went through.

—There are now applications to the Treasury for the transfer of eleven and a half millions of gold.

—The Indian Department bids are marked "U. S. I. D."—U Steal, I Divide"—eh?

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any interior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

$6 00 per Annum, in Advance.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen Copies of THE ALDINE, 50 Cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.

WE HAVE IT!

ATTENTION! FARMERS AND GARDENERS READ THIS. NOTHING LIKE IT, OR THAT WILL EQUAL IT IN AMERICA. THE CELEBRATED SPANISH NUT.

CHUFA OR SOUCHIE!

150 BUSHELS PER ACRE ON POOREST land. Equally productive in a cold climate as the warmer, as the frost does not injure it. No cultivation, except to carefully eradicate the weeds. A new variety, very large, sweet and delicious for food, resembles in taste a delicious cocanut, and like them may be eaten raw or cooked. They make a delightful refreshing drink for Summer. Much used in Madrid, Valencia, Cuba and other hot climates, where it is known. It was employed at the end of the preceding century as a substitute for coffee in the whole of Germany. Fine for poultry, fattens more hogs than forty acres of the same land in corn. There is nothing in the world that fattens hogs so rapidly and thoroughly, and that gives such sweetness to the flesh. It keeps well throughout the year in the ground, which renders it only necessary to fence off a patch or a field, as needed for the hogs, and you are enabled to have healthy and fat swine at all seasons of the year without one grain of corn or other food. The Ross Case Again.

[From The New York Tribune, Sept. 3.]

The trial of Westervelt in Philadelphia as accessory to the abduction of Charley Ross has, as our readers will note, at last brought out the inside history to the affair. In spite of the persistence of reporters and the excitement and curiosity that raged through the country for a year, the most important facts of the case were given for the first time to the public. By these it appears that at the very time the police of this city and Philadelphia were pushing the case, urged by duty and the reward of $20,000, to arrest the kidnappers, Mr. Ross was in constant receipt of letters from, by which it would seem he was withheld from giving entire confidence to the police by the threats that if he did so the child would be killed, or, as they expressed it, "utterly annihilated."

The "job," as undertaken by Mosher, was apparently but the opening move of a regular business of kidnapping, and regarded by him very much in the light of an advertisement. He coolly states that the boy would be promptly restored on the payment of the ransom, in order that the parents of children kidnapped in future might see that he dealt on the square; also that the child would be killed on the first attempt to set detectives on his track, to prove to the public that he was not to be trifled with. It was not to be wondered at that Mr. Ross was influenced by these threats, and that much of the reticence shown by him to the public and the police, for which he was so cruelly blamed and mis-judged, was caused by the fear of the murder of his child.

No story in fiction is more pathetic or dramatic than that of this father going out day after day, carrying the ransom for his child in a box, or little leather satchel, as directed by the robbers, patrolling the business streets of Philadelphia, or making fruitless journeys to this city and back, hoping each moment to meet the agent who was to receive the money and return the boy. No father can read the recital without placing himself unconsciously in the place of this man, leaving the mother of the child waiting at home while he goes about with the money, to meet the stranger who was to approach him, or the flag which was to be waved from the station, and so on day after day, month after month, until mind and body gave way, and he sank beneath the burden of hope deferred. The case remains one of the most remarkable, even in its present state, of any on the criminal records. The mother still sits waiting and watching for her boy; the kidnappers are known and all their habits and haunts. Not only the police but the people of the whole country were roused to the closest and most vigilant search; and yet the whereabouts of the child, even the fact of his life or death, remains an inscrutable mystery. Still worse is the fact that Westervelt and his wife in all human probability, do know the fate of the boy; they were cognizant of all Mosher's dealings with him up to the time of the attack on Judge Van Brunt's house; yet under the law it will be almost impossible to compel the attendance of witnesses who can prove this, and quite impossible to compel in any way a confession from the prisoner. The case as it stands takes side with the miserable Bissinger suicide and murder last week, one of those terrible social wrongs for which law and the regular course of justice offer no means of redress.

How Her Dream was Fulfilled.

A woman at Showhegan, Maine, dreamed on Friday night last that her sister, who resided at St. Paul, Minnesota, whom she had not seen for eleven years, had been run over by a railroad train and killed. She told her dream to her husband next morning at breakfast, and he laughingly derided her nervous anticipations, but before they left the table a telegram was handed to her containing the information that at the precise hour of her dream, 11:56 P. M., her sister had been delivered of twins.

—There is said to be a journal in England published in the interest of the undertakers. A mourning paper, of course.

Rules for Spelling.

[From The Journal of Education.]

The following rules should be carefully committed to memory, as the knowledge of them will prevent that hesitation about the spelling of common words which is frequently experienced even by the well educated:

All monosyllables ending in l, with a single vowel before it, have double l at the close; mill, sell.

All monosyllables ending in l, with a double vowel before it, have one l at the close; wail, sail.

Monosyllables ending in l when compounded, retain but l each; as fullfil, skillful.

All words of more than one syllable ending in l have one l only at the close, as faithful, delightful; except recall, befall, unwell, etc.

All derivations from words ending in l have one l only; as equality from equal; except they end in er, or ll; as mill, miller; full, fuller.

All participles in ing from verbs ending in e, lose the final e; as have, having; amuse, amusing; except they come from verbs ending in double e, and then they retain both; as see, seeing; agree, agreeing.

All verbs in ly, and nouns in ment retain the final of their primitives; as brave, bravery; refine, refinement; except judgment, acknowledgment.

All derivatives from words ending in er retain the e before the r; as refer, reference; except hindrance from hinder; remembrance from remember; disastrous from disaster; monstrous from monster; wondrous from wonder; cumbrous from cumber, etc.

All compound words, if both end not in l, retain their primitive parts entire; as millstones, chargeable, graceless, except always, also, deplorable, although, almost, admirable, etc.

All monosyllables ending in a consonant, with a single consonant before it, double that consonant in derivatives, as sin, sinner; ship, shipping; big, bigger; glad, gladder.

Monosyllables ending in a consonant, with a double vowel before it, do not double the consonant in derivatives, as sleep, sleeping; troop, trooper.

All words of more than one syllable, ending in a single consonant, preceded by a single vowel, and accented on the last syllable, double that consonant in derivatives, as commit, committee; compel, compelled; appal, appalling; distil, distiller.

Nouns of one syllable, ending in y, change y into ies in the plural, and verbs ending in y, preceded by a consonant, change y into ies in the third person singular of the present tense, and ies in the past tense and past participle; as fly, flies; I apply, he applies; I reply, or have replied, or he replied. If the y be preceded by a vowel, this rule is not applicable; as key, keys; I play, he plays; we have enjoyed ourselves.

Compound words whose primitives end in y, change into i; as beauty, beautiful; lovely, loveliness.

A Defunct Devil.

We had a devil once, but the place that erst while knew him knows him no more forever. He was a devil fair to look upon. When he took off his rings to wash the rollers, and stood aloof in a faultless shirt and dove-colored pants, it watered the envious soul of the looker-on with admiration. He was a devil of a fellow, and his name was Brooks. By profession he was a lady-killer, but he had fair practice at the bar, considering his youth, being drunk on every holiday, with as much dexterity and eloquence as an old practitioner. He was bred in the dry goods line, but having been blighted by his employers, he resolved to embrace one of the learned professions. Having already made considerable progress, he naturally gravitated toward the devil, and chose that of a printer. As he sat before us in the office, gently and artistically settling his tie with a delicately gloved hand, while he explained the conviction which had sent him to wrestle with letters and rollers, he stirred our soul with pity. We said come. He came. That is he came occasionally, other engagements permitting. He smoked cigars, with feet on the editorial table, brought his friends in on Sunday, to take a hand at cards, amused himself by dropping quads from a three-story window, whistling for the edification of the compositors, and otherwise disporting himself as a young and devilish high toned devil should be expected. On holidays, when he was sick, he could have been seen taking an airing behind a livery team. He got $2 50 per week, but never walked. At the races he shown; except, possibly, for the brief time he lay under a tree, drunk. But the brightest stars do not shine always; so the bluest devils anon happily hide their rays from mortal ken. An engagement at a festival one evening unfortunately conflicted with running off the paper, and the fashionable young devil pulled on his tight boots and walked out, leaving us to mourn his untimely loss. It will be a long time before we look upon his like again. We unhesitatingly challenge our brethern for a devil fit to unlace his suspenders.—[South Bend Union.

—A little girl went into a neighbor's house one day and some apple parings lay on a plate on the table. After sitting a while, she said: "I smell apples." "Yes," the lady replied, "I guess you smell those apple-parings on the plate." "No, no," said she, "taint them I smell [illegible]"

The Original of Mrs. Partington.

It is not generally known that Theodore Hook's series of Ramsbottom papers were the precursors of all the Mrs. Malaprops and Mrs. Partington's of a later generation. Let Dorothea Julia Ramsbottom speak for herself in a few sentences from her "Notes on England and France:"

"Having often heard travelers lament not having put down what they call the memory bilious of their journey, I was determined while I was on my tower to keep a dairy (so called from containing the cream of one's information), and record everything that recurred to me.

"Resolving to take time by the firelock, we left Montague Place at 7 o'clock, by Mr. Fulmer's pocket thermometer, and proceeded over Westminster bridge to explode the European continent. I never pass Whitehall without dropping a tear to the memory of Charles the Second, who was decimated after the rebellion of 1745 opposite the Horse Guards.

"We saw the inn where Alexander, the Autograph of all the Russias, lived when he was there; and as we were going along we met twenty or thirty dragoons mounted on horses. The ensign who commanded them was a friend of Mr. Fulmer's; he looked at Lavinia as if pleased with her tooting assembly. I heard Mr. Fulmer say he was a son of Marr's; he spoke as though everybody knew his father, so I suppose he must be the son of the poor gentleman who was so barbarously murdered some years ago near Ratcliffe Highway, if so he is uncommon genteel.

"Travelers like us who are mere birds of prey, have no time to waste, so we went to-day to the great church which is called Naugty Dum, where we saw a priest doing something at an altar. Mr. Fulmer begged me to observe the knave of the church, but I thought it too hard to call a man names in his own country."

Counterfeit Coin.

We have in our possession a counterfeit American trade dollar dated 1874, the first we have yet seen or heard of, but this having been in circulation is pretty good evidence that others also are in circulation, therefore it is best for everybody to be on their guard and closely inspect the coin they may receive. This counterfeit is very well executed, but the metal is darker and whittles easier, than silver, evidently being composed largely of lead. It has some little ring to it, but is easily detected by its lack of weight, dark color and peculiar smoothness when rubbed between the thumb and finger. This bogus coin is all the more dangerous here where nobody is on the lookout for such things.—[Gold Hill News, Sept. 16.

—Jones drew up one night at a lettered street-lamp to say: "Well, I'll be (hic) blest if somebody hain't stuck an advertisement on the (hic) moon."

AS USUAL.

It is charged that the Government has paid $500,000 in ten years to support Indians who do not exist on American soil, and who long since removed to Canada. The story, which has the air of truthfulness, is this: Before the discovery of gold Montana was inhabited by Blackfeet Indians. This nation is divided into three tribes —Blackfeet, Bloods and Piegans. It was the custom of the agent for these Indians to visit the country once a year, distribute his supplies and return. As gold-seekers began to fill up the country, the Indians moved north across the British line. For ten years not a Blackfoot Indian, and not five lodges of Blood Indians have been on American soil, save in the form of parties visiting this side to steal stock. These Indians do their trading at British posts, and are supplied by the Canadian Government. There are still about 150 lodges of Piegan Indians, who spend part of their time on this side of the line drawing supplies from the United States, but they mainly live on British ground with the Bloods and Blackfeet. During ten years past Congress has annually appropriated $50,000 for the Blackfeet, Blood and Piegan Indians. Agents have been sent to these Indians at a salary of $1,500 a year each. In the office of the Commissioner for Indian Affairs may be found returns of these Agents for ten years for $50,000 per annum. With these returns will be found endorsed abstracts of issues, in which are the names of the principal Blackfeet and Blood chiefs, signed to what purports to be receipts for immense supplies and inventories of goods. Not a solitary Blackfoot, and not over five or six lodges of Bloods have been on this side the line for ten years, and no United States Indian Agent ever saw a Blackfoot Indian. These names have been put there by agents and clerks, Elected.

We learn from THE INDEPENDENT that our former fellow-townsmen, W. B. Daugherty, is elected County Clerk of Inyo county by the good round majority of 105. Considering that the vote of the county only aggregated a few hundred the result is quite flattering, particularly when it is further considered that Inyo on the general ticket went strongly Democratic. We congratulate you, Billy, on your success, though we really suppose that there is not much in the office.—[Eureka Sentinel, Sept. 17.

It is true it would be difficult to strike a bonanza in any of our county offices, but the Clerk's office is the best and the most remunerative. "Billy" worked against heavy odds, and he owes his success entirely to his own iudividual efforts and merit.

Reward of Merit.

Col. Von Schmidt was recently presented with a $1,000 gold watch and chain by Wells, Fargo & Co., as a token of his bravery in repulsing the stage robbers who undertook to rob one of their coaches last month. The gallant old Dutchman, who was a passenger at the time, fought and beat off the highwaymen single-handed, although there were several cowards in the coach at the time, who, with the driver, left the old Colonel fighting and drove to the station without him.

The Training Ship.

The training ship at San Francisco has been opened at last. Boys between sixteen and seventeen will be admitted. The education of boys admited to the training ship will consist of the elements of an English education, with practical seamanship, fitting them for service in the navy. They must be able to read and write, and several other qualifications are demanded which pretty effectually exclude the gamins, who are the shavers most in need of the ship.

The Whisky Frauds.

Clarke, Government revenue agent, who has been investigating the whisky ring on this coast, has found it necessary to the satisfactory prosecution of his work to have Supervisor Foulke transferred to Richmond, Va., while Gen. Hawley, of New York, will take charge here. Investigations will be then continued, and it is known that systematic frauds and corruption, as in the West, will be found to have extended to this coast.

Election News.

Maine goes Republican as usual, but with a considerably reduced majority. The Democrats claim a majority of the State Senate. Colorado had an election on the 16th, the result of which is not yet fully known. But three counties are known to have gone Republican, though they claim the whole Territory on Legislative and State officers.

THE STATE SUPERINTENDENT.

The merits respectively and comparatively of Prof. Carr, and Parson Fitzgerald, candidates for State Superintendent of Schools, are being discussed with considerable freedom by people and newspapers, and it is best they should. As a popular fiction it is assumed that this pending election is in no sense a political one, but in point of fact, party lines are often drawn closer then than in a general election. This being the case, Parson Fitzgerald having the prestige of the late Democratic victory in his favor is likely to be elected, unless voters turn out in stronger force then is their wont at these special elections. In that event, we believe that Carr will be elected. If current report for some years past, has not belied the facts, he is by far the most competent and the most trustworthy man for the place. He it was who made such a gallant fight for the Agricultural Department of the State University, and though sustained by nearly every Grange in the State, he was ousted from his professorship in that institution although he stood higher than ever in public esttimation.

There are but very few even among Fitzgerald's party supporters, but admit Carr to be his superior in educational attainments and peculiar fitness for the very important position of State Superintendent. Fitzgerald has served one term in the office, and, so far as we know, gave fair satisfaction. But in proof of his narrow views, allowing his political predilection to creep in when such should be utterly ignored, it is charged against him that at the outset of his administration he urged the State Board to adopt a series of Southern school geographies, because they were Southern, and very peculiarily so. This story may be true or may not. Probably not, or else he learned better subsequently, for we hear of no later complaints of that kind against him.

We subjoin the following as the views of The Sacramento Record regarding these two candidates. When we find anything convincing to the contrary in any of our Democratic exchanges supporting the Parson we will give place to that also:

We do not think there is room for much difference of opinion as to the relative merits of the Republican and Democratic candidates for Superintendent of Public Instruction. Professor Carr is fitted by special training for the office. His reputation as an educator is not local, but national. He is a man of high scientific and general attainments, and has spent his life in the active pursuit of his laborious profession, and not in lobbying or politics. Fitzgerald has held the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction before, and he then proved himself altogether incompetent. He is not a well educated man. He has no special training whatever. His capacities are about on a level with those of a rural pedagogue. And he is a notorious hanger-on of lobbies, a meddler in politics, and advocate of narrow and bigoted views. To set such a person at the head of the educational system of a State like California would be a solecism of the worst kind, and the fact that such a person may be elected, notwithstanding his notorious unfitness, is, we think, a sufficient reason for withdrawing the position from the popnlar elections. Thinking men must longsince. have perceived that an elective Superintendent of Public Instructions is as grave an anomaly as an elective Judiciary, and that some recognition of this has become general is shown in the grouping of the judicial and educational offices together. Experience, however, has conclusively shown that nothing is gained by postponing the judicial election; that such effect as the postponement occasions is, as a rule, to make hopeless any contest against the candidate of the party that carries the preceeding general election. In the present case the futility of the arrangement is destined, we fear, to be illustrated more clearly than usual; for while Fitzgerald is an exceptionally bad candidate, Carr is an exceptionally good one, yet since the former is the Demcratic choice, and since the Democracy have just carried the State heavily, neither Independents nor Republicans will probably have much fight in them. Nevertheless there is room to hope

How She Fixed Him.

A pleasant little story is told of an affecting scene that was played in the Pullman palace car in which Gen. Sheridan and wife recently came to this city. It is related that as soon as Mrs. Sheridan learned that she was in Utah, she arose and glancing out of the window, observed: "And so this is Utah. Here's where they let a man have as many wives as he wants. Dear, me, dear me." Then she took her husband by the left ear, jerked him into one corner of the seat, and piling bundle after bundle on his lap, until there was nothing of him visible but the top of his head, exclaimed: "There now, I guess you'll never be a Mormon, will you, my darling?"—[Salt Lake Herald.

The Whole Vote.

The complete returns for Governor in the State, including several official ones from different counties, give a total vote of 122,077, divided as follows: Irwin, 61,525; Phelps, 30,922; Bidwell, 29,630. The official declaration of the vote will not vary much from these figures. This shows that Irwin has a majority over both his competitors of 973. In other words, that the aforesaid Irwin "ran like a scared wolf."

New Patents.

Through dispatches to Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, San Francisco, we receive the following advance list of patents granted Pacific coast inventors; viz: S. D. Holm, S. F., bridle bit, W. F. Jeans and D. H. Bailey, Ferndale, Cal., machine for counting stock; D. L. O'Connor, Covelo, Cal., baleing press.

Beecher and Moulton.

District Attorney Britton, of Brooklyn, has addressed letters to Henry Ward Beecher and Francis D. Moulton, suggesting that the public interests would be best served by entering a nolle prosequi in the case of Beecher against Moulton for libel. Beecher in reply concurs, but Moulton says he cannot acquiesce in the action proposed, and concludes his letter as follows:

"I am indicted for libel in charging Rev. Henry Ward Beecher with criminal intercourse with female members of his congregation. The charge is true. He knows it to be true, and whatever the imperfections of man's tribunals, the Supreme Ruler will some day reveal the truth and vindicate the right. For speaking the truth, and that, too, under challenge and in defense of my own character and the character of her whose good name is dearer to me than life itself, I have been arraigned as a criminal; compelled like a felon to plead with uplifted hands; subjected to the ignominy of bonds against an escape from justice; loaded with obloquy by the public press; frowned upon and and avoided by society; and now, after the indictment against me has served its purpose by discrediting me in advance as a witness of the Rev. Mr. Beecher's guilt, and it is apparent to you, and is it is to the world, that I am innocent and must be acquitted—at this moment and under these circumstances I am requested to acquiesce in a nolle prosequi, and to suffer my accuser to escape the penalty of his perjured persecutions. Never, sir; never! I demand a trial, and shall be ready on any reasonable notice to make good my defense. Very respectfully,

(Signed), FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

Murder by Texas Cattle Herders.

An Omaha dispatch of the 18th gives this account of a brutal murder at Kearney Junction:

A dispatch from Kearney Junction says a party of about twenty Texas herders came in last night and camped on the Platte at the bridge. During the night their horses got into the cornfield of Mr. Collins. He took up the horses and this morning they came up and said they would settle. They came up to town, got drunk, went back and shot Collins five times killing him almost instantly. The Texans have all been captured but two, and are now in jail at Kearney Junction. It is probable they will be lynched to night.

LATER.

The organized party of citizens of Kearney, headed by United States Marshal Ball, who went in pursuit of the Texan outlaws that murdered Collins yesterday morning, have just returned to Kearney with eight of the desperadoes. The rest of the band is still being followed by Sheriff James of Dawson county, add Anderson of Buffalo county, with a posse of men, each with the determination not to return until the balance of the herders are captured dead or alive. There is great excitement at Kearney to-day over the capture of part of the herders and it will be fortunate for them if lynch law is not resorted to by the people, who have lost all patience at the violation of law by these criminals.

State of Affairs in San Francisco.

The condition of things in this city has manifestly improved. There is more money in circu ation day by day. The prices of mining stocks as indicated by the sales in the "Little Board," are firm and advancing. These transactions seem to operate as a sort of safety-valve, enabling smaller holders to realize, the stock offered being generally absorbed by the agents of larger operators. It is now supposed that the Bank of California will be able to open upon the 27th instant, and that the Nevada Bank will commence operations upon October 4th. The National Gold Bank and Trust Company received $150,000 in coin yesterday from Sub-Treasury upon telegraphic transfer, and considerable sums are in transit by railroad for the Bank of California and the Hibernia Bank.

Messrs. Flood & O'Brien have purchased from the Bank of California the San Francisco Assaying and Refining Works, and also the acid manufactory. Both of these establishments are understood to have been hitherto very profitable.

It is supposed that upon the opening of the banks and the resumption of business by the Stock Boards, there will be a larger amount of money in circulation than for several years past, as the complete restoration of confidence will undoubtedly set free considerable amounts hitherto hoarded in apprehension of danger. The panic has come and passed, and nobody is hurt, or now even frightened, and there is no longer occasion for extraordinary caution on the part of bankers and other custodian of funds.—[S. F. Chronicle, Sept. 16.

The War Question Settled.

A Cherry Creek, Nevada, dispatch of the 16th says: A messenger in from Spring Valley reports that a small party of Indians came in on Tuesday and surrendered the Indian who killed the white man to Mr. Gheen, the Indian Agent. Gheen turned the prisoner over to Lieut. Jaeger for safe keeping. A party of white men took the prisoner from Jaeger and hung him. The Indian confessed to the killing of Toland. The Indians are said to be satisfied, and it is thought that all trouble is over. The cavalry command of Col. Sumner are marching down Spring Valley, and will be at Cleveland's by noon to-morrow.

Fine Coaches.

The Telegraph Stage Company running between Caliente and Los Angeles, has received the first of eight elegant Concord coaches at Caliente They are said to be the handsomest and best ever brought to this coast.

—Mary Safford-Blake, in a letter from Salt Lake, says: "I met with a woman physician here who is doing a thriving practice. The specialty here in medical practice has always been entrusted to women. Now a class of 25 Mormon girls are studying medicine, preparatory to a more complete course."

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Silver Sprout.

Thursday last we took a lonely "up and up" ride to the above named well known mine. We had heard that late developments were of the most flattering character, and it is with real gratification that we are able to say from our own personal observation that it is certainly as promising a mine as we have seen in the country. It requires but a few words to explain the situation.

THE MAIN SHAFT

is down 97 feet. It is now in the same condition in which it was left two years ago, no work having been done on the mine since until this Summer. We gave an account of the fine prospect in this shaft at that time, and can only add that it contains a number of feet of water, from which the supply for drinking and domestic purposes is obtained for the mine. In order to tap this shaft at a lower level and to prospect the mine deeper, a tunnel was run this Summer, on contract by the present efficient foreman and miner, Martin Mee, striking the back wall of the ledge 160 feet from its mouth, and over twenty feet deeper than the bottom of the shaft, but about 30 feet further north on the line of the ledge. This tunnel shows the ledge to be

FOURTEEN FEET FROM WALL TO WALL,

these walls being hard granite and perfectly defined. On the first or foot wall is a seam of pay ore from twelve to sixteen inches in width, plainly exposed in an upraise for 26 feet in height, thence south through the air shaft about 30 feet to the original discovery in the shaft. On the west or hanging wall there is another streak of rich ore, in thickness and quality almost precisely like the first. This has been dug out to the depth of about eight feet below the level of the tunnel; being the lowest working in the mine, and for about twelve feet along the wall toward the shaft, the objective point of the present workings. The bottom of this working is twenty odd feet below the bottom of the shaft, where the same deposit was struck two years ago

THE LEDGE MATTER

between these two shafts of pay ore is composed of talc, clay, and several small streaks or deposits of inferior ore. The presumption is that these several streaks of pay ore will, at no great depth widen out or run together, taking the place of this talc and clay, and making one large vein. This is mere speculation, however. Evidently, though, the pay streaks are somewhat thicker at the bottom than at the highest points exposed, and it is equally clear that the walls are very much wider apart and

STILL WIDENING.

But it does not matter whether the two larger streaks come together, nor whether they grow thicker, so long as they produce as much splendid ore as they are now doing, for, together, they make a mine good enough, indeed, for anybody satisfied with a reasonable thing. The ore is of the class and taken altogether as it comes from either of these streaks will certainly run from two to three hundred dollars per ton. It is not a difficult thing, as near as we can judge, to sort considerable quantities that will run

ABOVE A THOUSAND DOLLARS.

But this is a matter to be demonstrated by working process, Superintendent Wingard being now engaged in sacking some thirty tons to be shipped to San Francisco for working. We are not disposed to say that we think the company would be fully justified in going to the expense of erecting a mill and tramway simply on but we are prepared to say, that there is ample justification for making more shafts and tunnels if they are not satisfied with this extremely flattering prospect. It is 117 feet to the bottom of the shaft and the ledge, as before stated, is fourteen feet from wall to wall, with a fine vein of rich ore lying next to each wall. It does seem as if there can be a doubt but it is a true vein cutting that lofty granite mountain, and such being the case, we believe that mine will pay to work thousands of feet deep. Good miners pronounce it the very best prospect they have ever seen in all Southern California.

Personal.

W. B. Daugherty, County Clerk elect, was in from Panamint this week for the purpose of filing his official bonds, which business was duly and satisfactorily consummated. Mr. Daugherty then returned to business at Panamint. Judge Arick, his defeated competitor, has gone to San Francisco, being called there by reason of the swindling operations of this Geo. M. Pinney, the latest great defaulter. Pinney was the nominal owner of considerable mining property at Panamint, Judge Arick being the company's agent, we believe.

Shooting Match.

"Little Fitzgerald" and Tom Hogan got into a political discussion out at Panamint a few days since, and what with the heat of the topic and some fighting whisky, got so warmed up they fell to shooting at each other with much more energy than execution. Eight shots were exchanged, but only one took effect, and that but slightly, Hogan being the recipient. The high contending powers then shook hands, and thenceforth everything was lovely and serene. This is the substance of information received from Mr. Daugherty.

Dance at Shepherd's.

Some of the young folk's "dropped in" at the Messrs. Shepherd's place down at George's Creek the other night and had a very nice time. As we wouldn't want Mrs. John, now temporarily at Oakland to feel jealous, we think it but right to say that it was bachelor James the young ladies went to see. Anyway, here is what "Participant" has to say about it: Last Saturday night a number of George's Creekers, together with a few from this place assembled at Messrs. Shepherd's residence, and had what we call a real jolly time. The number of guests probably did not exceed twenty, but they were alive, owing mostly to their kind reception by the hospitable proprietors. The supper was arranged under the superintendence of Mrs. Steward and we must say it was excellent. At least every one seemed to retain his appetite, both for the supper and the dance, as it was an irresistable temptation to those who could not withstand the forcible solicitations of the aforesaid proprietors. We all enjoyed ourselves, at least two of us did, and we all retired early (in the morning) sober and contented. PARTICIPANT.

New School House.

The residents of our neighboring school district, the Post or Milton district, are entitled to no little credit for the energy and liberality they have manifested in school matters. Taken as a whole the district is not a rich one, but they have always managed to maintain a good eight month's school, and have now just about finished a large and comfortable new school-house, all by contributions and all paid up with a trifling exception. The building is a 40x20 frame, ceiled inside with redwood, and is to be surmounted with a cupola and bell. This bell the officers and privates of Co. B. 12th U. S. Infantry, have volunteered to donate, Capt. Macgowan taking the lead in this creditable act. Mr. C. A. Walters, one of the Trustees of the district, has done very much towards the whole of this good work. Miss Carrie Whitcomb, who taught the same school last year, is in charge, and has had her school in operation for some weeks.

Moved In.

We are pleased to note the fact that Postmaster Rowley has moved into his fine new store, first, because it is a fine, comfortable store-room; secondly, because it is much more convenient to reach from this office. When finally completed the Postoffice boxes will be so arranged that the holders can reach them whether the main store is shut up or not. But Mr. Rowley is going to have a large and complete stock of general merchandise, stationery, candies, etc., and will always be found there or thereabouts. Independent of the fact that he will keep a good stock of goods and sell as cheap as anybody, Mr. Rowley is entitled to a large share of patronage to enable him to make up his losses by the fire and consequent partial suspension of business while waiting for this new building.

Some More Good Prospects.

Mr. Holt, of the Consolidated Virginia on Kearsarge Mountain, is preparing to ship a lot of high grade ore from some ledges on the north side of the mountain on Oak Creek. These are the same ledges upon which the irrepressible Jimmy Sharp has been operating at times for several years past, and out of which with common blacksmith fires and similar means he has smelted many a small bar of fine bullion. Jimmy is at work there now with a quite a force furnished by Mr. Holt, and in a general way we can state that the mines are developing most beautifully.

The Cause of Death.

Squire Walcott of Bishop Creek, held an inquest upon the body of the man found dead at Volkert's ranch, as mentioned by us last week. We have not seen a report of the inquest, but understand that it was the body of George Gibbens, a partner of Volkerts in the ranching business, and that the cause of death was heart disease. It seems that he had started to go to a neighbors, having previously taken some Pain Killer and Jamaica Ginger to allay a violent pain in the breast. While on the way he lay down to rest, wrapping a blanket about him, and then died.

Another Coso Incorporation.

The Lone Star and Eclipse Consolidated Mining Company, to operate in Darwin, has filed articles of incorporation. Capital $6.000.000 in shares of $100 each. Directors—J. F. Greenman, Charles Allenberg, James F. Hough, William T. Higgins and Paul Maroney. The principal place of business will be in San Francisco.

Freight Rates.

Agent Holstead, at Caliente, writes us that the Cerro Gordo Freighting Company have reduced freight rates from San Francisco to Independence to four and one-quarter cents per pound. We presume a proportionate reduction is made to other points in this section. The previous charge to this place was five cents a pound.

Fine Grapes.

This print shop is under obligations to Thos. Volkert of Volkert's Ranch, for a box of splendid grapes, comprising no less than ten different varieties. Mr. Volkert will have not less than eight acres of vines in bearing in another year and will then engage extensively in wine making.

For Panamint.

Friend John A. Lank starts to-day for Panamint for a short pasear, and to look after some business for his partner, Mr. Mairs. He says he has been "running with the cows now for ten years, and I want a little change of air."

Judge Hannah's Circular Address.

Following is a copy of Judge Hannah's circular issued last week. It was not practicable for us to publish it at the same time with Mr. Gregg's reply, but do so now and without further remark:

To the Voters of Inyo County:—Four years ago you did me the honor of conferring upon me the high and responsible duties of Judge of your County Court. I have endeavored to the best of my ability to honestly, faithfully and impartially discharge those duties; if I have failed in any particular, it has been an honest error It is said by some of my opponents that I committed a serious and grievous wrong in admitting one Ashim to bail. If in this, a judicial act, I was governed by the law, then if any error has been committed it is the fault of the law. I am not amenable and should not be held responsible. But, believing that I was right in this official act, and knowing that I was governed by the law, for the information of my fellow-citizens, I propose to cite them to the law, and let a thinking and unbiased people pass in judgment my ruling in the matter.

In considering this matter, the first question that naturally arises (Ashim being charged with murder in the first degree), would be: "Is a person accused of this crime bailable?" Section 1270, page 140, of the Penal Code provides that "A defendant charged with an offense punishable with death, cannot be admitted to bail when the proof of his guilt is evident, or the presumption thereof great. The finding of an indictment does not add to the strenght of the proof, or the presumption to be drawn therefrom." Section 190 of said Code provides that "Every person guilty of murder in the first degree shall suffer death." Therefore, even under these apparent prohibitory statutes, it would follow that bail was only forbidden under prohibitory statutes, it would follow that bail was only forbidden under a prima facie case of guilty of murder in the first degree, while in fact the guilt of the accused could only be determined by a verdict of a jury of his countrymen—for the law in its wisdom and mercy looks upon every person accused of a crime as innocent until he is proven guilty. It was under this view of the case and this construction of the law that the Supreme Court of the State, in the case of the People vs. Smith, charged with murder in the first degree, admitted the prisoner to bail in the sum of $10,000. (See 1st Cal., p. 9.) The same Court admitted McLaughlin to bail in the sum of $10,000 after the defendant had been indicted and tried for murder in the first degree—he awaiting a second trial, the first jury having failed to agree (See 41st Cal., p. 420; People vs. McLaughlin.) In fact, under Section 190, above referred to, the matter of bail in a capital offense, that is one punishable with death, the question appealed directly to the sound discretion of the Court or Judge to whom the application was made. This Section 190 in 1873-4 was so amended as to read "That every person guilty of murder in the first degree shall suffer death, or confinement in the State Prison for life, at the discretion of the jury trying the same; or, upon a plea of guilty the Court shall determin the same." The effect of this law was simply to wipe out, as it were, the capital punishment of death for murder in the first degree, and place it on the same footing, so far as bail was concerned, as other and ordinary felonies admitting to bail before conviction as a matter of right, as provided for in Section 1271 of the Penal Code. Thus making the punishment assessed by jury or Court upon conviction or plea of guilty, to determine the degree, which could only be done upon the final trial. If any other view were to be taken of the question then would the officer to whom application for bail was made be forced to determine and divine that the jury or court who should, in the future, try the case would affix the death penalty—which would be an absurdity too great to be considered for a moment.

Section 1272 Penal Code, provides that "After conviction for an offense not punishable with death, a defendant who has appealed may be admitted to bail." Under this section would it be claimed for an instant that Cotton, convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of one Norton and sentenced to imprisonment for life, a few days since at Santa Barbara, would or could be refused bail upon proper application during the pending of his appeal to the higher court? In the case of the People vs McVey, charged with killing one Hansen in San Francisco, the evidence showed that it was a cool and deliberate murder, and yet the defendant was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000, and no objection was made. The point has become so well settled in the State that lawyers of ordinary intelligence no longer question its correctness.

The proposition as put by my opponents is, under the amended Code, Section 190, approved March 28, 1874, "A person accused of murder in the first degree, the punishment of which is death or imprisonment for life, is not bailable before conviction and while the law presumes him innocent; but under Section 1272, he having been convicted and appealed to a higher court, although a condemned felon by his peers, the right of bail is guaranteed to him." A proposition that is totally untenable and unreasonable.

Thus, fellow-citizens, I have quoted to you the law bearing upon and governing this question, without any deductions of my own, leaving it to you to form the conclusion as to whether my course was correct or not. Under this law, and with these views I admitted Ashim to bail in the sum of $15,000, an amount greatly in excess of that which has been established as a rule by all other courts.

I am again a candidate for the same position, and if in the exercise of the elective franchise, you can in good conscience, cast your ballot for me, I shall endeavor to serve you in the future as in the past—honestly faithfully and impartially.

Truly yours, JOHN A. HANNAH.

At Work.

Addis, the photographer, has been established in the upstairs of this office, during the past week and is doing quite a fair business in picture taking. His stay will not extend beyond the close of the coming week, so all parties desiring good pictures can govern themselves accordingly.

Law Cards.

We would call attention to the respective law cards of Messrs. Bennett and Gregg, each, since the late dissolution holding out separately, although, for the time being, Mr. Gregg will be found at Mr. Bennett's office as heretofore.

Another Furnace for Daswin.

We have it from good authority that the machinery for a furnace for the Defiance company, Darwin, is now en route for that place.

Running allRight.

At last accounts the Broder-Moffatt furdace, Pine Mountain, was running splendidly. Mr. F. F. Thomas, who has had great experience in Cerro Gordo, is in charge.

—"Any letters for Mike Howe?" asked an individual of a clerk at a Postoffice window. "No letters for anybody's cow."

The Guibord Case—Ultramontanism in America.

[From The S. F. Chronicle.]

Five years ago last November Joseph Guibord of Montreal, one of the Directors of the Canadian Institute, departed this life, and vexations questions of civil and ecclesiastical law have up to this time kept him out of his grave The case of Guibord is a very peculiar one. It may be not improperly characterized as a typical case of Vaticanism. The Canadian institute is a literary and scientific society, supplied with a library, reading-room and cabinets for the use of its members. M. Guibord was a communicant of the Roman Catholic church, but being a scholar he was free from narrow bigotry. In his capacity as librarian he admitted into the library of the Institute all standard historical works, whatever might seem to be their bias in regard to theological issues. The Bishop of Montreal found in the library of the Institute certain works of high reputation in the literary world, such as "Gibbon's Decline and F li," "Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History," and other books not written from a Roman Catholic standpoint, and he demanded that these obnoxious volumes should be removed from the shelves. M. Guibord replied that the books were standard works; that they were a recognized part of English literature; that the books attacking them and replying to them from the Roman Catholic stand-point were also in the library, and that the Institute would be narrowed in its scope and deprived of all just claim to be regarded as a literary institution if it should suffer itself to be guided by such a policy as that recommended by the Bishop. The Bishop thereupon appealed to Rome. Rome sustained the Bishop, and issued a decree forbidding any good Catholic to belong to the Institute. The Bishop construed this decree as authorizing him to refuse the holy sacrament to dying members of the Institute, and to treat them as excommunicated persons. Guibord was at the time of his death a "good Catholic," and the owner of a lot in the Roman Catholic cemetery. But when his widow and friends proposed to bury him in the lot which he had purchased and paid for, the curate, M. Rousselot, acting under the instructions of the Bishop, refused to permit the sepulture. The widow sought redress in the courts, and finally the Judiciary Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council decided that "it would establish a dangerous precedent to admit that the respondents were bound to obey any or all orders their ecclesiastical superiors might give them, inasmuch as such an admission would invest the Bishop with a sort of moral dictatorship" fatal to the just and impartial administration of the law.

In accordance with this decison of the court of final resort, a writ of mandamus was issued commanding the respondents "to prepare or permit to be prepared a grave in that portion of the cemetery in which Roman Catholics that receive ecclesiastical burial are usually interred for the burial of the remains of Joseph Guibord."

But the ecclesiastical party seemed resolved to defy the civil power. M. Rousselot, representing the Bishop, published a letter in which he declared that the Church would not recognize "the right of the civil courts to intervene in questions which belong wholly to the ecclesiastical authority." M. Doutre, the lawyer who conducted the proceedings on behalf of the friends of Guibord, is himself a Catholic, though not an ultramontane. Meantime the body of Guibord lies, in a technical sense, unburied, and a local warfare is being waged to decide by force of arms whether his dust shall be laid in the ground which he bought and paid for, and whether the ecclesiastical power is in Canada superior to the civil law.

Concerning Panamint.

We have been shown a private letter from Capt. Dan. P. Bell, millwright of the Surprise Valley Mill and Water Company's 20 stamp mill at Panamint (which is now in active operation), to the agent of the Cast Steel Shoe and Die Company of this city. He writes: "Your steel shoes and dies are doing remarkably well, and will outwear at least five sets of iron. We have now run nearly three weeks on Wyoming ore, which is as hard as flint, yet the shoes and dies show scarcely any wear—not an eighth of an inch—and I believe the set will last at least eighteen months, if not longer. We have enough ore in sight in the Wyoming and Hemlock mines alone to keep the mill running steadily for one year, and I am satisfied more good ore will be found in both of these mines when they have greater depth. One thing I must say concerning our roasting and amalgamating, and I now speak from practical experience in the different parts of Nevada. What we have accomplished here with base ores has never before been done, and that is to start up a new mill and in three days time roast the ore to 96 per cent., amalgamate from 92 to 96½ per cent. and turn out bullion 992 fine without leaching the ores. This shows not only well for the mill and Stetefeldt furnace but for the district and puts the blush on all Panamint croakers and its enemies generally."—[S. F. Stock Report, Sept. 17.

—Theodore Tilton is writing a play—a five-act tragedy—one of the "Gerrasheous Heavings! All is lost! Ha! ha! ha!" kind; and Bessie Turner is writing a novel, one of the "But," murmured the maiden, "if thou dostest not thinkest, Adelbert, that it wert better for me if I havedest hade not" kind, and we don't care much now if the new trial comes off or not. With Bessie's new novel, "From Bed to Bed, or Asleep in the Dark," and Theodore's terrible tragedy, "Hung to the Wall, or a Tail of a Night Shirt," the American people can struggle through the Winter about as patiently as they worried through the Spring and Summer.

Mrs. Lincoln.

An attempt has been made to bring unpleasant notoriety upon Robert Lincoln with regard to the placing of his mother in an asylum for the insane. It has been strongly suggested that the confinement is an outrage and that she is perfectly sane. This is not borne out by recent facts, and the character of Mr. Lincoln, which does not need the unfortunate incidents in Mrs. Lincoln's life which are familiar to the world to support his course, is sufficient evidence that he only acted as he did when nothing else was possible. A well-informed correspondent says: "At the time she was placed in the institution at Batavia her insanity was very marked, though, as is usually the case, it was not apparent at all times. Since she has been under treatment she has shown some improvement, and it is thought probable she will be allowed to visit her sister at Springfield. Like all insane persons, she is very certain she is in full possession of her reason, and letters written by her to meddlesome persons in this city have led to the report that she is improperly restrained of her liberty. Robert Lincoln, it is said, has been unremitting in his attention. It would seem that the wife and son of Abraham Lincoln would be held almost sacred in this country; that they at least would be safe from slander.

Disagreeable Habits.

Nearly all the disagreeable habits which people take up come at first from mere accident or want of thought. They might easily be dropped, but they are persisted in until they become second nature. Stop and think before you allow yourself to form them. There are disagreeable habits of body like scowling, winking, twisting the mouth, biting the nails, continually picking at something, twirling a key or fumbling at a chain, drumming with the fingers, screwing and twisting a chair, or whatever you lay your hands on. Don't do any of these things. Learn to sit quietly like a—gentlemen I was going to say, but I am afraid even girls fall into such tricks sometimes. There are much worse habits than these, to be sure; but we are speaking only of those little things that are only annoying when they are persisted in. There are habits of speech, also, such as beginning every speech with, "you see," or "you know," "now-a," "I don't care," "tell ye what," "tell ye now;" indistinct utterance, sharp, nasal tones; avoid them all. Stop and think what you are going to say, and then let every word drop from your lips just as perfect as a new silver coin. Have a care about your way of sitting and standing and walking. Before you know it you will find that your habits have hardened into a coat of mail that cannot be got rid of without a terrible effort.—[Little Gorporal.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

NASBY ON INFLATION.

Present Status of the Crossroads Bank—The Trouble that Perkins Started.

[From The Toledo Blade.]

CONFEDRIT X ROADS, WICH IS IN THE STATE UV KENTUCKY, Aug. 11, 1875.

I have hed trouble enough with the unenlightened people uv these Corners for the past week to neerly drive me mad. Indeed, I shood hev bin in a loonatic asylum ere this hed I not bin sustained and soothed by an onlimited faith in the correctness of the doctrins uv the Ohio Democrisy ez regards money. And feelin that I waz assistin, in my humble way, in puttin them doctrins into practis I determined not to go mad but to persevere, even unto the end.

But the perverse people are doing their level best to drive me crazy, and I am not shoor but they will succeed. I bought a pair uv horses uv one uv them for $8,000, and paid him in our own munney. He thot he'd rather not tech it.

"When will this be redeemed?" he askt innocently.

"Any time you want it," I replied.

"In wat?" he retorted.

"In other notes onto the same bank," sez I.

"And how will you redeem them notes?" sez he.

"In just the same way," sez I.

"Then all there is uv it," sez he, "yoo go on takin up one note by givin another, and all of them without intrust nor nothin."

"That's it, eggsactly," sez I. "Yoo see, can't yoo, or are yoo a born ijeat? that money means faith. Now, ef the proud financial institootion in wich I am hed, ishoos its note, yoo must hev faith that it will pay, and so long az yoo hev that faith and everybody else hez that faith, so thet they take it for munney, yoo never want the money on it. So long as money is takin yoo don't want it redeemed, for it is good enuff, yoo see! Our money is made good by faith, and ez long ez it is sustained by faith it will go. When the notes you hev now wears out, come to us and we'll redeem them with new ones. But everybody must hev faith. Can't yoo see it? Everybody must hev faith! Faith in the ishoos of this bank uv ourn is necessary to its success and stability. Faith in our money is, az it ez in religion, the substance uv things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen, only more so. Wait till I get $8,000 from the printin offis, and take them for yoor horses and go your way. Hev faith."

Perkins, thet waz the farmer's name, took the money and went his way pondering ez he went. He walked down to Bascom's with deep lines uv thot onto his face, wich resolved itself into a expresshun uv stern determinashen ez he entered the door.

"Kin yoo sell me a barl uv whisky to-day—an entire barl?" sez he.

"Certinly," said G. W. smilingly. "Certinly, Mr. Perkins, its only worth $40 a gallon, or $1,680 per barl this mornin."

"I'll take a barl," sed Perkins.

"All rite," was G. W.'s response. "I'd as soon sell a barl to wunst ez by the single drink."

So G. W. and his wife and his oldest son, Jefferson Davis, rolled a barl into Perkinses wagon, and Perkins remarkt that he wanted to pay for thet likker on the spot. Bascom smiled pleasantly. There was nothing so pleasant, Perkins continyood, ez payin for things when yoo git em, ez it saved bookkeepin and vexashus troubles of all kinds.

"Give me pen, ink and paper, G. W.," sed this outrageous Perkins.

Nonplussed, Bascom did so mechanically, and Perkins his tongue out, ez people do at the Corners when they attempt writin, and after thirty minnets of intense labor, with swet a running from his brow fearful, he handed Bascom the follerin dockeyment:

CONFEDRIT X RORDS, September 1.—I promise to pay G. W. Bascomb sixteen hundred and eighty dollars.

JEHIAL PERKINS.

"Wats this" askt the astonished Bascom, with an expreshen uv intense disgust usurpin the place of the smile.

"Pay for that likker," replied Perkins, calm ez a Joon mornin.

"But this ain't pay—its your promise to pay, and you ain't got time nor place fixed for payment—you ain't got no interest exprest, nor nothin. Wen do you perpose to pay it?"

"Never, G. W., never. Under the noo dispensashen, promises to pay is money. All you want is faith. So long ez you beleeve that that paper is money, wat do you want uv money? I hev bin figgerin this matter out in my intellek ever sence I hev bin takin your bank money. It's all the same. If I hev faith in yoor money, you must hev faith in mine. When this note wears out, come to me and I will write you a new one. And don't keep it too long—I shall take pleasure in writing you notes often, so that they will alluz be new and pleasant to look at. How pleasant it is, Bascom, to pay ez you go! How much better I feel to pay on the nale, and how much better you must feel to hev yoor cash wen yoo deliver yoor goods."

And Perkins drove off with the likker, lite-hearted, leavin Bascom dumfounded in the door uv the grosery, gaspin wi astonishment and blind with rage.

Perkins didn't stop with a barl uv likker. He got a pare uv pegged boots for $80, and pade for em in the same way, and a kag uv nails, and two soots uv close, and calico dresses for his wife and dawters, and a box uv paper collars and a neck-tie, things he had never dreemed uv hevin before, and he got so eggscited at his success in finanseerin that he went home drunk ez a biled owl.

But the misery uv all this is, every cuss within 5 miles, seein Perkinses success, is doin the same thing, and an immense volyoom uv wat I may call indivijile currency is afloat. And they is seriously thretnin to vote to hev the corprashen take the stuff for taxes! The idee uv takin money for taxes that ain't printed, and that heznt got no President and Casheer and Board uv Direkters! There is sich a thing as carrying this thing too fur.

But prosperity continoos her stimulatin rain. We ishood thirty thousand dollars uv our money last week, and the benefishle effeck is visible. Wheat is now $12 a bushel; licker $1 a drink, plain, and $1 50 to them ez take sugar in theirn; pegged boots is $80; cotton sox $4, and town lots—well, any price that one chooses to ask for em. The diggin uv cellars is going on satisfactorily, ez is anything else that we kin pay for in our own money. But I tremble with apprehensions. Wat will happen when they cum to want the lumber and nales and glass, and other things wich hev to cum from Looisville? That's the gost that hants me.

PETROLEUM V. NASBY,

President uv the Onlimited Trust and Confidence Company.

P. S.—The most wonderful effeck uv inflashen wuz showd this mornin on Dekin Program. The old saint made his appearance at the Bank in a noo soot uv cloze wich Mirandy, his dawter, got for him. The old man tried to keep up under it, but finelly broke down. He refoozed to stay in his seet unless we'd take off the coat, pull off his boots, and "them d—d stockins," ez he expressed it, and drip some tobacker joose over his bozm. Ae swore that he'd ruther resine his posishen than to wear boots and stocktns in the Summer time, and ez for paper collars he'd wear none uv em. He would hev gone insane ef we hed'nt stript him and got him back to his normal style. Wat a difference there is in men! Now I took to stockins when I got to be President of this Bank ez naterally ez tho I hed alluz wore em. But I hev moved in better society than the Deekin hez. He is trooly a child uv Nacher.

Power of the Electric Light.

The most powerful artificial light at present in existence is that employed for the great light-house on Souter Point, on the coast of England, near the mouth of the Tyne. On both banks of this river there are an immense number of manufactories of all kinds, the smoke from which, under the influence of the west wind, seriously obstructs the approaches from the sea. Fogs at this part of the coast are also frequent; and the problem of light-house illumination required that through any slight fog or haze, it having been generally acknowledged that not even the sunlight can penetrate an ordinary fog. The electric light established at Souter Point is considered to be equal in power to 800,000 standard candles, being eight times as powerful as the best American fixed lights. The electric spark passes between slender pencils of carbon, which are themselves consumed at the rate of about one inch per hour. The electric current is generated by two of Professor Holmes' patent rotary magnete-electric machines, driven by steam engines of six-horse power. The number of revolutions made by each machine is 400 per minute, and 12,800 sparks pass per minute when both machines are at work. These sparks are, of course, formed so rapidly that the eye does not separate them, and the result is, an intense beam of light, so dazzling that the eye of a person within the lantern cannot rest upon them for an instant without intense pain. As observed from a distance of several miles, this light is so bright as to cast a well defined shadow upon the deck of a vessel.

—A newly arrived family was lately gazing at a shop-window in Rockport, Ills. Little girl—"Oh, mamma, is that a 'en?" Mamma—"No, my child, that is a howl." Father—"No, my wife and daughter, that is not a 'en nor a howl, but it a beagle, the hemblem of this blarsted country."

Progress at the Palace Hotel.

[From The S. F. Post, September 16.]

The notice which has been posted at the main entrance of the Palace Hotel for many weeks past, "visitors positively not admitted," no longer carries much force with it, for the halls, galleries and court are daily thronged with a curious crowd who have come to gaze open-mouthed at the wonders of the gigantic structure. Yesterday afternoon a Post reporter visited the caravansary, and like all who enter here, had his gaze at once fixed by the glass dome which surmounts the grand court. The painters were buily at work upon hanging scaffolds which were suspended from beams thrown out from the upper gallery. They were tinting the railings and outer walls a delicate pink and though they were working only on a level with the fifth story, their elevation was so great that they appeared more like small boys than grown up men. The standing lights which are placed above all sides of the court, and in every gallery, are of highly polished brass and bronze, and add much to the elegant appearance of the place. Most of them are still under cover. The glaziers are now busily at work putting in heavy sheets of plate glass, about two feet in width, in the frames which surmount all the railings and banisters in the building. In the grand dining hall workmen are engaged in polishing the tops of the many heavy tables which are piled up on every side. The magnificent chandeliers are all under cover, to protect them from damage from the dust. On the floor of the grand court a little army of artisans is at work making chests, tables and shutters. Many suites of rooms were thrown open yesterday, and their appearance is luxurious in the extreme. The beds and bedding have not yet been placed in them, but the carpets and all other appointments are in place. The exact day of the opening cannot at the present time be stated. Many suites, we are told, have been engaged, and the hotel will open with a full quota of guests. It is reported that Mr. Friedlander, the grain king, has engaged seventeen rooms, including a private dining room. He will be attended by his own private servants. It is also reported that Mr. Sharon has tendered to Mrs. Ralston a suite of seven rooms, with private servants, a private coach and coachman so long as she may see fit to use them.

—There is a grape vine in the Santa Cruz Canyon which knocks the spots out of the Santa Barbara arrangement. So says The Daily News. The main stem is two feet in diameter, and is about forty feet before its arms, that extend a thousand feet either way, branch out. It was planted by the Jesuits.

—Perhaps it was a typographical error. But a St. Louis paper says Judge Jones sentenced Morgan to be hung by the week until dead. Did the Judge expect him to hang like a hired man?

St. Nicholas for October.

This number closes the second volume of this charming magazine, and brings to its readers some thirty interesting articles, the majority of them beautifully illustrated. There is a "Crooked Story" by "Jack-in-the-Pulpit," wherein every word, when read aloud, has the right sound—all are correctly spelled, and yet scarce one is spelled right as here used. It will afford an interesting study for the little ones to spell the words as the sense demands in the story:

A rite suite little buoy, the sun of a grate kernel, with a rough about his neck, flue up the road swift as eh dear. After a thyme he had stopped at a gnu house and wrung the belle. His tow hurt hymn and he kneaded wrest. He was two tired to raze his fare, pail face. A feint mown of pane rows from his lips.

The made who herd the belle was about to pair a pare, but she through it down and ran with awl her mite, four fear her geessed wood knot weight.

"Know," he side. "I am feint two thee corps."

She boar hymn in her alms, as she aught, to a rheum ware he mite bee quiet, gave him bred and meet, held cent under his knows, tied his choler, rapped him warmly, gave him some sweet drachm from a viol, till at last he went fourth hail as a young hoarse. His eyes shown, his cheek was as read as a flour, and he gambled a hole our.

The Bissinger Case.

Frequent allusions have been made to the Bissinger case, which like that of Charlie Ross, in one particular, is one where the law actually protects instead of punishes the guilty. The case in brief is this: Bissinger, a saloon-keeper living at Reading, Pennsylvania, had a wife and three children, but also a mistress, of whom he thought more than all the others, offered his wife $2,000 and two of the children if she would go away and leave him to enjoy life with the mistress. The poor woman was so worked up by the heartless proposition and desertion that her mind became unbalanced, and taking her three children, drowned herself and them in the canal. The people were so enraged at her heartless scoundrel of a husband, who at once began a new life with the mistress, his $2,000 safe in his pocket, that it was all the officers of the law could do to protect him from lynch law during the funeral of his murdered wife and children. It was murder, and of the blackest dye, but of course it is beyond the reach of law.

Terrible Disasters in Texas.

The papers are full of accounts of the appaling disasters occasioned in Texas by flood during the equinoctial storm. Matagordo was all swept away but two houses. The town of Cedar Lake was entirely destroyed and every soul is reported drowned. The village of East Bay, containing 28 persons, only five are left alive, every house being carried away. Parties who escaped from Indianola, and who were there during the terrible cyclone, confirm even the most extravagant reports of the destruction of life and property in that town. Out of 300 houses only three were left standing. The water was driven through the city at 15 miles an hour, covering the plain in the rear of the city ten miles to the depth of seven feet. Over 400 lives have been lost in that vicinity. On the morning after the flood had subsided a party of Mexicans were seen cutting off the fingers and hands of the drowned women and men for the sake of the jewelry. A party of citizens rallied and went in pursuit. They killed five Mexicans.

The Bank.

The syndicate of the Bank of California met September 25, and organized by the election of Wm. Sharon President of the Bank of California, and R. H. Lloyd, Secretary. Executive Committee, Jas. R. Keene, Chas. Mayne, R. F. Morrow, D. O. Mills and R. H. Lloyd. An assesement of 20 per cent. was levied on subscription to the guarantee fund, amounting in round numbers to $1,500,000. This with the cash previously on hand will give between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 to open with. The bank will open either to-day or early next week.

Found Guilty.

Westervelt, on trial in Philadelphia in the famous Charley Ross case, has been pronounced guilty on the three last counts by the jury. He wept like a child when the foreman of the jury stated the verdict. The two first counts on which the prisoner is acquitted charge a participation in the actual abduction of Charley Ross. The last three on which he is convicted charge a conspiracy to conceal a guilty knowledge. Nothing has come to light as yet regarding the actual whereabouts or fate of the child.

MIGRATORY STOCK.

We have been told that there is quite a large amount of stock in this county, brought here for pasturage from other counties, upon which no taxes have been assessed or collected. Some place the cash value of such unassessed migratory stock, mostly sheep, as high as $200,000. Those with whom we talked in regard to this matter seem to think it is the business of the Board of Supervisors to see to the collection of this migratory tax from the counties where this stock was originally assessed, the presumption being that it was so assessed before it came into this county. We do not see that the Board of Supervisors have, directly, anything to with it.

According to the act approved March 16, 1874, to regulate the assessment of migratory herds of stock, and to provide for the equitable distribution of the taxes derived therefrom, it is the duty of every County Assessor to ascertain, under oath, of the stock-owner whether said stock-owner proposes to remove his stock or any portion thereof to another county for pasturage. Should such be the intention, the number and kind, etc., of the stock to be removed must be noted on the Assessment Roll and a copy of the same must, within ten days after the assessment, be transmitted to the County Treasurer of the county to which the stock is to be taken, and duly entered upon a book provided for the purpose. All taxes collected on such stock is to be equally divided between the county where the assessment is made and the county to which it is sent for pasturage.

The County Treasurer of the latter county on the first Monday of the succeeding February must from the list in his possession make a demand against the Treasurer of the county from which the stock came for one-half the taxes, which said Treasurer must transmit as provided for by law.

So far, it will be seen that the time has not yet arrived for collecting our share of the tax on this migratory stock, supposing it all to have been assessed where it originally came from, and accounted for to our Treasurer according to law.

Section 8 of this act makes it the duty of the Assessor to examine the roll of migratory stock on the Treasurer's book, and if he finds that there is migratory stock in his county not on said roll, he must proceed at once to assess it at the full cash value, and if he finds that the stock has already been assessed in another county, even if the taxes have been already paid in such county, it shall be no defense to bar the collection of the full tax in the county where found, unless it be proved that the owner had made the proper return originally, and that it was the fault of the Assessor in not transmitting the proper statement.

Any person driving stock to another county for pasturage without making the proper statement to the Assessor of the county from which the stock is to be removed, is liable to a fine of $500, collectable in the county to which the stock is sent for pasturage. The suit for the collection of such may be entered by the District Attorney upon information given by any responsible citizen cognizant of the fact that there is unassessed stock in the county. It is thus made the duty of citizens as well as officers to keep an eye on transient stockmen.

But "any officer who shall fail, neglect or refuse to perform the duties required of him by this act shall be fined in a sum not less than $50 or more than $500 dollars." (Sec. 10.)

We have no reason to suppose there has been any neglect of duty on the part of any of our officers in relation to unassessed or uncollected taxes upon migratory stock in this county. Any person believing he has knowledge of unassessed stock can easily ascertain whether his suspicions are correct by reference to the Assessment Roll of migratory stock in the hands of the Treasurer, and through the District Attorney, can inaugurate a suit for its collection, should the list of the stock not be found upon that roll.

Tin Excitement.

We learn that the residents of Lida and vicinity have been considerably agitated recently by a reported discovery of large deposits of tin ore somewhere in that neighborhood. Some of the specimens have been sent out for assay, and expectation is on the tip-toe for the assay.—[Borax Miner, Sept. 25.

Taxes.

The State Board of Equalization, on September 25, made the levy of the State taxes for the year 1875-6, and fixed the rate at 60 cents and 5 mills on each $100 valuation. The total assessed value of property in the State this year is $617,964,560. The total amount required by the statute for this year to be raised is $3,066,000.

—A lady's dress, alleged to be 240 years old, is one of the curiosities of Los Angeles.

GOOD AMENDMENTS.

It seems to be settled that the proposition for a Constitutional Convention voted upon at our late election has been lost. It received a small majority of the votes actually cast, but not a majority of the total vote, which is necessary for its adoption. This will be plainer when we state that a large proportion of the voters failed to vote either for or against it, and all such count in favor of the negative. A similar proposition was voted upon in New Jersey in the election held last month, and was carried, notwithstanding the Catholic vote was cast almost solid against four of the proposed amendments—one forbidding State appropriations in favor of societies, associations, or corporations; another guaranteeing a thorough system of free schools, and two others having a similar bearing. That denomination is forcing these important issues, in one shape another into the politics of the country, and by so doing, are going to force issues that ought and will ruin the party that is lending its powers to such narrow, anti-democratic, anti-republican, ruinous policy. If the Catholics are to have a division of public school moneys with which to support their own sectarian schools, then the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and every other denomination and ism can claim and will have an equal right to their respective shares, and as a matter of course, our noble free schools become things of the past. The intelligent, educated American people, once awakened to the danger of these sectarian enslaughts, will move, one of these days, with such vim and effect as to utterly astonish and overwhelm the narrow minded bigots who cannot rest satisfied under absolute and prefectly untrammeled religious liberty without going deliberately to work to tear down the very power to which they are alone indebted for that liberty.

However, we only intended to call attention to the changes even benighted New Jersey has decided should be made to its fundamental laws: No city or town shall make any loan of money or credit to individuals or corporations; neither the State nor any municipality shall make any donation of land or appropriation of money for the use of any society, association, or corporation; members of the Legislature shall receive, instead of a per diem salary, the sum of $500 for the entire time for which they were elected, with no other emolument of any kind whatever; the Legislature shall provide for a thorough system of free public schools for all the children of the State; property shall be assessed for taxes under general laws, and by uniform rules, according to its true value; the Governor shall have the power to veto parts of an appropriation bill while approving others; a large amount of trivial special legislation is to be covered by general laws.

These are the principal amendments, and their excellence is so obvious as to need little comment. A great curse to any State is a long session of the Legislature; but when a member receives just as much for sitting 30 days as he does for sitting 90, the inclination towards industry is greatly increased. If we could confine the average legislature to repealing the bad laws of its predecessors and to passing necessary appropriation bills, we should take a long step toward the millenium. Not a word need be said in favor of giving the Governor power to veto an item of the appropriation bill without killing the whole document. The lack of such a provision is one of the strongest protections of jobbers and thieves.

Germany at the Centennial.

The whole space allotted to Germany at the Philadelphia Fair next year, has been taken for the exhibition of the arts and manufactures of that country. As an example of the magnitude of some of her manufactories to be represented, Krupp, the famous manufacturer of ordnance, has notified the Government that he will charter a steamship for the express transportation of his articles, some pieces of which will alone weigh fifty-five tons. Over 800 exhibitors will be represented in the Art Department of the same great nation.

Revenue Matters.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has recommended a consolidation of the Fourth and Fifth Internal Revenue Districts of this State, and recommends as Collector of the consolidated District Collector Frost now of the Fourth District. Frederick W. May has been appointed Revenue Gauger for the First California District.

An Ex-Priest Mobbed.

Ex-Roman Catholic Priest Gerderman lectured in Washington, September 16, on the Roman Church and his experience in it. At the close of it he was followed to the cars by a mob of about one thousand, who beat away the officers, and beat and bruised him somewhat.

Professor Carr Sustained by the Turners.

The following correspondence has been published in The San Francisco Abend Post, which says: "As is known, The Abend Post is the organ of the Turners of this coast, and therefore we accept the duty to publish the following as requested by the Turners. We add that we prefer unconditionally, Professor Carr as between him and Fitzgerald, if the contest is between these two alone:"

SAN FRANCISCO, September 10, 1875.

To the Editor of The San Francisco Abend Post—Dear Sir: In obedience to a resolution of the officers of the Pacific Turn Bezirk we request you to publish the inclosed letter in the columns of your paper and to make acquainted thereby the Turners as well as the German public in general with the ideas of Professor Carr.

We have received answers to our questions from all three candidates, from which the Board of Officers have, after mature deliberation, considered the following reply the best, most comprehensive and satisfactory, and now intend to work with all the force in our power for the election of Mr. Carr as "State Superintendent of Paublic Instruction."

Requesting you to sustain us in this work, we remain, respectfully,

M. LICHTENSTEIN, First Speaker.
GUSTAV RIETZKE, Sec. Pacific Turn Bezirk.

OAKLAND, August 18, 1875.

Mr. M. Lichtenstein, First Speaker of the Pacific Turn Bezirk—I have received your letter, and in reply I have to state that, having never resided in San Francisco, I am not so well informed as I wish in regard to the details of its school circumstances, or special impediments which stand in the way of their development. I am from all my heart in favor of the Cosmopolitan schools, and was one of the first college Professors who advocated the introduction of the German language as a compensation for the Greek in our high schools. I hope that in this the public education will, with the aid of our German fellow-citizens, be treated with the same profoundness, and the same consideration of its practical application as it is done in Europe. My distinguished friends, Hon. Carl Schurz and Edward Salamon, ex-Governor of Wisconsin, became officially acquainted with my efforts in this direction.

A "healthy spirit in a healthy body" is one of the fundamental maxims in our education, whereto physical cultivation is just as essential as the mental.

I am of the opinion that the text-books should be less amassed, and the bodily (gymnastic) cultivation increased with a reasonable mental development, in order to create thereby healthy human beings, instead of a race of men who suffer from mental and bodily dyspepsia. The murder of innocents will last until the common sense of the people and the knowledge of the biological laws which at present are almost exclusively confined to the profession of physicians, will be applied with more stress to the subject in question.

I not only desire that the treasures of advance thinking and the rich mines of scientific lore which are contained in the German language should be shared by the majority of our fellow-citizens, or that gymnastical instructions should be given in our schools, but I am also in favor of establishing schools, in which the gymnastics of the plow and the plane can be acquired in an intelligent way.

I wish further that our children may be taught the duties and responsibilities of American citizenship, in order that they may learn how labor is honest and laziness contemptible, and how the grave question which stares at us, how to earn our livelihood in a respectable way, can be solved. These theories I have advocated with my tongue and pen through life which has been exclusively devoted to education, and I shall continue to do so, at whatever position of life I should come. With great respect, yours, EZRA S. CARR.

Location of the Lick Observatory

The site for the observatory and telescope—one of the grandest enterprises contemplated by the Lick trust—has been decided upon by Mr. Lick and his new Board of Trustees. The point selected is the summit of Mount Hamilton, in Santa Clara county. The mountain is situated some twenty miles east of the city of San Jose, and its base is now reached by several good roads. As a condition to the selection Mr. Lick asks the county of Santa Clara to construct a first class carriage road to the summit of the mountain, and he expresses his willingness to take bonds of the county, and advance money for the purpose, if necessary, to facilitate the work. The altitude of Mount Hamilton is 4,448 feet, and the scenery from the summit is represented as grand and picturesque, while the fact that its apex is above the reach of fogs renders it peculiarly adapted to astronomical observations. Prof. Whitney states that from its summit a broader scope of vision can be obtained than from any other peak in the State. The San Jose papers cordially indorse Mr. Lick's proposition, and if they reflect the local sentiment there is no doubt but the proposed condition will be promptly complied with. The donation for the observatory is $800,000, out of which the observatory will be maintained with a corps of astronomers and engineers. Its accessibility to San Francisco is an important point gained in the selection of the site to the people of the city and the traveling public.—[S. F. Post, Sept. 18.

New Publications.

The Eureka Pictorial Advertiser, S. Ashim & Brother proprietors, is one of the latest Eureka publications. It contains any amount of funny items, and also some substantial truths, as for instance when it calls attention to the mammoth stock of this old firm.—[Eureka Sentinel, Sept. 23.

A Notable Libel Suit.

The Call and Bulletin have commenced a libel suit for $25,000 damages against The Alta on account of alleged misrepresentations of the latter regarding the personal character and acts of the proprietors, particularly Simonton, of The Call and Bulletin, all growing out of the Bank affairs and death of Ralston. By the way it is a little curious: Nearly all the papers on the Coast lay Ralston's death at the door of the Call and Bulletin, accusing them of hounding him to suicide, and yet every one of them agree with the Coroner's jury that his death was wholly accidental.

Marshall Robinson, publisher of The Carson Appeal, has lost his only child.

A special to The Cincinnati Commercial from Fort Wayne, Indiana, says that for some time past the young children attending the Jefferson Street Protestant and the St. Paul German Catholic schools, have been quarreling, which resulted in a number of Roman Catholic scholars attacking a boy named Hartman, aged 10, who was kicked, stoned and beaten in a horrible manner. A large hole was knocked in his head between his eyes, which will probably cause his death. Much feeling is said to exist there against the Catholics, who are charged with upholdidg their children in the quarrel, which is attributed to the bitter discussion of the school question.

Terrible Outrage and Retribution.

A Cincinnati dispatch dated September 24, to The S. F. Ledger, is to this effect:

A special dispatch to The Gazette from Belle Fontaine says, Mrs. Schell, wife of the man arrested yesterday for the murder of Miss Laughlin near Belle Centre, on Wednesday, was arrested and testified before the Coroner that her husband had told her he intended to criminally assault Miss Laughlin and kill her aftewards; that their ride on Wednesday was planned for that purpose and that her husband threatened to kill her if she followed him when he went into the bushes with Miss Laughlin. She says he returned to the wagon in about two hours, stating that Miss Laughlin fought so hard he did not succeed in assaulting her, although after he had stabbed her she said: "Don't kill me, I won't resist any more;" but he feared she would tell and so he killed her, threatening to kill his wife if she told. Mrs. Shell testified to other crimes committed by her husband. The affair causes the most intense excitement. Business is suspended, and it is reported that the citizens of the surrounding country are coming to Bellfontaine to-night, determined to lynch Schell.

LATER.—About 300 men attacked the jail at Bellefontaine about half past 12 o'clock this morning and battered down the doors and dragged Schell out and hanged him to a tree. The guards made no resistance. Schell protested his innocence of the crime.

The Indian War in Nevada.

Major Dennis, of The Eureka Sentinel, who was one of the first to march with his company to the relief of the beleagured settlers, thinks that there was some grounds for the fright after all. Here is what he says about it in a late issue of his paper:

That the Indians were preparing for an outbreak, we do not entertain a doubt, and we are fully convinced that the killing of Toland saved the lives of a large number of settlers by raising the alarm and causing them to take such measures for their protection as to thwart the plans of their enemy, and to convince them of their inability to wage even a temporarily successful warfare against the whites. Our opinion in this respect is based upon personal observation and the statements of reliable persons, residents of the vicinity of the recent troubles, made to us during our recent visit to the eastern border of the State. Time and space will not permit us in this article, but in our next issue we propose to relate a number of circumstances, which will prove conclusively, at least, that the recent excitement was not altogether a "scare," but that the people had sufficient cause for alarm and acted as any sensible persons would have done under the circumstances, in taking precautions for the safety of themselves and families.

The Fast Mail Trains.

Arrangements are being perfected for a fast mail train across the continent. It has already been perfected between New York and Chicago, and the time reduced twelve hours. The Postmaster-General designs extending the fast mail service through to San Francisco as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed. The time now consumed for mail transportation is seven days from New York. Under the new contract it is proposed to reduce the time to four days, which is said to be quite practicable. This is indeed annihilating time and distance.

The Cavalry.

A special train last Wednesday evening conveying forty-six soldiers, sixty-six horse, and twenty mules with munitions, forage, etc., passed Elko on its way eastward. The troops are Company I, 1st U. S. Cavalry, under Capt. C. C. C. Carr. They are from Fort Independence, and were on their way to Camp Halleck.—[Silver State, Sept. 25.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

On a Prospect.

Mr. Childs, our junior, is now paying Lone Pine, Darwin and that country generally, a sort of a business visit in connection with this paper. This, and other such trips, has been in contemplation for a long time but has not been practicable before on account of a press of duties at home. Now, between election times, comes a little lull, the first that has occurred for months, permitting such a withdrawal of our working force. In this connection we will remark, in reference to office posters recently issued, that it is our strong desire to enlarge THE INDEPENDENT and to otherwise make it as complete a newspaper as the country will possibly support. But the whole matter is contingent upon that last clause. We have worked for years unremittingly in the effort to give the people of Inyo county a paper they not be ashamed of. In addition to the labor of running the paper itself, this office has, during these years, done an amount of job work probably not excelled in quantity, whatever may be said of the quality, by any country office in the State. By far the greater portion of the whole of this work has been done by the proprietors themselves; but, notwithstanding all this we have not waxed rich nor anything of the kind. Every dollar that we have received has found a place directly and wholly in the business of the office, and there is room for many a dollar more, and our labors yet not be materially lightened. Up to the present time the county has not been in a populative or financial condition to support a larger and more costly paper to the publishers, than the one we have furnished. Now, we begin to think that it is. Should a fair and proper effort on our own part demonstrate this to be the fact, and in response, our subscription and advertising patronage be raised to what it should be, then we will make our implied promise good. But, independent of every consideration of this kind, we would commend our junior to the good offices of all our friends and patrons whenever he may meet them.

About a Mule.

About the beginning of this week George Hursch, out at Darwin, loaned a mule to some men who were coming in this direction looking for work. There were four in the party and the mule was required to pack their traps The men were to leave the mule at the Half-way House. Arriving there Keppler declined to receive the animal for some reason, whereupon the men concluded to bring him on to this place, but instead of coming directly on went across the river to see if they could get work at the Eclipse. Failing in that they were returning and had just reached the main road when they were met by Under Sheriff Moore and arrested on a warrant sworn out by Hursch on a charge of mule stealing, Hursch having come on after his mule according to previous arrangement, while the party was across the river, and seeing nothing of him or the party, jumped at the conclusion that here was a clear case of grand larceny, and one requiring immediate action. The Sheriff brought the men to town, but they soon satisfactorily established the fact that nothing was further from their intention than to steal the mule, or do anything wrong about it, so the charge was withdrawn, Hursch paying the Sheriff's costs.

Nearly a Fatal Accident.

Kerosene lamps and old guns "not loaded" have always been prolific sources for newspaper items, generally of the fatal accident order. The other day up at the Taboose Ranch, there happened one of the gun kind, but fortunately, not of the fatal sort. James Wallace, a lad of the right age to have a deep interest in guns, picked up a shot gun standing in the room and inquired if it was loaded. As it had been unused for about a year on account of one of the locks being out of order, John Hughes, to whom the inquiry was addressed, replied that he did not think it was loaded. Upon this young Wallace pulled back the hammer and let it go. There was an explosion, the charge from the "unloaded" gun passing between Hughes' arm and his body, but without doing any damage, thence into some bedding which was set afire and with difficulty extinguished. Tableau, but no moral to be deduced of any particular value.

Chinamen.

One Chinaman had another of his kind snatched up before Justice Hanson, at Darwin, the other day on a charge of incendiarism and money stealing, the "one Chinaman" being the party injured, as set-forth in his complaint. At last accounts the case had not been decided, but in the meantime a number of defendant's friends, living in Lone Pine, and who say the defendant never did such a thing in the world, but is a "welly good man," though he can't talk English, have interested themselves in his behalf, and have employed Mr. Gregg as counsel to go out and attend to the case.

Should be Stopped.

Certain small boys have, on several occasions amused themselves by throwing stones through the school house windows, covering the floor with sand and similar practices. It will save trouble and expense by stopping that kind of fun at once.

Bonds Filed.

Thos. Passmore, Sheriff elect, filed a $30,000 official bond this week—$20,000 of it as Collector, the remainder as Sheriff.

Notable Expedition.

Saturday last we received a call from Mr. J. M. Hutchings, of Yosemite fame. As everybody knows Mr. Hutchings was legislated out of house and home there in Yosemite, the place for which he has done so much to make famous. But his love of the sublime wonders of the mountains where his home has been for so many years, and desire that the world shall see them as he sees them, is quite as active to-day as of yore, and to this fact are we indebted for this visit. He and Prof. James, photographic artist, and a strong party, are taking views and collecting data for pictures and lectures through which the assembled world at the Centennial is to be made acquainted with the unapproachable grand sights and scenes of our own section of the great Sierras. The party, accompanied by Dr White, U. S. A., from the Post, has now gone to Mount Whitney and the Inyo Dome, the highest point in the United States south of Alaska. Prof. James will take a number of views from the extreme summit of this lofty pinacle. In the hoodlum vernacular, these will be "way up" pictures, from the highest point and over the grandest, most rugged reach and outlook of any pictures ever taken in the United States, or with photographic apparatus, probably in the world. We hope to hear of the eminent success of the expedition and also to receive some notes of their observations, on the return of the party, which will be within a day or two. Mr. Hutchings was one of the Inyo pioneers, having operated in the mines across the river from this place before he went to Yosemite some ten years ago.

Celebration.

Tuesday last, September 27th, was we are told, the anniversary of the close of "the eleven years war between Mexico and Spain, ending in the acknowledged independence of our sister republic." The event was duly celebrated by the Mexican residents in Lone Pine. The ceremonies, this time however, were not on a very elaborate scale, consisting principally in cannonading and dancing. We confess our ideas are a little mixed as to the particular event deemed worthy of celebration, the 27th of September, 1821, being the time when Iturbide became Regent of Mexico, and eight months later, Emperor, with the title of Augustin I. But Iturbide and his empire only lasted about ten months longer, namely to March 20, 1823, and it was then Mexico adopted a republican constitution. The war for independence had commenced thirteen years previously, but we haven't the least idea when it finally ended.

Indian Homesteads.

The Indians of the northern part of the valley are availing themselves of the privilege of entering lands under the Indian Homestead Law passed by Congress last March. Through their attorney, Mr. Sherwin, of Round Valley, some fifteen or sixteen of them filed on Homesteads this week. The amount of land taken by the several applicants varies from 40 to 160 acres, though the extent of tillable ground rarely exceeds from twenty to thirty acres on any one claim. Some of these Indians take great pride in their landed possessions and in improving them. One, who filed a year or two since under the old law, has very good buildings and will this year have some twenty tons of grain for market.

Lodging House.

The attention of such of our readers as may have occasion to sojourn temporarily at Lone Pine is directed to Mrs. Barry's advertisement of lodgings, she having refurnished the Lone Pine Hotel in most excellent style for that branch of business. It is the intention, we believe, to reopen this popular house as a hotel soon, but in the meantime, families and others can always count on obtaining good rooms and beds at the Lone Pine Hotel.

Took 'em, Sure Enough.

The boys of Co. D. at the Post needn't blow about their invincibility any more. One man and not a very young or pretty one either, took the last one of them, officers and all, the other day. In fact we are not sure but the ladies of the Post were included also. It was Prof. James who did this thing with his little camera—took the whole company while on parade.

Jewish New Year.

Some of our Jewish residents made due observance of the close of the old and beginning of the New Year, September 30 and October 1, respectively, the last being the beginning of the year 5636, Hebrew calendar.

Personal.

Mr. Rhine, of Harris & Rhine, has gone on a visit to Panamint, an event worthy of record since it has so rarely happened he has been absent from his desk.

Won't Do.

For some time past a plan has been mooted for a union school between Milton and this the Independence school district. It was supposed a sufficient fund could thereby be commanded to maintain a high grade school. The plan was to build a new and very complete school house at some point equally convenient for both places. We are satisfied the scheme is neither feasible or advisable, and if it has not already been dropped, as it likely has, might as well be.

Good Pictures.

Col. Addis has taken quite a large number of pictures here this week and we really think they are as good as the best San Francisco artists themselves can do. He will remain here but a few days longer, intending to reach Bishop Creek by Saturday next, where he will locate for a short time only, a fact that our Bishop Creek friends will please bear in mind.

Chance for Bargains.

The extensive establishment of C. & M. Cohn, Lone Pine, has been lately receiving still greater additions of fine goods of various kinds, so that altogether purchasers of every class may be sure they will find there the article they want whatever it may be, and at a satisfactory price.

Rather Large.

Having taken a view from the road of the new school house for Milton district, we concluded that our figures given last week as to its dimensions were rather large. Nevertheless, it is large enough for present needs, and a very good building withal.

For Bullion.

Connelly has sent a number of heavy teams over to Pine Mountain to load with bullion from Broder's furnace, which is a pronounced success. It will be a matter for congratulation when bullion teams are running regularly from that quarter.

Raffle for a Gun.

Thursday evening a hundred and twenty-dollar Remington shot gun was raffled off at the Aldine saloon. Joe. Fernbach was the lucky chap, taking the gun on a throw of forty-three.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. L. Case will preach his introductory sermon at the Court Room at 7 to morrow evening. On the following Sunday at Bishop Creek.

Silver Bullets.

The evening that the Eureka companies received their orders to march to the front, at the commencement of the late Indian unpleasantness, the National Guard had no fixed ammunition and a number of men were detailed to run bullets. They took their moulds to one of the furnaces of the Eureka Consolidated Company and run their death dealing missiles from the molten metal in the tanks, which contained a large percentage of silver. If the boys had had a brush with the redskins there might have been a handsome speculation for some milling company in working over the carcases of the defunct Goshutes.—[Eureka Sentinel.

The Bonanza.

Splendid developments continue to be made in the California mine. On the 1,550 foot level the winze, under crosscut No. 3, is down 46 feet in a body of ore which is almost pure silver. There are no indications of its giving out as yet, and it is impossible to tell how far it will be found to extend From present indications the boundaries of the bonanza are more extensive than was hoped by the most sanguine of mining experts.—[Virginia Chronicle, Sept. 14.

No More Assessments.

It was down in Georgia. There were three of them sitting lazily upon the platform, looking like cast-iron tobacco signs.

"Dere's goin' to be anoder 'publikin paper here purty soon, de fokes say," said one.

"An' we all niggers got to subscribe kase de 'lection is coming' nigh unto hand," said another.

"'Scribe nothin'!" said the third one, as he loosened up his cotton suspenders; "I'm done with this 'publikin business, I is. Didn't I hear the preacher readin' in de Bible 'bout de 'publikins? Why, when de Lord hisself was on de yearth dey used to set in de high places at de front gates of de towns, an' take up taxes an' 'sessments from de fokes. An' now dese 'publikins doin' the de same ting, don't yer see? Now dey don't git no more 'sessments outen dis nigger for no 'lections, scribin an' nothin'!"

Death in the Nursing Bottle.

The Scientific American furnishes a very timely and truthful article on the present extended use of the India rubber tube and mouth piece, connected with the nursing bottle. It holds that a prolific source of the present alarming infant mortaliy in New York (about 800 a week) is traceable to this cause. That journal says: "We might write a column on the dangers that reside in the milk, unless special care has been taken to obtain it fresh or by suitably diluting pure condensed milk. But this danger is well known, and our business at present is with the bottle, or rather its dirty tube, which should never be used more than once, then thrown away and a new one bought.

Even when new, these white tubes, impregnated as they are with oxide of zinc, are not unobjectionable; far worse are they when saturated with sour milk, gems of putrefaction, decay and disease. Some of these child-murdering Yankee inventions have reached Berlin, and have called forth the following from a practicing physician of that city:"

"The supposed advantage of these bottles consist in this, that they can be placed besides the infant in bed, while other bottles must be held in the hand all the time. What sensible mother or nurse would leave a child with a bottle without watching it? The danger of the bottle consists in this, that it is absolutely impossible to cleanse it. When sucked on, little particles of milk become attached to the tube and cork; these curdle and soon turn sour. If some of this deposit be placed under the microscope, we see innumerable bacterie, organic beings which indicate decomposition and decay. At every meal the child draws in thousands of these germs. The decomposing process acts upon what it finds it the mouth, œsophagus, and stomach; and the result is diarrhea, cholera infantum, etc. I will here expressly remark that the usual method of placing the apparatus in water, or merely rinsing it out with a stream of water, is in no way sufficient. Some dealers sell a suitable little wire brush with the bottle, but even this does not answer for the purpose, for the apparatus is not clean by a long way after drawing the brush through it several times; and who will take the trouble to clean it so thoroughly eight or ten times a day? How much time it would require! Another disadvantage is that the bottle is air tight, and a partial vacuum is formed, which renders sucking so difficult as to exhaust the child, and it stops before its hunger is satisfied. Hence, parents, ye who are compelled to feed your children with a bottle, throw away this apparatus, which can only bring destruction upon your children, and either select a bottle with a glass mouthpiece, which is filled from below, or take a large rubber mouthpiece, which is perforated by a small hole and can be drawn directly over the neck of the glass bottle. This large mouthpiece or nipple can readily be turned inside out and thoroughly cleaned and rubbed with dry salt."

Women Type Setters.

The New York Independent says: "A number of female compositors have been for a long time employed in the office of this paper, and our experience has been that a woman is absent from her case on the plea of sickness fewer days in a year than a man." For eight or ten years all the type setting for The Register has been done by women of only average health; and it is very seldom indeed that one of them is sick even for a day. Some are always at their posts. To find the most punctual ones absent would surprise us almost as much as to miss the Park street steeple from its accustomed place. Sometimes we cannot help wondering whether writers on such subjects depend upon second-hand information, or evolve satisfactory statistics from the depths of their own consciousness.--[Christian Register.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

$6 00 per Annum, in Advance.

Specimen Copies of THE ALDINE, 50 Cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.

The Great Triangulation.

[From The S. F. Alta.]

Captain Rodgers, of the U. S. Coast Survey, has gone to Mt. Shasta to erect a signal on its summit and take observations to be used in determining longitude, distances, areas and positions in connection with the hydrographic and topographic surveys of the country. For the purpose of making the calculations it is customary to measure by triangles and quadrangles, from peak to peak, and the triangulation now under contemplation is probably more comprehensive than any ever attempted heretofore. Captain Rodgers while on Mt. Shasta in latitude 41 deg. 25 min., will try to get observations of Downieville Butte in latitude 39 deg. 25 min., distant about 160 miles; of Mt. St. Helena in 38 deg. 40 min., distant 200 miles; Mt. Diablo in 37 deg. 50 min., distant 270 miles, and various other peaks. It is doubtful whether Shasta is visible from Diablo. No mountains intercept the line of sight, but the curvature of the earth is just about equivalent to 14,442 feet of Shasta's elevation added to the 3,856 of Diablo's. In ordinary clear days Shasta is not visible, but some persons claim to have seen it.

From Shasta to Downieville Peak the distance is 160 miles, and from the latter point to Diablo 140 miles, and the third side of 270 miles completes a triangle of very respectable size for surveying purposes. Whether the telescope will enable the observers to distinctly perceive the signal points or the flashes of the heliotrope reflecting the sunlight on the summits, is a question that time will solve. The air at this season of the year, to an elevation of nearly 4,000 feet, is usually loaded with fine particles of dust which interfere with the view, and in the Winter and Spring, when the atmosphere is clearest, Shasta and some of the other peaks which it is desirable to use, are difficult of access on account of the snow. If the magnifying power of the instruments should be insufficient, or the atmosphere not clear enough to permit the eye to perceive Shasta from Diablo, then nearer points must be utilized. There will be little difficulty in making triangles with sides of 100 miles or more.

The Bank and Ralston.

[From The S. F. Alta, Sept. 29.]

The twenty per cent. of the subscriptions to the guarantee fund of the Bank of California, called for last Saturday, is coming in rapidly, almost the entire amount, which will be about $1,500,000, having already been paid up. There are now nearly $3,000,000 in the vaults of the bank. Although no day has been set for the opening by the Directors, it can be safely stated that resumption will in no event be deferred beyond next Monday. Next Tuesday the stockholders' meeting will be held, when the Executive Committee, which has been examining the affairs and condition of the bank will report. Enough is already known for us to say that the stockholders will be satisfied with results.

When the bank closed its doors, Mr. Ralston said that all the depositors would be paid in full, and the stockholders would receive a dividend of from forty to sixty per cent. upon the capital stock. The promise was not an idle boast. It is strange that it ever should have been doubted. Mr. Ralston was never a boaster, or deceiver. It is now ascertained that the liabilities of the bank, which were at first fixed at thirteen millions of dollars, are found not to exceed ten millions, while the undoubted assets amount in value to fourteen millions, besides doubtful securities. During the last ten years the bank has earned $7,250,000, nearly six millions of which have been paid to stockholders in dividends.

What a grand monument to the name of Ralston is this showing, and how pitiful do those who doubted him appear in contrast with those who had faith in his honor and ability!

—It is estimated that the child population between the age of six and sixteen in the United States and Territories is about 10,288,000, and that about 300,000 teachers are needed to educate this host of future citizens.

A Prodigious Coal Mine.

[From The S. F. Stock Report, Sept. 28.]

An immense mine of coal has been discovered in Uintah county, Wyoming, near Carter Station, on the Union Pacific. It was discovered by Mr. Crocker, of Logan, from information he received from an old Indian, who showed him a piece of fine-looking coal which he found while hunting. He offered to show Mr. Crocker the place if he would give him $10, which offer was readily accepted. The Indian then took him about fifty miles to a spot about five miles from the mine, which Mr. Crocker found by tracing the vein the Indian pointed out to him. The mine is in a mountain, about four and a half miles long, running north and south, facing east, and about three miles and a quarter across, the mountain dipping suddenly at each end. There are sixteen veins of coal in sight. The bottom one is the smallest, being five feet; the next is the largest and most easy of access, and is more than 70 feet thick; the next above, 60 feet; another of about thirty feet; five of about twenty feet each, and five of sixteen feet each. The last one is about twelve—altogether about 400 feet of coal four and a half miles long; in fact it may be correctly termed a mountain of coal. The veins lie at an angle of 22 deg., with ledges of white sandstone intervening. The coal is very bright, is perfectly free from slate or dirt, and is said to be cannel coal. A small quantity of the croppings from the 70-foot vein has been tested for coke by an assayer, who states that it yields coke 52.2 per cent. When it is considered that very large quantities of coke are shipped from Pennsylvania to Utah and Nevada, a distance of 2,000 miles, at a cost of $35 to $40 per ton, for the purpose of smelting silver ores, it will at once be seen of what immense value this mine is likely to prove to owners of low grade silver mines. But whether the coal will coke or not, it is an excellent steam coal. One engineer who has used it says that one bushel of it will make as much steam as three bushels of ordinary coal, having less ashes than any coal he ever burned. Professor Pontez, geologist to the Central Pacific Railroad, has made an investigation of the mine, and reports it as the finest deposit of coal in Western America.

The Library of Congress.

This stupendous collection embraces full 300,000, being the largest single library in the United States. Some years ago the library of the Smithsonian Institute was merged with the Congressional Library, and has now become part and parcel of it. These books, comprising works on almost every notable subject, numbered from thirty five to forty thousand volumes, and are included in the above estimate. Ancient and modern history embraces the largest collection, containing an even hundred thousand volumes. Biography and travels stands next in order, and show some eighty thousand. The law department with its thirty-five thousand volumes, stands third on the list, and of poetry there are at least twenty thousand. The medical works present the very handsome front of eight thousand, and standard novels comprise a carefully selected list of five thousand. No novels of lower order than those commonly known as the standard are allowed in this valuable collection.

The books are allowed, by law, to be loaned out to the President of the United States, members of the Gabinet, Judges of the Supreme Court and the Court of Claims, the members of the Senate and House of Representatives, and the Diplomatic Corps in Washington. The same privilege is extended by courtesy to many of the gentlemen employed about the capitol building, and to the clerks of Senators and Representatives, or those who are chairmen of the different Congressional committees. To any other person, male or female, over the age of nineteen years, is accorded the privilege of going to the library and reading all at times that the rooms are open.—[Washington Chronicle, Sept. 25.

Cattle vs. Sheep.

The conflict between the farmers and cattle lords in some of the southern counties did not cease with the passage of the tresspass law. We learn from some of our southern exchanges that the conflict is still waged with unrelenting bitterness in some sections, the cattle men refusing to keep their cattle from the farms and resisting to the last all suits for damages for trespass. The cattle men are rich, and it is evidently their purpose to harrass the farmers, who are poor, with protracted and expensive litigation. It is a sad condition of affairs, but we can see no other remedy for it than a thorough revision of our judicial system, and such reformation in the administration of law and justice as shall treat the poor and the rich alike, and by prompt action take from the wealthy the power which they now have to prolong litigation, and so pile up its costs that the poor man actually dreads entering the courts in the fear that his efforts to obtain his rights will prove his ultimate ruin. It is stated that the failure of the law to protect the farmers will lead to open warfare between them and the cattle men, in which the rifle and revolver will furnish the "arguments." If this condition of affairs should be brought about, we can only blame our defective judicial system for the deplorable consequences.—[S. F. Post.

—A commercial exchange alludes to these indigo times."

General Sheridan's Mission.

It has not been generally known what mission it was that brought General Sheridan to the Pacific Coast. Inquiries instituted by The Alta have developed facts which are of very great importance. Indian troubles were anticipated in Oregon and the General was sent out to view the situation. Fortunately, they do not appear as bad as was at first supposed. However, there is a much greater field for the General's genius. All the best military authorities agree in predicting a general Indian outbreak throughout the great Northwestern Territories, having its centre about the Black Hills. This outbreak cannot take place until next Spring. Meanwhile military stations are being established so that the Army will be able to crush out a war as soon as it comes upon us with the greatest possible facility. This expected war will probably be the last great Indian war for our country to record. The causes which are leading to it are not creditable to the American people nor to American statemanship, but it is one of the inevitable things.—[Alta.

A Pugnacious Goat.

His head was the shape and size of a Bullitt county watermelon, and he was so black that charcoal would make a light mark on him. The goat was asleep, leaning against the side of the house. The darkey was smoking a decayed cigar. He espied the goat, looked at the lit end of the cigar, grinned, then at the tail end of the goat, "grinned louder," looked all around to see that nobody was looking, and touched the lit end of that cigar to the tail end of the goat. The goat turned a handspring, and the nigger opened his big mouth to laugh, but the goat butted him so quickly between the chin and his breeches pocket that his jaws came together, making a noise louder than the report of a gun. The negro's hat, boots and cigar lay in a pile, ten feet off, while his body was curled up like a horseshoe in the mouth of a sewer opening. When he "came too" he looked around at each one in the crowd, and dispersed the crowd by saying: "Will some ob 'you gemmen' shoot me wid a pistol? A nigga dat's as big a fool as I is ain't got no business libin."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

WIGGINTON'S EPISTLE.

P. D. Wigginton, member elect for this Congressional District has written a letter to the Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee of San Diego. "In it" to use the words of a Democratic contemporary of the Petroleum Nasby order, "he administers a very proper and wholesome rebuke to the Houghton Democrats whom he severely but righteously denominates 'apostates.'" Then the Kern county Nasby refered to gives his readers the full text of the epistle from the new Democratic apostle to the San Diegans. In this epistle he tells them he is "earnestly in favor of building the 32d parallel road, and hopes the opportunity will present itself to show you who supported me, and those who did not—for I bear them no ill will—that I am their friend." That's what the magnanimous Wigginton says, and to that no one can take exception. But he also says:

Toward the political apostates I have no ill feelings. They, perhaps, acted conscientiously in the matter. Politically, I, of course, with all good Democrats, must bid them good bye; they have deliberately left the party. Their reason for so doing may have been good; be that as it may, they are gone, and can expect no further favors of the party. And, saying now, as I did before the election, that, while in Congress, I shall endeavor to as faithfully represent San Diego as any other portion of my district, and again returning thanks to those who stood by me in your county, I am, very truly, yours and San Diego Democrats' friend, etc.

These remarks are of value. They give us a fair idea of the statesmanlike qualities of Mr. Wigginton's mind. As he proscribes others for having the courage to act as free and thinking men according to the lights before them, and in a matter supposed to be of vital importance to themselves, dared to scratch the name of a party nominee in favor of an opponent because of his position in that particular matter, this statesman and his sort tell them to leave the synagogue—to prepare for punishment. We see from this what we are to expect from our particular National Legislator. He won't dare to swerve an inch from his party shackles neither in favor of nor against San Diego, any other locality or upon any other question. As he demands that others shall "stand up to the rack, fodder or no fodder," so must he do as his party leaders tell him to do. As regards real statesmanship, our Congressional Halls might as well be supplied with a set of patent automatic voting machines as with such men as Mr. Wigginton, if this letter gives us a fair criterion of his qualities of mind. "Mr. Nasby, pipe all hands to witness punishment: there's men here who dare to have an idea of their own!"

New Patents.

Through dispatches to Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, San Francisco, we receive the following advance list of U. S. Patents granted to Pacific Coast inventors, viz: W. H. Harrison, Livermore, Cal., elevated railway; A. J. Knapp, Half Moon Bay, Cal., side hill plow; C. Newman, S. F., Cal., process of treating rattan; F. W. Clarke, S. F. Cal., force pump; O. Collier, Sacramento, Cal., spring power regulator; J. B. Green, Elliott, Cal., harrow; D. W. Hunt, S. F., Cal., burial case; C. H. Aaron, S. F., Cal., amalgamator; J. Crawford, S. F., Cal., joint for hydraulic nozzle; C. C. Redmond, and H. H. Rhodes, San Jose, Cal., gate.

Cuba and Spain.

The new President of the Republic of Cuba proposes to deal the Spaniards blow for blow. It has been the custom of the latter to shoot all Cuban prisoners taken in arms. The Cuban President now announces his intention to retaliate in kind. The barbarities of the war in Cuba are a disgrace to civilization, but the Cubans have been long suffering and it is to be hoped that this determination to retaliate for Spanish outrages will lead to the adoption of a method of warfare in accordance with the recognized code of Christian nations, Creditable.

This Summer has been an unusually prolific fruit season in the East. The orchards of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland have borne as they have never borne before, and on the wharves of Philadelphia and other Eastern cities the finest peaches have been sold for a few cents a basket, and in many instances, failing to find a purchaser, have been thrown away. Next Summer the probabilities are that fruit will be scarce and high.

—Alluding to the death of a citizen, recently, The Danbury News remarked: "With a single exception of 23 years ago, when he took lessons on a violin, his life has been blameless."

WHY WE DID NOT.

We have received several inquiries to know why we did not publish a certain letter or opinion of Judge Quint's in relation to Judge Hannah's action in the Ashim case. Our answer to these inquiries in brief is that no such letter ever came to our hands for publication.

The circumstances are as follows: W. A. Fox, of Lone Pine, feeling almost a personal interest in the matter, addressed a communication to Judge Quint, of San Francisco, and who is one of Ashim's counsel, requesting his opinion as to Judge Hannah's right under the law to admit Ashim to bail. It should be borne in mind that Judge Quint was not present at the time the matter of bail was argued before Judge Hannah, the case being wholly in the hands of Mr. Reddy, and though not pertinent to the point now in question, we may add was in most competent hands. Immediately on receipt of Judge Quint's lengthy response, Mr. Fox came to this office, which was on Thursday of last week, saying that he desired to have Quint's letter published in circular form, and, if agreeable to us, to appear in THE INDEPENDENT. We signified our pefect willingness to accede to his desire in both particulars, assuming, of course, that the letter was in tone and substance as represented, a legal opinion, not a mere personal electioneering document. Mr. Fox said he would first submit it to certain friends before ordering it printed one way or another, and went out for that purpose. Later, he came back, and gave us the letter to read. Looking it through we found it to warmly sustain Judge Hannah. The writer, however, disclaimed all intention or desire to submit anything that might be construed as an electioneering document for or against either candidate, saying that while he as a lawyer, must sustain Judge Hannah in this matter, Mr. Gregg was a personal friend, and a lawyer of abilities to well qualify him for the position to which he aspired. It is possible we are not called upon here to give the substance of this letter or any opinion as to its bearing and weight in the matter at issue, nor should not do so but for the apparent fact that its non-appearance is being used for an effect hardly justified by the real merits. In other words the impression is conveyed that it is positively and conclusively in support of one candidate as against the other. It is not at all so, except so far as it relates to the law admitting an alleged murderer to bail, therein showing that Judge Hannah should not be proscribed for doing as law and duty demanded in the particular matter referred to. In that we entirely agree with Judge Quint and Judge Hannah, nor do we doubt but abundant precedents can be found in proof of the correctness of his judgment. We cannot undertake to quote any of the precedents or law cited in this letter, having given it only one casual reading. But we remember that it assumes that the evidence taken in the defendant's original examination was submitted to the consideration of the Court when it adjudged the right of bail, and upon that basis (which is the only true one, as Mr. Gregg claims) the case was adjudged bailable. If this asaumption is correct, then the whole question turns on Judge Hannah's estimate of the value of the testimony elicited in the examination, and not upon the untenable position, as we take it, that murderers are bailable under all circumstances. As we understand Judge Quint he does not take the ground that all murderers are bailable. So far it has only been a general proposition presented, about which there is but little difference of opinion, the real point at issue not having been raised, except so far as it has been touched upon in this letter in the above particular.

If the evidence or "presumption of guilt" (Sec. 1270), was not "great" the defendant was admissible to bail. The question was as to the value of the evidence upon which the judgment was based. Mr. Gregg expressed no opinion as to that, neither did Judge Hannah, except inferentially by his judgment. Notwithstanding the amended Code, giving juries the right of commutation in cases even of the blackest kind of murder, clearly proved, we think Mr. Gregg is right in assuming that there are murder cases not bailable. Judge Hannah and both of Ashim's talented counsel are just as correct in asserting that certain cases of assumed black murder are bailable. We are not at all disposed to say this is not one of them.

We mention these views here as affording a possible solution of the reason why Judge Quint's letter was not finally submitted for publication. We told Mr. Fox on the occasion of his second call, that if he thought it best we would cheerfully give the entire document a place in our columns, but were of the opinion that it related to a dead or at least an unimportant issue, and would be of no particular value to anybody. He said he would submit the matter to Judge Hannah, and that was the last we saw of him or the letter. We infer from this that Judge Hannah held pretty much the same estimate of the uselesssness of continuing a mere abstract legal controversy that we do and advised against the publication of this letter for that reason.

But now that so much has been said about it, we hope this letter will be given us for publication, no matter whether it is before or after the election. It is a fair and able document.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

DARWIN, Oct. 6, 1875.

DEAR INDEPENDENT: — As Elder Sniffles has it, "we are sojourners in a world of fluctuation, one moment tossted on the billows of prosperity and joy, next plunged into the deep abyss of desperation and despair." Your little one has experienced something of this sort since his arrival at the new Comstock—the net-work of bonanzas. He moved like one in a trance with those who counted their millions in prospectus, then made the plunge when he came out of the delightful reverie and began to realize that individually he was but a poor worm of the dust, born out of luck and homely at that. Tableau!

DARWIN.

Of Darwin, her mines and future prospect, we shall say but little until our return. In fact, the less said the better. Your readers would at any time prefer to take chances in retiring to bed after a hearty meal of sausages and mince pie, than to undertake to wade through a long mining summary. The town is rapidly improving; the sound of the hammer and saw is heard continually throughout the day, and at night the streets are crowded with merchants, miners and all classes. Money is rather tight for the present, it being some three weeks since pay day and besides there is a continual drain on the money for freights, lumber, etc. Lumber is very scarce and only to be had in small quantities at from $100 to $140 per thousand. Owens River rough lumber sells at $100. We were told up country that there was an excess of building lumber and that already one could find in Darwin empty buildings. On what foundation these rumors are got up passes our comprehension. The fact of it is it would be a difficult matter to find a stick large enough for jack knife practice, and at least on a fourth of the occupied lots you will see a tent. Perhaps there is an excess of business houses going up and the anxiety to strike while the iron is hot is rather too great; be this as it may the undeveloped mines show on their face an immensee value and are only waiting for the hearty stroke of the skillful miners to support the largest town south of Virginia and north of Los Angeles.

WATER.

Mr. Beaudry's enterprise in getting water in at such an early date cannot be commended too highly. Prior to the working of the hose in wetting down the streets, the sand and dust was about two feet deep, and a gale of wind made it almost unbearable; now it is as hard and pleasant to travel over as the macadamized avanues of San Francisco. The Water Company is liberal and furnish gratis all the water that is necessary for sprinkling the streets. The average receipts for water per day is about $100. The pipes are well laid and work splendidly. All of the principal houses are well supplied with hose and by joining together, the boys would be equal to almost any emergency in case of fire. Wouldn't it be well for for Independence to go and do likewise, or would the good citizens have sufficient enterprise to keep the nozzle of their hose in repair?

REAL ESTATE.

Real estate is "way up" and likely to go up a little higher, that is, desirable locations. A lot nearly opposite Danori & Briggs' store, we understand, was sold the other day at $1,000. But a very few on the principal streets are for sale at any price, the owners generally intending to build themselves. Lot jumping, that was indulged in some time since, didn't prove a profitable business, and the few that took such desperate chances have let up. Mechanics are all employed under good wages. Our fellow townsman, H. P. Cartier is doing a smashing business. Morally, Darwin is a rare exception for a new mining camp, and a local hunting for something sensational wouldn't find a very fertile field to work in. The most fastidious would seldom hear a word unfit for ears polite.

MINES.

Of the principle mines, the Christmas Gift, Lucky Jim, Grand, Promontorio, Defiance and Bella Union, we shall have to defer a general review for the present as no one is allowed down in the mines and they desire opening up a little more before being reported. We saw some splendid ore on the dumps at the Christmas Gift and Lucky Jim. These mines have a large force at work and under the efficient management of the new foreman, Charley Dale, they will soon be put in a fine working condition. Iron ore for flux in working has been rather scarce but they are at work on a body now that will keep the furnace supplied. The Bella Union looks splendid. In the language of our Darwin Lauretta and will take a stand in the foremost rank of our best mines. This mine has the advantage of haying been well worked. H. G. Tobler, the foreman, is an excellent miner and understands his business pretty thoroughly, as a rich strike made this week will testify. We are promised a description of the Bella Union and will publish it in due time. Now, we come to the

"SHE IS A BIRD"

DEFIANCE.

To realize the magnitude of the vast body of ore in this wonderful mine one should behold it in its infancy. It is rightly named. In its babyhood, as an undeveloped silver mine, it defies the world. We are indebted to J. R. Murphy, who is now engaged in surveying a road to the mine, for his courtesy in furnishing particulars, and to Messrs. Reddy and Wilson who kindly placed a horse at our disposal whenever we wished to visit that mine or any other. But we cannot do better than to substitute some remarks by Mr Murphy, the gentleman above referred to, as follows:

To convey anything like a correct idea of its immense extent and promise to such as have not seen this mine, a description in detail of its geological and mineralogical character would be necessary, a task I do not feel competent to undertake. Yet, feeling it to be a duty to give publicity to a discovery of such great magnitude, as this appears to be, I have more than once taken the pains to visit the mine, and to collect such data as would enable me to place before the public a few facts from which at least an approximate estimate of its present and prospective value may be deduced.

The unusual prominence of the outcrop could not have failed to attract the attention of the first prospector who came near it, and hence, next to the Promontorio, three miles to the south, this was the first location of high grade argentiferous lead ore made in the district. The mineral belt or zone in which this mine is found extends along the east slope of the Darwin range a distance about north and south, with a dip or underlay to the west. The mineral of this ore zone is well concentrated and defined at the point of location of the Defiance. There are four well defined mineral strata running parallel to each other, with intervening strata of dolomite limestone, the whole forming the vein proper, which, from foot to hanging wall is

TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTY FEET IN WIDTH.

From the geological fact that this belt occurs between two separate and distinct formations, gives it the character of a "contact" vein. The foot wall is of gneiss or trap rock while the hanging wall is of lime and lime shales. This class of mineral veins, though the most desirable, are not of frequent occurrence. All geologists concede that all veins occurring between two different formations, as in this instance, are quite sure to prove both permanent and extensive.

This mine is opened by a tunnel 165 feet long, in that distance cutting two veins, numbered 1 and 2. The first or No. 1 has a width of ore body of sixty-five feet, showing the finest grades of galena and carbonate ores throughout.

THE FULL EXTENT OF THE VEIN.

Levels were being run during the time of my examination where nothing could be seen but solid first class ore. This vein crops to the surface where about the same extent of ore is shown as in the tunnel. Passing vein No. 1 a horse of dolomite is encountered extending 60 feet to vein No. 2. This has been cut 40 feet in carbonate ore without yet reaching the hanging wall. At this point a short winse has been sunk in ore, mostly red and yellow carbonates. The outcrop of this vein showing a superior class of galena ore, has a width of 55 feet.

THE THIRD STRATA

of this wonderful lode crops out to the surface, presenting equally as good a prospect as either No. 1 or 2. The intervening horse between Nos. 2 and 3 is a dolomite limestone like that between Nos. 1 and 2, and of the same width—60 feet. No. 3 is 47 feet wide.

NO. 4, THE LAST OF THE SERIES, which constitutes the contact vein, occurs at a distance (west) of 140 feet from No. 3. The vein is 28 feet wide as measured on the outcrop, and appears to be well defined. These four veins preserve their relative distances from each other with remarkable uniformity. There is one feature about these several veins indicating that at no great depth they may all merge into one; this is the fact that the foot wall ore bodies dip at an angle of from 38 to 40 degrees, while those under the hanging wall dip at from 50 to 60.

All mining men admit that they have never before seen a lead mine to approach this in extent of outcrop, or width of ore body as already shown. The average of twenty-two assays, samples taken promiscuously from all parts of the veins, gave 63½ ozs per ton silver with 50½ per cent. in lead. Much of the galena and gray carbonates will run from $100 to $200 per ton.

P. Reddy, Esq., arrived about the 1st. His furnace is on the road from Caliente. Elder will put it up. They have about 40 men at work on the furnace site and road to the mine and will soon put on about 100 more.

The Sioux—Who is to Get Their Land?

[From The S. F. Bulletin.]

It seems now settled that we are to make a new treaty with the Sioux of the Black Hills, and that the Government will be obliged to pay a round price for their lands. The Delegate from Dakota has been there, and has already planned three or four roads into the proposed new purchase. The question for Senators and Representatives now is: Who is to get the benefit of this purchase? The people of the United States, or some speculators in mines and lands? It will be in order for the House to watch this treaty closely, and for honest Senators to see that it is an honest treaty before they vote for its ratification.

Some years ago—in 1868 or 1869—a treaty was made with the Cherokees for a large body of good land in Kansas; and so artfully was it managed that a few speculators obtained the whole of it, to the great damage of actual settlers; and at one time the danger of a local civil war. About the same time, another treaty was made with the Osage or agents representing them. The peculiarity of this one was that the land—2,000,000 acres—was to have passed directly from the Indians to a railroad company. The stipulated price was 19 cents an acre in currency, then worth 65 cents on the dollar, and that the Osages were to accept wild desert lands on the Arkansas, at 36 cents an acre. The Osage lands were well worth $10, while the Arkansas river lands, to be given in exchange were not worth ten cents and never will be. In short, the Osage treaty was a bold swindle from its inception in favor of a set of land speculators. Fortunately the press exposed it, and it was stopped in the Senate, though it had the sanction of the Interior Department and of the Superintendent and Agents of the Osage Reservation.

With this experience in treaty making, the propsed treaty for the Black Hills country will bear close watching.

Gen. Sheridan's Bride and Her Family.

General Sheridan's early acquaintance with his bride was not attended by any unusual or romantic circumstances. It was not "love at first sight." General Sheridan had been for years in the habit of meeting the family of his staff officer, both under their own hospitable roof and in various homes where they were both welcome. He first saw Miss Rucker when she was a school girl, pretty, piquant, and not in any way inclined to hero worship. When she was graduated from school he won her hand.

Miss Irene Rucker, the bride, is a beautiful brunette, rather tall, quite slender, and of that shapely, lithesome form, often described as willowy. The habit which all convents give their pupils of bowing from the waist, instead of from the head, has confirmed this natural grace, and given Miss Rucker the ease of posture which makes the French and Spanish ladies so much admired. Her expression is vivacious; her eyes are brown, soft and gazelle-like. Her hair is lighter than is usually seen in brunettes, but it is a very harmonious shade of brown. Her hand is small, and her arm shapely and graceful. She speaks French, German and Italian fluently, is a fine musician, has natural talents as an artist, and will doubtless make a brilliant leader in society.

The family consists of father, mother, three daughters and two sons. General Rucker has been twice married; his present wife is a daughter of Captain Curtis of Michigan. Miss Irene is the eldest daughter by the present marriage. The eldest son is a Lieutenant in the United States Army. The family has a leading social position, but is not wealthy.—[Chicago Corr. N. Y. Tribune.

Another Horse Disease.

New York city is badly afflicted with a horse plague, but the eastern shore of Maryland seems to be also in a very desperate plight from the same curse. The disease is a peculiar one, bearing no resemblance to the epizootic. The horse is suddenly attacked with dizziness and spins around until he drops dead. The disease has been especially fatal among valuable blooded stock, and no remedy has as yet been discovered. In one county, that of Kent, the loss in horseflesh amounts to $25,000.

Furniture Factory in Los Angeles County

The machinery in the shop of the Wilmington Manufacturing company is now in splendid running order. Work has commenced upon plain furniture, and as soon as the lumber is better seasoned, we expect to see some specimens of handicraft turned out that will make all confess that Wilmington has taken a creditable position as a manufacturing town.—[Wilmington Enterprise.

For Speaker.

William E. Murphy, of Del Norte, will be a candidate for Speaker of the Assembly. Mr. Murphy will be remembered as Chairman of the Land Committee of the last session, a committee which made an excellent report against land monopoly in this State.

—A Pennsylvania camp meeting was recently broken up by six poor little skunks. The devil comes in various guises, and this particular one is not to be prayed down.

—The barnacles on the bottom of the steamship Great Eastern form a layer six inches thick in places, and are estimated to weigh three hundred tons.

—When Andrew Johnson was President, several insurance companies offered him policies on his life gratis, but he refused all and died, contrary to general assertion, without being insured for a single dollar.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Hutchings Expedition.

The Hutchings–James party were quite successful in their expedition to the Inyo Dome, or "Fisherman's Peak,' as it is popularly called. They were accompanied from Lone Pine by Al. Johnson, who was one of the first party that ever made a mark on that lofty elevation. Under his guidance the party got to the top without trouble or delay, and succeeded in obtaining some sixteen first-rate photograpic views. Mr. Hutching's barometer showed the elevation to be 15,018 feet, corresponding very nearly with previous observations by other parties. Completing their work there, Mr. Hutchings proposed to take a short cut across the country (if such gigantic, awe-inspiring mountains of rock can be called a country), with a view of intersecting the Kearsarge trail, and a possible ascent of Mount Williamson. Two others of the party volunteered to accompany him. Taking a small supply of "grub," but no blankets, the three started afoot, the main party taking the back track, and arriving here at noon the third day following, which was Wednesday last. It was expected the three across country gentlemen would reach here on the second day. Not finding them here, Capt. Macgowan, on ascertaining the facts, thought it possible some accident had befallen them, and at once took men and supplies and started to the rescue. By the time he had fairly reached the mountains the missing ones came tramping in, weary, footsore and, oh, how hungry! Scarce a mouthful to eat for the last two days. We shall have to leave the details of their adventures for Mr. Hutchings to elaborate in a book or lecture, and briefly state that instead of a practical route for even expert footmen, they found sheer precipices thousands of feet high cutting square across the proposed line of travel, so that it was simply impossible to proceed in the desired direction. Descending on the second day to what appeared to be a very low pass just to the west of Mount Williamson, they found they were yet over 12,000 feet high, the mountains around appearing to tower as high above them as from this valley. By this time the party were looking for a way to reach the foot, not the top of the mountains. Fortunately they succeeded in getting into and climbing down the long canyon along the north side of Mount Williamson, reaching here on the evening of the third day as stated Mr. Hutchings, used to rough mountains as he is, thinks that group of Titans between Williamson and the Dome just about as fearfully rugged as the world can produce. The party have started for Kings river, via Kearsarge, to take some views of that Yosemite, but will return here in a few days.

The Great Register.

We have just finished the printing of the Supplement to the Great Register of Inyo county, which County Clerk Hammarstrand will shortly distribute for use at the pending election. The supplement contains 219 names, making total registration 1,192, as shown by the column number, to which must be added three interlined half numbers, making the total 1,195. This shows a great deal heavier voting population than the poll lists of the late election, which out to have called it all out, would indicate. The whole vote for Governor was 789.

Streets of Cerro Gordo Paved with Gold!

All of Cerro Gordo is excited and out at work on the dumps in front of the Union mine. Our junior was shown a piece of gold, or rather a nugget, by Mr. Pyzer, at Lone Pine, that weighed thirteen ounces, two-thirds of which was pure gold. Many other pieces were sent down as specimens worth from $50 to $80 apiece. This gold was thrown out with the refuse and casing in getting to the silver ore. Everybody is immensely excited, and truly Gerro Gordo is literally paved with gold.

The Wheeler Expedition.

Party No. 1, Lieut. R. Birney, commanding, of the Wheeler expedition, arrived at the Post early this week. We cannot now give a statement in detail of the Lieutenant's operations since leaving the main body. His headquarters will be at the Post for some weeks, during which time he will determine the latitude, longitude and altitude of Mount Whitney, Inyo Dome and other noted mountains and points necessary to perfect a complete map of the country.

For Darwin.

Mr. Gerrish has gone to Darwin, to take charge, we believe, of the carpenter work on the proposed furnace and buildings for the Defiance Mining Company. He was accompanied by Jas. Steward, the saw mill man of Big Pine. P. Reddy, Esq., the principal owner in the mine, is now at Darwin, putting things in shape for the furnace, and the extensive mining operations the company propose to carry on.

Good Road.

Probably the best road that ever lead to a mine is the one leading from the Hoffman furnace to the Christmas Gift and Lucky Jim mines in Darwin. There is scarcely any grading, and it is free from rock and so hard that there is no danger of its cutting down. The ore wagons make two trips a day.

Shipping Ore.

Mr. Holt is shipping considerable high grade ore to San Francisco from the Jimmy Sharp mines on the north side of Kearsarge mountain. One large team took a full load this week, and others are to be loaded as fast as the ore can be packed out.

Destructive Fire.

A little after 3 o'clock last Saturday morning (our issue for that day being then ready for the mail) a goodly number of our people were awakened by the cry of "fire!" It was soon ascertained that the bright glare which lit up everything for a mile around came from Mr. Gerrish's new residence situated on the east side of town and several hundred feet from the nearest building. The entire structure was aflame by the time the first person reached the ground and there was little else to be done than to stand and see it go to utter destruction. Mr. W. Walsh, however, rushed in and at the expense of both hands severely burned, succeeded in dragging out two large chests of tools which but for his pluck would have been destroyed with the rest. It should be understood that Mr. Gerrish had but the day previous finished fitting the doors and windows and that but little more remained to be done until it was ready for occupancy. It was for his own family residence, built by himself, a first-class mechanic on a plan and in a style of workmanship not excelled by any private residence in the county. One of the profound mysteries is, how did the fire originate? The building and grounds had been entirely cleared of shavings and combustible trash of every kind. No fire had been used in or about it by any of the workmen. It was unoccupied; parties passing along the street at 2 o'clock that morning noticed no sign of fire about it, yet an hour later it was discovered in a broad blaze. It was undoubtedly set on fire, but whether accidentally by some straggling vagabond attempting to pass the night there or by some passing communist with a view of creating a diversion that would render it possible to effect a burglary elsewhere in the town remains to be found out. The first theory is the most plausible, particularly as it is known that there were both white and Indian drunken vagabonds about the town that night, and since, too, for the matter of that. The actual cash value of the material and tools destroyed is about $2,000 to which is to be added a considerable labor account of himself and others. Under the peculiar circumstances existing the loss is a good deal more than Mr. Gerrish can well sustain. Several liberal hearted friends offer him their aid in whatever way may be acceptable in enabling him to go ahead and rebuild as good as before, and this he proposes to do as soon as the material can be obtained, which has already been ordered.

For Robbery.

Last Saturday one Bob. Smith swore out a complaint in Justice Schalten's Court against Oliver Carter, alleging that Carter had robbed him of a pistol. Carter was arrested, but before the case was put on trial Smith withdrew the charge, it appearing that Carter didn't exactly do any robbery but had merely taken possession of Smith's pistol to keep the latter from doing a harm to somebody. Carter, though, was to pay the accrued costs amounting to some $14 before he could be released from durance. Carter was only too anxious to do this, and, having spreed away the last cent of his own money, only needed the presence of a certain friend who, he knew, would accept certain securities he had to offer, and advance the coin necessary for his release. Would the officer be kind enough to ask this friend to come and see him? On the following (Sunday) morning the officer was kind enough to introduce the anxiously expected friend. Carter's calculations were eminently correct, for the friend advanced the money, and he was soon again breathing the free air of heaven and on his travels far to the southward. Meantime, the friend has been endeavoring to whistle up these securities. His success don't augur well for the next drunken bilk that asks his help.

The New Board.

Our Board of Supervisors now consists of new members throughout, all three having been elected at the late election instead of one each year as intended by law. It is not necessary to explain how this came about. The members elect met last Monday, pursuant to law to fix tax rates, which, after being sworn in, was done. The Board consists of C. Meysan, long term, D. B. Curtis, second long term, and J. L. Garrettson, short term. Mr Garrettson was elected President. The tax rate was fixed at three dollars on the $100, same as last year, and apportioned to the different funds as follows: Expense, $1; Bridge, $0 15; Road, $0 10; Hospital, $0 25; Sinking, $0 12; school $0 03; Interest and Building $0 40; General, $0 34½; State Tax $0 60½=$3. The Road Tax was fixed at $4, same as required by statute. Board then adjourned till the regular November term.

Tramps.

It seems as though this section was being favored with the attention of several tramps, though, so far, no depredations of moment have been committed by them. A couple of these gentry made an attempt to break into Denton's house, eight miles up the road, the same night Gerrish's house was burnt up They did not quite succeed, something occurring to frighten them off. As shown by a peculiar foot print, they passed on through this place before morning. Other circumstances having a similar bearing are related, but they are hardly worth mentioning here.

The Hoffman Furnace.

This furnace, which it is well to remark is at Darwin, is running right along turning out on an average about 120 bars per day. Last month it consumed about $16,000 worth of coal.

Personal.

Mr. V. Beaudry, who has been absent for several months, sojourning in Canada and the Atlantic States, is expected to return in the course of two weeks.

Bad Stage Accident.

Last Monday morning P. P. Dow, our old time stage driver, met with an accident by which he came near losing his life. He was on his regular trip to Lone Pine, and had reached a point a mile this side his destination where a small stream had caused a narrow, deep chuck hole across the road. There was no load in the hind boot and but one passenger, Mr. J. S. Brown, who was on the box with him. Though proceeding slowly and carefully across this place the horses made a sudden spring to clear it, Dow throwing himself back to check them at the instant the front wheels dropped into the rut, causing the bow of the cover to strike Dow on the back of the head, knocking him half way to the forward end of the tongue between the horses. This frightened them of course and they began to run; Dow, yet with the lines in his hands, got back to the double trees from which he was thrown to the ground, though one leg remained caught so as to bring him under the wheel which passed over his left arm breaking both bones between the wrist and elbow. He still, however, managed to retain his hold on the lines, and continued to do so for some distance until Brown had jumped to the ground and succeeded in stopping the team. By this time Dow was insensible. Brown got him into the stage and went on to Lone Pine, where Dr. Colleau examined his hurts, and found that besides numerous bad bruises, that his arm was broken as above stated, one ear badly torn and a very bad hurt on one of his legs which, however, was not broken as has been reported. Word was sent to Mrs. Dow, who, with Dr. Blair went down and brought him up here the following day, and he is now doing much better than rumor give reason to anticipate. It will be a number of weeks though before he will be able to do anything, and it is quite possible some substantial attentions from his many friends might have a tendency to relieve his mind very considerably. Dow is the pioneer stage driver of the valley, and is universally liked for his careful attention to business and his accommodating spirit towards the public, and consequently has the sympathy of everybody in this singular and unfortunate accident.

Attempt at Suicide.

A few days since a young man named Johnson, employed at the Black Rock saw mill, came here and made a purchase from Dr. Blair of an ounce of laudanum, with which to alleviate certain aches and pains, with which he was much troubled. Starting on his return to the mill, he stopped at Denton's, eight miles above here, and stopped for a rest. Denton soon noticed that there was something wrong with him, and on investigation found that his guest had swallowed the whole of the laudanum and had gone to sleep with the apparent intention of never waking any more. Denton went to work to do what he could to relieve Johnson of the dose he had taken, but without much success. It happened, however, that an ounce of laudanum was not dose enough for Johnson, so in course of time he woke up and expressed his regrets that such was the case. He, however, wished it understood that he would take enough to do next time, so if the young man does not change his mind (assuming that a would-be suicide has any mind) it is likely the Coroner and a substantial jury will have a chance to sit on somebody before a great while.

Another "Stage" Accident.

Stage wagons seem to have been on the rampage here lately. Besides accidents mentioned elsewhere, wherein they cut a figure, a stage standing quietly at "Uncle Abe" Parker's blacksmith shop, came pretty near taking Billy Matlack's head off. He had propped the body up to enable him to do some repairing underneath. He was getting along well enough until the coach body slipped from the supports, and came down on his head, catching his mouth and nose against the axle in such a way as to jam them up very uncomfortably. A little more and his nose would have been set on top of his head. As it was no serious or permanent injury resulted, although it was by no means a pretty nose, nor was its owner able to do any work for several days. Matlack says he "nose" more about fixing stage coaches now than he did last week.

From Panamint.

Mr. Nathan Rhine, of Harris & Rhine, returned a day or two since from his visit to Panamint. After taking a look through the mines for himself, he says the Surprise Valley Company have enough good ore out and in sight to keep their big mill running steadily a whole year to come. He observed one pile of silver bullion from this mill ready for shipment of about $3,000 in value. The Sunrise mill is running as steadily as scarcity of water for the engine will permit, and with good results. The town itself is dull compared to what it has been heretofore, but is not dead by any means.

Notice for a Social Party.

The ladies of Milton school district propose to give a social party in their new school house next Friday evening, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the school. The object is most commendable. No labor will be spared to make the occasion a most enjoyable one. We are requested to extend a general invitation to all, and we herewith make it special to every fun loving as well as sedate person of our acquaintance, hoping that each and all will be on hand.

Corralled Him.

One Ryan got tight Thursday evening and made himself conspicuously obnoxious by flourishing a pistol, threatening to shoot somebody, and so on, so he was induced to pass a quiet night in jail—and got off mighty cheap at that.

An Agent in Trouble and Out Again.

Uncle Billy Noter, who is old enough to know better, appears to have gone into the Indian whisky agency for somo more wealthy dealer, who feels a little delicacy about getting himself into trouble. Leastwise, one Bob Smith had Uncle Billy arrested and brought before Justice Schalten on a charge of selling whisky to Indians, but when the case was called up the prosecuting witness had made himself scarce, and has not been seen since, so the case had to be dismissed. But drunken Indians are just as plentiful around Uncle Billy's and through the county generally as before. Capt. Jim says that the Indians come clear from George's Creek and all around to trade with Uncle Billy and his "mahala," as they call her. It was a great pity that that branch house down at George's Creek was extinguished, as it put the noble red men resident there to a good deal of inconvenience in having to travel so far to obtain their ennobling stimulant.

Bonds Filed.

All the county officers elect have filed their bonds in sums as follows, with sureties in each case in double the amounts named: Each Supervisor, $2,000; Bennett, District Attorney, $2,000; Dillon, Assessor, $3,000; Dr. Blair, Coroner, $1,000, and as Public Administrator, $10,000; Daugherty, County Clerk, $6,000, Recorder $2,000 Auditor, $2,000; Symmes, Superintendent of Schools, $1,000; M. H. White, County Surveyor, $1,000; Passmore, Sheriff, $10,000, and $15,000 as Tax Collector, and last but not least, Isaacs as Treasurer, in the penal sum of $60,000, requiring sureties to the tune of $120,000.

Makes a Favorable Impression.

Constables.

Henry Grover, Big Pine, James H Brown and James A. Frisbee, Bishop Creek, William Hogan, Panamint, Jas. Wales, Darwin and Fred. Grothey, Lone Pine, each filed a $500 bond as Constable.

School in Darwin.

Miss M. J. Thompson opened a private school in Darwin last week. The school promises to be well attended as soon as the several families recently arrived shall have had time to become fairly settled.

Wood and Coal.

There are about 150 men in the wood and coal camps in the mountains west of Darwin from 10 to 14 miles distant. Wood in town is worth $12 per cord.

An Error Corrected.

The following letter explains itself:

ECLIPSE, Oct., 2d, 1875.

MESSRS. EDS:—Until to-day I was not aware of the advertisement in your issue of the 18th ultimo, saying that the Eclipse Company would engage, or wanted 25 miners on or against the 1st of October. I beg to say that your informant was decidedly mistaken in making such an assertion. We have 1,500 tons of ore on the dump ready for the mill, and consider that ten men, the number now working, will be able to furnish all the quartz necessary to keep 20 stamps running night and day, and further we have also nearly a month yet to increase our supplies, as we shall not start the mill much before the 1st of November. Were it necessary, and circumstances warranted it, I should feel much pleased in giving employment to a thousand miners, but need no more than those engaged for the present.

Respectfully yours, JOS. EUDEY.

Concerning A. G. Cook.

It has been stated here that A. G. Cook, now in the Asylum at Stockton had to undergo an amputation of his wounded arm. The facts of the case may be understood without further remark from us by the following:

INSANE ASYLUM OF CALIFORNIA, STOCKTON, Sept. 29, 1875.

C. B. WHITE, M. D.—Dear Sir: Your letter of the 25th instant is received. The rumor that the arm of A. G. Cook has been re-amputated, or received any surgical operation at all, since his admission to the Asylum, is untrue. The stump required only the ordinary dressing after his arrival here. It has entirely healed up and bears evidence, under the unfavorable circumstances, of having been skillfully amputated and treated.

Very truly yours,
G. A. SHURTLEFF, M. D.
Superintendent.

A Felonious Goat.

The goat was fined one (s)cent, which he left behind.

Returns to His First Love.

It is stated that Carl Schurz has returned to his first love, and will take the stump in Ohio for the Republican ticket. His excuse is the financial issue. He says that "no greater disaster could befall the country than the success of the inflation enthusiasts," and believing this, he could not remain neutral or silent.

The Indian Commissioners in a Tight Place.

A Chicago dispatch of September 28th says: A special from the Red Cloud Agency via Fort Laramie, says the council has made no progress during the past week, the delay being caused by the non-appearance of Red Cloud one day and Spotted Tail the next. Finally, at 2 P. M. Saturday, 500 Indians, representing the different tribes of the Sioux Nation, appeared on the ground and formed a circle of a hundred feet in front of the Commissioners in council. The chief, Standing Rock, on horseback, refused to dismount. He said he would not as they feared trouble. This was the first intimation of anything wrong. Shortly it was noticed that the Indians loaded and cocked their rifles and made a circle outside, and entirely surrounded the Commissioners and two companies of cavalry. Little Bad Man, who some days since threatened to kill a Commissioner, and who belongs to the wild northern Indians, was noticed examining his gun, and mounted on a fleet horse, he with several others, kept riding round and in front and outside of the circle of the Commissioners and soldiers, and several Indians were stationed to watch his movements. The Commissioners complained to Young Afraid of his Horse, Chief of the Ogallallas, that they were afraid of the hostile attitude of the Indians. He removed a large body of wild Indians who had stationed themselves in the rear of the troops, and instead substituted a large party of mounted friendly Indians. It was a crisis. A single shot fired would have produced an indiscriminate slaughter of every Commissioner and white present. It is supposed the warlike spirit of the Indians can now be kept in subjection. More cavalry have been sent for, and are daily expected to arrive. Major Burke, Indian Agent from Standing Rock Agency, protested against the procrastination of the council, and says they will leave here for home to-day. They have delegated Major Burke, their agent, to make a treaty for them. There will be no council of commissioners on the 27th, as the Indians will go into a private council among themselves. Great alarm is felt here and some difficulty is apprehended when the commissioners meet the Indians on Friday next, but appearances indicate that the prospects of making a treaty are gradually decreasing.

The Indian Scare in Nevada.

In regard to the charges against A. C. Cleveland and Dan Murphy, they are entirely without foundation. They neither of them started nor are in any manner responsible for the sensational reports which were sent from the telegraph offices of Pioche and Cherry Creek. They were defenseless when they had reason to believe that they were about to be attacked by hostile Indians; a belief which was shared by all the settlers in the valley, who evinced their sincerity by betaking themselves with their families to Cleveland's ranch for protection, leaving their crops to be destroyed by stock during their absence. They sent to Cherry Creek for arms, ammunition and a few men, as any person would have done under the circumstances. The exaggerated reports sent by telegraph are attributable to other sources, and to the Commissioners of Lincoln county more than any one else are the people of the State indebted for the big "scare" and the expense entailed in calling out the troops by Governor Bradley. They probably acted in good faith, but ill-becomes them to heap abuse upon others for the tempest which they themselves created. The idea that Mr. Cleveland got up the scare for "speculation," is too absurd for serious comment. He had from seventy-five to one hundred persons on his hands for a couple of weeks, and is probably a couple of thousand dollars out of pocket for provisions, forage, arms, amunition, etc., with no chance even to get a quarter of a dollar of it back. Setting fire to one's own house upon which there was no insurance would be a parallel case of "speculation."—[Eureka Sentinel

Wonderful Shooting by a Japanese in England.

One or two anecdotes about the wonderful Japanese marksman at Wimbleton may be selected from the vast number which are going the rounds. At Hythe, Major Muretta was pitted against one of the most celebrated musketry instructors in the camp, an officer who can, to use a familar phrase, "face the target," that is, can say where he is going to place his shots, and then do it. The Japanese major saw everything that the English lieutenant was able to perform, and immediately proceeded to cut him out in a manner that amazed all beholders. At Ash, near Aldershot, he was purposely misinformed as to the distance of a range, the number of yards being given to him as 800, whereas in reality it was 1,000. Major Muretta said nothing, but calmly sighted his rifle, and firing, hit the bull's eye. This he did again and again, and when he was told that he had been deceived in the distance, his reply was that he had not been deceived at all.

Ancient Glass Works.

The most ancient manufactories extant are the glass works of Venice and Murano. They have uninterruptedly survived over a period of twelve centuries.

—It is seldom easy to see the hidden benefaction in that which is an apparent affliction. A boy who was "confounding" the mosquito was told by his pastor that "doubtless the insects are made with a good end in view," when the young scamp replied: "I can't see it, whether it is in view or not. At any rate, I don't like the end, I feel."

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete polume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

$6 00 per Annum, in Advance.

(No charge for postage.)

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.

A Freak of Fashion.

The Paris correspondent of The Warehousemen and Drapers' Journal writes: About the last-named tablier, "the stonebraker," a good story is told. A lady belonging to the best society here, and known as an elegante of the first water, though somewhat given to eccentricity, when driving along a country highroad saw a man breaking stones by the wayside. He wore one of those huge leather aprons, such as workmen often affect—something like that of a drayman—secured round his neck by a thong, also of leather. To the lady it was a novelty; and, attracted perhaps by its utter uncouthness, she hastily stopped her carriage, and asked the man how much he would sell his apron for? "Sell you my apron!" cried he; "and what for?" On the lady declaring she would pay whatever sum he asked, the stonebreaker, thinking to drive a good bargain, told her that the apron was an heirloom—that he had inherited it from his grandfather; but that he would part with it for a consideration of £2. Without hesitation the money was paid, and the lady bore off the hideous garment in triumph, all coated with dust and weather—stained as it was. The horses were turned round, and back they all went to Paris, with the precious trophy on the satin cushions. They drove to the dressmaker, and the lady herself carried her purchase upstairs. The astonishment of the fair seuse may be imagined. "What have you got—what am I to do with that?" "Copy it," said this modern incroyable; "copy it in rich brocade; trim it with lace or ribbon as you think fit—I leave that to you; but on no account change the shape. It is primitive—it pleases me." Of course the dressmaker did as she was bid, and of course the lady was complimented on her acuteness, when she afterward recounted her adventures with the stonebreaker to her friends and acquaintances.

Defect of Organization.

A Delaware paper, commenting upon the arrest of Assistant District Attorney Charles G. Fisher of Washington for felony, remarks that it is a very sad case, but that "the organic lack of all moral consciousness on the part of Charles is well known" among his friends, and that consequent "his bad deeds creates no surprise." The editor further remarks that "there appears to be a defect in his organization, in consequence of which he does not clearly realize the enormous difference that exists between right and wrong doing." This gentleman is one of the much-abused persons whom a "licentious press," or, as the President's Washington organ happily phrases it, "the detective press," has pursued with unkindness. And now it appears that all that ever ailed him was "a defect in his organization, in consequence of which he does not clearly realize the enormous difference that exists between right and wrong" And shall a District Attorney be dismissed for that? Perish the thought! Why that "defect" is as common in the Department as lying. Seems to run in families though with great severity. There are Judge Fisher and his son Charles, Secretary Delano and his son John, and no body knows how many more. And it is queer, too, that while the parents seem so white and beautiful, the sons should break out with it in such an eruptive and confluent manner.

Forcible.

The Signal Officer reports as follows in reference to the recent cyclone at Indianola: The lowest barometer occurred on the afternoon of Sept. 16, when it stood at 28.99 inches, with the maximum velocity of wind at the same time 86 miles per hour. Thousands of drowned cattle are strewn over the prairies south of Indianola, where they were carried by the current, and several light coasting steamers are lying in the same direction from six to ten miles inland, having been left high and dry by the receding waters.

General Spinner on the National Banks.

MOHAWK, Sept. 17, 1875.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 13th instant reached me on the day before yesterday. The letter and papers that you speak of have not yet come to hand. A week or more ago I received a letter from Mr. Treasurer New, inclosing slip cut from The New York Evening Post of the 4th instant bearing your signature. He asked me to answer the article. This I declined to do, as I do not wish to be drawn into a newspaper controversy. I, however, wrote him, sustaining him in his action in regard to the assessment made upon the National banks for the expenses incurred by the people for the redemption of their circulating notes.

You say: "There seems to be a general indignation throughout the country against it." I was not aware before that the banks had got quite so far as to claim to be the country. "I am the State," said the King of France. "We are the country," say the banks. Let them beware. History repeats itself. For more than twenty years I was the executive officer of a bank. Most of what little I possess in this world is invested in National banks. My interest therefore is entirely on that side, but I hope that that fact will never warp my judgment to that degree that I would be unable to see what would be fair and ust to both the banks and the people. In the introduction to your article in The Evening Post I see that a bank officer, professing to speak for the banks, says: "What else can we do than relinquish our circulation?" In answer to this I wrote to the Treasurer of the United States: "This is a good one, and decidedly rich. It reminds me of the story of a boy who said to his mother, who had refused him money for a circus ticket, 'Now, mammy, if you don't give me that quarter I'll just go right off and ketch the measles; I knows a boy what's got 'em prime.'"

If the banks know what's good for them and when they are well off they had better "hold their horses" and keep quiet. The privilege of retaining their circulation depends upon this. Bank officers seem to have no idea of the deep feeling among the masses of the people in favor of a currency of coin and paper that shall be issued exclusively by the United States. The action of the Democratic party, through their delegated conventions in the States of Ohio and Pennsylvania, should admonish the banks not to provoke an issue and a conflict between themselves and the people. Such a course can end only in one way—it would be suicidal on the part of the banks. But nothing in this world is so blind as the unreasonable self-interest of corporations, and it is just possible that they may refuse to see the right, and their true interest as well, until it may be eternally too late.

When I was a bank officer the redemption that was enforced by State and by bank law cost more than double the amount now fairly assessed by the Treasurer of the United States for a much greater service. In those days the redemption agency banks charged discount of at least one-quarter of one per cent. They required the deposit of an amount the interest of which was equal to at least an equal amount, and then the banks were compelled to pay all charges for, and run the risk of transportation to and from the city agencies. Now a charge of less than one-fifth of one per cent: for more and better service, assessed by the peopl 's government, excites "general indignation."

I am a little curious to see what the banks intend to do about it. The threat is made in the article in The Post that "Congress at its next session in December next, will be called upon by the entire National banking interest of the country to modify the bank taxes." Is it not likely that a majority of the members will consider themselves instructed by the action of their State Conventions and shape their course in the directly opposite direction? When a boy I was advised "never to kick a sleeping dog." I have remembered and profited by it ever since. I commend the observance of the old law to the serious and prayerful consideration of the dissatisfied banks now. I am, very respectfully, yours,

F. E. SPINNER.

Gen. Wilson Opinion of Sherman.

Gen. Sherman's Memoirs stirred up a great buzz among military men, but his brother officers have hitherto been chary of committing themselves to formal replies. Gen. J. H. Wilson of cavalry fame has at last, however, thrown down the gauntlet. Two articles in recent numbers of one of the magazines (The Galaxy) are from his pen. They review Sherman candidly but not kindly, declare of him that he cannot be assigned the highest rank among the great captains of the world, or even of our own country; that neither his judgment nor his courage are of the highest order, and that they are not in harmonious equilibrium. Gen. Wilson further contends that Sherman is not the equal of Grant in judgment or courage, though he excels him in brilliancy; that he is inferior to Thomas in steadiness and resolution, far surpassed by Sheridan in courage, and excelled by Upton as a tactician and general student of the military art. Finally, the critic concludes that the Memoirs will cause the author to be assigned a lower place than might otherwise have fallen to his lot.

Sentimental Silver Scenes.

Whatever the spirit that imparts these pretty feminine names, as the "Little Annie" or the "Melvina," it has been remarked that mines blessed by them are apt to prosper. The reverential, chivalrous feeling which among our German ancestors made a goddess of the woman the man loved, crops out in our mountains and inspires these tender names for mines. Not long ago a middle aged man said: "I shall call my 'find' the 'Little ——,' for my motherless baby," and we turned our face aside so as not to notice the tears that began to start in his clear, honest eyes. There is something so pathetic in such lode names as the "Heartease," the "Orphan Boy," the "Silent Friend," and even the "Outlaw." What a world of associations the bare recital of them sends whirling through the brain! But, running on in this strain, we have quite neglected recognition of the man who named his mine the "Keystone" or the "Adamant." There is no foolishness about him. He has little patience with the spoony tribe who "feel affections," and is innocently oblivious to that sentiment which, with others, is all the sweetness of life.—[Boulder (Col.) News.

A Texas Bed-Bug.

A Sherman man, who was out in the country buying grain, stopped at night at a dilapidated farm house. After a fierce contest with the bugs and mosquitoes, he had fallen asleep. He slept about an hour when he was rudely awakened. The old farmer was standing over him with a cocked revolver, one of the farmers stalwart sons had him by the heel and was in the act of jerking him out of bed, while the hired man was tossing the pillows around with a three-tined pitchfork.

"What have I done?" he hoarsely asked.

"Keep cool, stranger," replied the farmer; "some of the boys thought they heard a Denison bed bug chawing up the shuck mattress, but I guess it must have been wolves out in the timber they heard; you can go to sleep again."

But somehow or other he could not

SENATOR SARGENT.

Senator Sargent has, with his family, gone to Washington to prepare for some most important Congressional work. There are but few, if any of our public men of this State, who have received more abuse at the hands of the press than Sargent. It is our present candid belief that he, in all essential parts, has been greatly wronged and misrepresented. There is scarce a question but that he has effectively worked for some matters of legislation affecting this Coast not worthy of general approval, but however that may be, we do not believe we have ever had a Senator or member of Congrets who has accomplished so much worthy of approval, or one more honest in his motives. His energy and will has borne him triumphantly through discouragements and oppositions that would have swamped most men, and has enabled him to accomplish much for the general good, and no less, in the late canvass, for his party. We are constrained to say this much for Mr. Sargent, because we have personal reasons to know that he has done some good and honest things for the people of this county—things his own interest would not have permitted him to have done had he been the corrupt, scheming trickster, he has been reported.

The President at Salt Lake.

An immense mass meeting was held in Salt Lake City on the 2d inst. for the purpose of making arrangements for the reception and entertainment of President Grant and party, who were to arrive on the following day by specia train. The meeting appointed Gov. Emery, Sec. Black and a delegation of citizens, representing different branches of industry and wealth, to meet the party at Ogden and give an official welcome to President Grant in Utah. The City Council, (Mormon) also go in a body to Ogden by special train, tendering the President the hospitality of the city. The President will come no further West on account of a lack of time.

The Temecula Indians.

The ejectment of the Temecula Indians from the lands they have occupied for many years looks very much like a perversion of the law. It seems these natives have resided upon the land for a sufficient length of time to acquire a title by prescription, as they cultivated the soil and otherwise asserted ownership. The writ of ejectment was applied for by the claimants and seems to have been speedily issued and immediately executed. There was no trial of the case whatever, so far as reported, and the Indians were not represented by any counsel. Their request for time to consult their chief Olegario was treated with contempt, and they were forthwith driven out. —[Los Angeles Herald.

Good Opinion of Him.

A correspondent of The Carson Tribune has rather a high opinion of one of the Mormon Apostles. This is it:

As is my usual practice, I went to the Tabernacle at the usual hour, 2 o'clock, and heard the same good old Joe Smith sermon that I have often heard since Mary had a little lamb, Orson Pratt being orator of the occasion. He knows more in a week than a Texas steer, and has more wind than the month of March; has seven cows and six wives, and a dog; and now wants to buy a horse fiddle to maintain quiet in the domestic family.

New Patents.

Through dispatches to Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, San Francisco, we receive the following advance list of U. S. Patents, granted to Pacific Coast inventors, viz.: E. Groat, Napa Cal., churn; A. W. Lockhart, Napa, Cal., feeder for threshing machines; J. H. Mertz, Paso Robles, Cal., tyre upsetting machine; R. C. Ball, Oakland, Cal. wash stand and water closet combined.

Newspaper Changes.

E. M. Dewey, who, after making The Visalia Delta a first-rate paper, then sold out, has bought it back again, and is going on as of yore. The Wilmington Enterprise, a paper that is highly esteemed by the fraternity, has ceased to exist as regards Wilmington, but will soon reappear under a new name from the promising embryo city of Santa Monica.

Elections.

Iowa and Ohio both held elections last Tuesday. The next State elections to occur will be on the 2d of November next, on which day there will be nine, viz: Virginia, Kansas, Maryland, Mississippi, Minnesota, Missouri, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. Texas holds her election on the 7th of December following.

Day of Atonement.

Friday of last week was the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement. During the twenty-four hours of this holiday, pious Israelites refrain from all food and drink, and when the opportunity offers pray in their synagogues for the forgiveness of their sins—which are numerous, no doubt.

PRINTING.

We learn from members of late exploring parties that the sheep men are ruthlessly and inexcusably setting fires to our mountain forests, thereby destroying an immense amount of timber. Such vandalism is to be sincerely regretted. Besides the loss of the timber every stick of which will be needed ere many years elapse, the grass is so completely swept away in places as not to leave a mouthful for a hungry horse, a fact of no little importance to wayfarers and explorers, numbers of whom have had, and do have, occasion to visit those regions. The reason for the vandalism, and a very poor one it is, is that the sheep men are abandoning the mountain pastures for the season, and set out the fires for the fun of the thing, or else to deprive others of even a temporary chance at the scanty remaining pasturage. This is mean of itself but it is nothing to the loss of the timber entailed. It will take a life time to replace that. It is not the mere loss of the timber itself that is to be considered. It is the climatic effect produced. It is an established fact that in the same proportion the mountains are denuded of timber, is the Summer's supply of water lessened. One instance in point is the Carson river, heretofore a stream capable of furnishing an immense and most desirable water power for a vast number of quartz mills all Summer through, but now of no value at all for that purpose, except for a short time during the Spring months. The timber at its sources has been so nearly all swept away by fires and the lumberman's axe, that there is nothing to protect the snow from the sun so that instead of its taking a whole season to melt away, it now all goes in a few weeks. A similar result will follow here as regards our supply of water for irrigating purposes if the timber in the high Sierras is swept away, as it will be, if these people are permitted thus to destroy it by wholesale. If possible our next Legislature ought to pass a rigid law to punish such vandalism. To show the extent of the destruction, one party last week saw no less than five fires destroying as many extensive tracts of timber in the Mt. Whitney region, all raging at once. It is a sacralige without justification.

Grant Makes a Speech.

A late despatch gives the text of a speech by President Grant, the longest one he ever made, and in one particular the most suggestive of what is to be in the future. The despatch says:

"At the Soldiers' Reunion at Des Moines yesterday, President Grant said he had concluded to disappoint those who had called upon him in expectation of a short speech, as he had jotted down many things which he wished to say. He then expressed gratification in recalling the days when they had suffered together to preserve a government which they believed worth fighting and even dying for. 'We will not,' and he, 'deny to any of those who fought against the United States any privilege under the Government which we claim for ourselves; on the contrary, we welcome all such who come forward in good faith to help build up the waste places and perpetuate our institutions against enemies, as brothers in full interest with us in a common heritage. To guard against a recurrence of past days, we must begin by guarding against every enemy preventing the prosperity of our free republican institutions. I do not bring into this assemblage politics, certainly not partisan politics; but it is a fair subject for the soldiers in their deliberations to consider what may be necessery to secure the prize for which they battled." The President urged cultivation of intelligence among the people in regard to political matters and said: "If we are to have another contest in the near future of our national existence, I predict the dividing line will not be Mason & Dixon's, but between patriotism and intelligence on one side, and superstition, ambition and ignorance on the other. In this centennial year the work of strengthening the foundation of the structure, began by our forefathers one hundred years ago, at Lexington, shall be begun. Let us all labor for more security of free thought, free speech, a free press, and pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments, and equal rights and privileges of all men, irrespective of nationality, color or religion. Encourage free schools, and resolve that not one dollar appropriated to them shall be applied to the support of any sectarian school. Resolve that neither State nor Nation shall support institutions save those where every child in the land may get a common school education, unmixed with atheist, pagan or sectarian teachings. Leave the matter of religion to the family, and keep Church and State forever separate. With these safeguards, I believe the battles which created the Army of Tennessee will not have been fought in vain."

The President's speech was greeted with applause, repeated again and again.

General Sherman closed the speaking for the night with a humerous and short speech, in which he said he wished the speeches made here to-night could be printed in full and scattered broadcast through the South, to show the people there how the ex soldiers of the North felt toward them.

A Curiosity.

Charley Spires captured in front of the Court-house, yesterday, the most curious insect ever seen in these parts. It is of the tarantula order, and its back, which is about the size of a twenty-five cent piece, is pure white in color, and when viewed from one side presents the features of the human face, with a complete moustache. When viewed from the reverse side the marks assume the appearance of the face of an animal of the feline species. Marshal Day embalmed the animal in alcohol and presented it to Tony Gandolfo, who placed it in the cabinet of the Sazerac Saloon, where it can be viewed by those having doubts that this statement is a "true fact." —[Austin Reveille.

That's where the "Sazerac Lying Club" meets, if we remember rightly.

The Latest and Worst.

The latest and worst case of official scoundrelism is that of one Schaffenburg, United States Marshal for the Territory of Colorado. The details of his venal conduct are given in a Chicago dispatch of the 5th instant. If Swartwout were alive and could read this story, he might rid his conscience of all remorse and set up a tolerable claim to public virtue. Schaffenburg was in the habit of allowing himself pay at the rate of $1 50 per day for constructive prisoners—for parties who had never spent an hour in jail. These charges cover over eighteen hundred cases, running for weeks and months at the regular dollar and a half per day. On one occasion he arrested himself and a number of his friends, and made the usual charge against the Government for subsistence. Perjury appears to have been one of his favorite pleasantries. He procured an alliance with a ring of land-grabbers, and by the use of fictitious names and collusion with a rascally Land Register, he entered as homesteads some twenty-three sections of land, (14,720 acres), all of which he divided with the ring, to whom the land was ultimately sold. It was when the United States began suits against these fictitious names, that the undaunted villain arrested himself and crowd and turned his rascality to good account by charging the Government for his official services and for subsistence. He is now under bonds of $22,000 to answer to some thirty charges of perjury and other official crimes.—[S. F. Bulletin.

Letter from Round Valley.

ROUND VALLEY, Oct. 14.

MESSRS. EDS:—Sometime ago you desired a comprehensive statement of facts and figures relative to our crops of 1875, which undoubtedly would be interesting—much more so to defeated candidates than the perusal of election returns, which frequently engenders the opinion that the "dear people are elofaset"—but you know that quill driving by candle light, with sore, clumsy fingers, sleepy eyes, and drowsy brain, is not an agreeable evening entertainment for rustics who are compelled to fret and sweat profusely for fourteen hours daily. Then, after sundown, by way of amusement, comes milking which is a pleasant performance by moonlight, and then before the peep of day, pumping the cows is again resumed. We endorse the western man's decision, 'that farming is darned hard work."

THE CROPS AND WEATHER.

We have never before experienced a more favorable season for haying, harvesting and threshing than this Summer, No rain, winds gentle, earthquakes moderate, not even stout enough to wake nor shake up the babies. Tolerably fair crops of small grain have been raised this year, but not equal to expectations entertained a few months ago. Some farmers have been sadly disappointed in their "kalkerlashuns." One was expecting 30 tons, but when Westerville's thundering old machine got through chewing, blowing, spitting and separating straw, chaff, dirt and smut, there was found left about 12 tons of clean grain, others fell short a third.

HOW TO ESTIMATE A FIELD OF GRAIN.

The following method of making an estimate of the yield per acre of a growing crop of wheat, oats or barley, it is said, has been found correct: Frame together four light sticks, measuring exactly a foot square inside, and with this in hand, walk into the field and select a spot of fair average yield, and lower the frame square over as many heads as it will inclose and shell out the heads thus inclosed carefully, and weigh the grain. The product will be the 43,560th part of an acre's produce. To prove it, go through the field, and make ten or twenty similar calculations, and estimate by the mean of the whole number of results. The above will enable a person to make a closer calculation than guessing.

Considerable smut appeared on Bishop Creek this year. We had it strong in Round Valley last year but none this season. Precautions were taken in the Spring, the seed was cleaned and bluestoned, which pays handsomely. Try it.

THRESHING

Threshing is all through with in this section, and none but the women (?) feel sorry. Our periodical visitor, the veteran Westerville, who has done most of the threshing every season since grain was grown in the valley, will soon return to Fish Springs, where he will hang up the old machine until next July, when, of course he'll strike out again as usual. But in case he should die, we will "set" a threshing machine over his grave in commemoration of his service, and defy him to yell "more straw." West gave general satisfaction, having with him an excellent crew of men, fine weather prevailing during his entire operations here and on Bishop Creek. The new derrick with two forks working well in furnishing straw to the machine—a big improvement on forking by hand.

PIUTES AND PINENUTS.

The Piutes en masse have skedaddled to the mountains to harvest the abundant crop of pine nuts with which the trees are loaded this year. After seeing in the Spring a fine prospect for pine nuts the usual four bits a day was no inducement for them to work; they wanted a dollar. But during threshing the few natives who could be seen, demanded "A dollar 'n hap one day, heap hogadie me nikeum, whisky too, all same white man." And they got it too—that is the $1 50 per day. Pine nuts will be currency the coming Winter. A sack of pine nuts for a sack of flour has been the rule heretofore. Weather wise folks predict a hard Winter for us. They claim that a favorable pine nut season is always indicative of a following severe Winter. Time will tell. Let us prepare. JENKINS.

The following will set at rest all remaining doubts in the minds of voters as to the candidacy of Mr. Guinn, the Independent nominee for State Superintendent:

ROOMS OF THE REPUBLICAN STATE CENTAL COMMITTEE,
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2, 1875.

HON. SAMUEL COWLES:—
Chairman Ind. State Central Com.

DEAR SIR:—I see it stated in the newspapers that J. W. Guinn, Esq., the nominee of the Independent State Convention for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, has withdrawn from the canvass. Will you be kind enough to inform me whether you have certain knowledge of that fact, and thus much oblige,

Yours, very truly and respectfully,
ALEX. G. ABELL,

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct, 4, 1875.

ALEX. G. ABELL, ESQ.,

DEAR SIR:—In reply to the inquiries in your letter of the 2d instant, I am enabled to say, that the Committee of which I am Chairman, is in receipt of a letter from J. W. Guinn, Esq., the nominee of the Independent State Convention for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, in which he withdraws from the canvass.

Very truly yours,
SAMUEL COWLES,
Ch'm State Cen. Com. Ind. Party.

To Mine Owners.

Mine owners and superintendents may do themselves and certainly the country considerable good by complying with the following, one of a number we have at different times received from the same source. We have been urged to furnish a list of mine managers, so that they could be addressed personally upon the matter, but as we could not at the best give but an incomplete list, we herewith submit this as a general appeal, that each may answer for himself:

OFFICE OF THE U. S. COMMISSIONER MINING STATISTICS, 27 PARK PLACE,
New York, October 1, 1875.

DEAR SIR:—I am desirous of collecting for my Annual Report on Mining Statistics for 1875 trustworthy information concerning the condition of the mining industry in California during the current year, and take the liberty of asking your co-operation, so far as your vicinity is concerned. All sources of information will be acknowledged in the Report, unless otherwise requested by the contributor.

I desire information on the following points:

1. The name and postoffice address of owners or superintendents of producing mines in your vicinity (quartz or placer), and a list of quartz mills with the address of the owners.

2. A brief review of mining operations in your county or district, and notices of any important works, such as mills, mining ditches, tunnels, etc., and where practicable copies of reports of civil and mining engineers on such works.

3. QUARTZ MINING.—The names and brief notices of producing quartz mines in your county or district, with information relative to average yield, method and cost of treatment, etc. (Blank tables furnished on application to W. A. Skidmore, Box 1513, San Francisco.)

4. HYDRAULIC MINING.—The estimated area (in acres) and average depth of hydraulic ground now being worked in your vicinity, and the extent of such unworked deposits, with an estimate of the average yield of ground, per cubic yard; and a statement of the quantity and price of water (miner's inches) and the average length of the mining season. (This class of information cannot be conveniently compiled in tabular form.)

5. DRIFT MINING.—The average yield per car-load (stating the capacity of the car in cubic feet), with the method and cost of treatment; and where practicable descriptions of works of this class, comprising length of tunnel, depth of incline or shaft, width of channel, thickness and character of pay strata, etc.

6. TAILINGS.—Where operations are in progress for the removal of "tailings," the method employed, the extent and estimated value (per cubic yard) and any other pertinent information respecting this class of mining.

Superintendents and secretaries of Mining companies, mining engineers, U. S. Deputy Mineral Surverors, and all persons interested in mining are earnestly requested to assist me in the collection of this information, and thereby contribute to the dissemination of information respecting the mining interest of California and render an official and personal favor to myself. Very respectfully yours.

ROSSITER W. RAYMOND,
U. S. Commissioner Mining Statistics.

Please address communications and returns, within 30 days, to W. A. Skidmore, Box 1513, San Francisco.

No Redress.

Much attention has lately been attracted to the case of the Pala Indians, of San Diego county, who by process of law have been ousted from homes and lands they have highly cultivated and possessed for their own for over a hundred years. Judge S. C Hastings, a noted old land thief, and his associates bought up the Mission title, and by the usual tricks of the law, after two years litigation have finally succeeded in robbing these poor unsuspecting aborigines of their lands and in driving them by force from their homes One Nordhoff wrote the facts up for the consideration of the Department at Washington. It will be seen from Commissioner Smith's answer subjoined, that there is no redress for the Indians and that many others are liable to similar misfortunes. The letter contains these words:

The trouble with the Pala Indians in San Diego county, California, does not arise from any interference by the Department, as charged by Nordhoff, but from want of interference. The Department of the Interior has tried earnestly for two years past to secure possession to the Indians of the lands which they occupied, and from which they are being driven. The appropriations frequently asked for this purpose have not been granted by Congress, and what has now happened to two or three hundred Indians is likely to come any day upon four to six thousand of the Mission Indians of Lower California. Their trouble is radical consisting in the fact that in their transfer to the United States by Mexico they lost all rights and received none in return. These rights the Department has sought diligently to obtain, but they can only be conferred by Congress.

Rather Singular.

Yesterday a gentleman doing business on Fourth street, between J and K, while attempting to cut a piece from a large plug of chewing tobacco, came across a hard substance which successfully resisted his knife. Curious to know what it was he made an examination and discovered that the substance was a piece of bone little less than an inch in length, and subsequently it was ascertained that this bone was that of the first joint of some person's finger. The man who was about to use the tobacco concluded that he really didn't care about any just then—he'd skip a chew! The remains were conveyed to Clark & Davis' undertaking rooms, where the Coroner will probably be invited to hold an inquest to-day upon them.—[Sacramento Record-Union, October 9.

At Darwin.

Our old towney, F. E. Sargent, we learn, is located at Darwin, Coso Mining District, Inyo county, California. We further learn that he has been appointed Superintendent of the Modoc Consolidated mine. W. C. Marley will probably be his Secretary. Both are competent and trustworthy.—[Belmont Courier.

—When a Nevada photographer wants to make a good picture, he puts the sitter in his place, pulls out a navy revolver, cocks it, levels it at the man's head and says: "Now jist you sit perfectly still and don't move a hair; put on a calm, pleasant expression of countenance, and look right into the muzzle of this revolver, or I'll blow the top of your head right off. My reputation as an artist is at stake, and I don't want no nonsense about this picture."

—"Aunty, did God make that man?" whispered a little four-year-old to his companion, in the Jamaica Plain horse-car, as he looked askance at Mr. Wah Lee, one of the new laundrymen from the flowery kingdom, who sat opposite. "Certainly, my dear," was the reply; "and why do you ask such a question?" "Because, aunty, he didn't put the hinges to his eyes on straight," said our little incipient mechanical engineer.

—Yesterday morning when a man entered his house after an all night's absence, his clothes covered with blood and his hair full of grass, his wife sternly demanded: "Now, then, where have you been?"

"Whirvi' bin?"

"Yes, Sir?"

"Well," he replied, looking down at himself, "you kin call it blode up on a steamboat, or run over by a tornado—I ain't a bit particular which."

MARRIED.

At Cerro Gordo, September 28, this county, by C. F. Duval, J. P., WM. LYLE HUNTER to Miss CAROLINE LUCY DUVAL.

The reason why the above announcement has been so long delayed was probably because friend W. L. felt ashamed of having violated Rule X of a certain Cerro Gordo organization known as the Bachelors' Club, and wanted to keep his treason dark for fear of a disastrous effect on the already half demoralized miserable remainder of that club. He was the founder of the organization and introduced the said rule which reads as follows: "Any member of this Club who shall marry without the consent of two th'rds of the members shall be deemed guilty of trespass, and on conviction thereof, shall be fined in the sum of one dollar, which fine shall be given to the friends of unprotected old maids." We hear that Rule X has been suspended since it is known that its introducer has been contemplating this identical violation for the last three years! We extend our warm congratulations to friend Hunter and his fair bride, and wish them bon voyage, notwithstanding his misdemeanor to his club, and subsequent failure to let us know anything at all about it, even to the present time.

At Lone Pine, this county, October 13, by R. L. Peterson, J. P., CHOAG LONG to Miss LEE AAW.

No wine, no cards, no sabbee. At last accounts all doing well as might be expected under the circumstances, Justice Robert included.

October 5, at Darwin, this county, Justice A. C Hanson, officiating, WONG KEHOE, [not Tommy] to Miss LING TONG, both of Darwin, late of China.

Immediately after the ceremony the Justice and American witnesses started on a tour to the other end of town.

BORN.

At Big Pine, October 12, to the wife of HENRY GROVER, a son.

DIED.

At Bishop Creek, this county, October 10, MRS. JEANETTE, wife of T. D. LEWIS.

OBITUARY.

BISHOP CREEK, Oct. 13, 1875.

MESSRS. EDS:—We have had a death among us that has cast a gloom over our entire little valley.

Mrs. Jeanette W. Lewis the wife of T. D. Lewis departed this life on the 10th day of October, at 5 o'clock and 10 minutes P. M., after an illness of some four weeks which terminated in the typhoid fever. Through all her sickness she was patient and cheerful and bore up only as a genuine true woman could.

She was a noble woman, a generous, true and kind neighbor and friend, an affectionate and attentive mother and companion. She was universally respected by all, and loved by all who knew her best.

The funeral that took place on the 11th at 2 o'clock from the residence was the largest ever witnessed in our little valley, showing that the true worth of this most estimable woman was appreciated. ***

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Money Orders.

The several heavy mining incorporations beginning business at Darwin have adopted the money or furnace order system, the orders being paid off in gold coin or San Francisco checks on presentation at the respective offices in Darwin. The system is the most convenient for the companies and, within certain limits, perfectly satisfactory to the public. But it should be understood by parties desiring to pay bills at points not in easy communication with the check offices, that these orders do not pass as currency. The only exception, speaking for this place, are the Belshaw and Beaudry orders, which, now as heretofore, are taken the same as coin. The Panamint and Darwin orders are not, simply for the reason that there is scarce enough of them in circulation to justify the bother and delay in obtaining the lieu checks. It strikes us it would save the public considerable annoyance and no little loss if these companies would make special arrangements with our banking firm of Harris & Rhine to have these orders taken up. In that event the orders would be as good as the coin of the realm in all small transactions throughout the county, whereas, as it now is they have but a strictly local circulation. No discount is offered or demanded. They go at their face or not at all.

Busy Bee Lodge, I. O. G. T.

At the last regular meeting, last Wednesday night, all the military members of Busy Bee Lodge withdrew for the purpose of establishing a sister Lodge more convenient to the Post. This extensive withdrawal leaves Busy Bee Lodge very much reduced in membership but financially and in Lodge fittings in a very flourishing condition. Here, now, is a chance for young and old who believe temperance to be a good thing (and we have never yet seen a person who did not), to become members, to the profit of passing a pleasant social evening once every week, to say nothing of a much higher object. Considering the main object only as an abstract question, these meetings can but conduce to the benefit of all who attend in the knowledge gained by actual practice in conducting the business of public meetings and in social interchanges, the opportunities for which are here too much neglected and limited as well.

"Heap Cry."

The mahalas and younger Indians camped about town are having a lachymose time of it, to judge from the long continued sorrowful wailings and howlings which break upon the stillness of the calm, beautiful, though rather cool moon light nights. These lamentations are not caused by funeral subjects Bad whisky is the moving power. "Mahalas heap drunk, heap fight all time." To keep out of harms way the sober or well disposed of both sexes on these frequent occasions, have to seek a secluded sleeping place away off in the sage brush some where where the drunken idiots can't find them. How much happiness these people now enjoy since the statutes have been pronounced impracticable if not unconstitutional! Besides it opens a good trade by which the old bams can make a living.

Shooting at Lone Pine.

One day last week a young Mexican at Lone Pine went to gather up some loose hay left by a camping teamster. Another Mexican living near the premises claimed the hay as his perquisite, and with a view of dissuading the other one from the contemplated appropriation, opened on him with a revolver, and thereby saved his hay—but the other got a shot through an arm and leg each, and may lose both, possibly his life also. No complaint has been entered or arrests made, all the parties concerned being desirous of keeping the occurrence quiet or out of the Courts. Hence we are not able to give names.

Alleged Absconder Arrested.

Constables Brown and Frisbee arrested D. S. Inman here Thursday morning on a complaint of horse-stealing, sworn out by W. Bowman, both parties and officers being of Bishop Creek. It is charged that Inman was endeavoring to abscond, having Bowman's horse in his possession and leaving numerous creditors behind to mourn his departure. It is a two sided story, requiring legal investigation to show up the actual facts, which may not be as bad upon Inman as present appearances indicate—and may be worse. Inman says he was only on his way to Darwin to go into business there.

Fish Springs Precinct.

Some voters living south of what is known as the McChan place, a couple of miles north of the Post, have come to this place to vote, when in reality they belong in Fish Springs precinct, and will have to go them to exercise their great unalienable right of suffrage. The line between United States townships 12 and 13, which runs near the point above referred to, is the division line between the two votings precincts.

Promoted

By the death of Surgeon Reed, U. S. A., which occurred but a short time since at New Orleans, Dr. C. B. White, Camp Independence, becomes a full surgeon on the army list, with rank and pay of Major. That's the way it goes: One man goes down (to the grave) that another may come up, but, with all due respect for Surgeon Reed, deceased, we congratulate Dr White on this bit of good fortune.

The Ashim Party—Attempt to Assassinate B. Ashim.

B. Ashim, his mother and two sisters arrived here last night. It seems a most dastardly attempt was made to assassinate Ashim, and that, too, right in the midst of a stage full of women and children. A little judicious hanging would teach such barbarians as those would-be-assassins a lesson they richly deserve. The stage containing the Ashim party left Carson with seventeen passengers. It had barely cleared the town when three men rose up from an ambush in a corn field and commenced firing into the stage, five shots in all. Ashim returned four shots, by which time the frightened stage team had carried all out of reach. Fortunately, and by a miracle, as it were, no one in the stage was hit, although one ball struck Ashim's pistol but without injury to anyone. By the advice of friends in Carson, who had reason to anticipate this murderous attempt, Ashim had walked on out of town in advance of the stage, and was within a few rods of the ambushed Apaches when the stage came on and took him up. The firing commenced before he had fairly got into his seat. Had they recognized him previously there is no question but he would have been murdered then and there. Such high handed outrages are rarely ever justifiable in the eyes of a civilized community, and certainly not when the object of revenge was on his way to stand a trial and receive such justice as the law may award, as was the case in this instance. Ashim was not attempting to evade trial or justice, but exactly the reverse. And, anyway, men who will thus fire into a stage load of innocent passengers ought to be hunted down and treated as any other wayside murderers, and we don't doubt they will be.

Panamint.

Our brief visit to Panamint last week was so short we hardly feel justified in going into details. Suffice it to say that we feel encouraged in the future prospects of the camp. True, it has found a rival in Darwin, and met with the usual reverses experienced in all new mining camps after the first flush of excitement is over, but she has settled down to her work now in earnest—her men are all employed and no good miner or willing worker need look long for a job. This of itself speaks well for the future. So long as the mines look as well as they do now — the echo of the steam whistle is heard daily—the frequent shipment of bullion, so pure that for safety they run it in 400 pound bars, and so long as the men are sure of their pay for every hour's work, why should the plucky few who have expended so much in establishing themselves permanently in the town feel alarmed for the future destiny of Panamint. No one can go there and see the mint of money that has been expended, and say that it has been spent in vain. We were well repaid for the night ride up the hill, for the people are as hospitable as ever, and always make it pleasant for visitors. The News office was duly interviewed, and we found the proprietor, Mr. Harris in good spirits and sanguine as ever, but preparing for his new location in Darwin as soon as necessary transportation can be had. The office is beautifully situated, and were the editor of a romantic turn of mind or an unmarried man (for single men are always superlatively romantic) we don't think he would appreciate being lowered down from his castle in the air. In our next visit, which we hope is not far distant, we shall expect to see a change in the town, and that for the better.

Military Honor Lodge, I. O. G. T.

Friends of temperance will be pleased to note the fact of the establishment of another Lodge of Good Templars in our midst, viz: that of Military Honor Lodge at Camp Independence. It is composed wholly of members of Co. D, 12th U. S Infantry, and includes the commanding officer, Capt. Macgowan, who, we truly believe, can claim the model company of the regiment, if not of the service, a fact largely due to the high determination of so many of the men to leave whisky and its untold evils severely alone, a thing almost impossible to do except through a temperance organization of this kind. For two years past a large number of Co. D have been exemplary and welcome members of Busy Bee Lodge of this place, but as mentioned elsewhere, have withdrawn to establish a Lodge whose charter can and will go wherever Co. D goes. All the officers elect were duly duly installed by D. G. W. C. T. R W. Woolard, at the inauguration meeting held at Milton school house on the afternoon of last Thursday. Following is a list of the officers: W. C T., William Goodlow; W. V. T., John O'Dwyer; W. T., P. L. James; W. S., G. W. Ford; W. A. S., Charles Schillp; W. F. S., E. Cheatum; W. I. G, Walter Mills; W. O G., T O'Marra; W. C., J. J. Dowling; W. R. H. S., Charles O'Neil; W. L H. S., C. B Terry; P. W. C. T. and L. D., A. B. Macgowan. Lodge organized with eighteen charter members.

An Opportunity.

Our Adonises are, as usual, rather backward and very bashful as the surplus of pretty, bewitching and—we suppose—marriageable young ladies will testify. But now David comes to the front, and in the show case at Harris & Rhine's, where they keep an assortment of all the mysteries pertaining to a lady's toilet, may be seen a smiling photograph of the artful David labeled thusly: "The last chance! Only $1."

A "Naughts" Difference."

From a misunderstanding originally, or the doings of the terrible compositor, it don't make much difference which, the amount in silver bullion at the Surprise Valley Milling Company's office, alluded to by Mr. Rhine, as given in a local item last week, was $30,000 not $3,000.

Pine Mountain.

The Broder furnace, Pine Mountain, leaked the metal badly during a late run, necessitating a stop to cool down and partially rebuild. It was to start up again last Monday. It is possible that it will be removed to Sylvania where the ores can be much more cheaply extracted, while no trouble at all is experienced in smelting them, which is not the case, it seems, with those of Pine Mountain.

An Elopement.

It is with real regret we have to announce the elopement Miss Arminda McMurry, a daughter of J. W. McMurry, of Big Pine, with one Harry Burt. At last accounts they were on their way to Carson, having it is reported stopped at some point on the road long enough to get married. The elopement took place last Saturday evening.

Welcome Visitor.

Rev. M. W. Pratt, now of the Walker River circuit, formerly of this, paid his oid friends here a flying visit this week. He started on his return yesterday morning.

Thanks.

THE INDEPENDENT establishment, the Boomerang branch included, have to acknowledge the receipt of a highly appreciated favor in the edible line at the hands of Mr. C. A. Walters.

Preaching.

Rev. L. Case will preach in Lone Pine school house at 11 A. M., and at 7 P. M. in the Court Room in this place, to morrow.

Letter from Lone Pine.

MESSRS. EDS:—Since the junior of your press left here our poor minds and bodies have had no rest, as he gave us the Darwin fever, and caused our appetites to fail us by reason of too much study as how to manage to pick up some of those gold nuggets which our good friend Rhine went after.

RELATING TO BABIES.

The principal news from this place is increase in population, there being only eleven infants born within the last thirty days which (as Josh Billings says) "we don't think iz wery menny" for a large city. Friend Zaun thinks his is the belle of Lone Pine, but others think differently, as our school teacher can show a "gal baby" but three weeks old which weighs 12½ pounds. Certain poor old bachelors console themselves with calling to see the babies, then shrug their shoulders and sigh as they think what might and what ought to have been, but what is not.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. Shultie is now finishing a fine residence, Bill Govington being boss carpenter and a very good one too. Rittgers Bros are now at work putting up a fine residence having a basement cellar 18x22 with walls three feet thick.

SCHOOL RECORD.

Our teacher, H. C. Rittgers, is progressing finely in his school. But he complains of having no visitors. If you want to see a school conducted in No. 1 style I think you can find it here. Lone Pine has a teacher in him to be proud of. The following is a report of the first months school, ending October 8: Number of days taught 20; scholars enrolled, 28; days attendance 525; absence 35; average daily attendance 26¼; average daily absence 1¾.

HOODLUM OPERATIONS.

Some ignorant being one night two weeks ago, fired five shots through the Lone Pine school house, just to try the strength of his revolver I suppose. Two of the shots entered one of the north windows and passed out through the walls on the other side, while the other three shots passed through the weather-boarding and ceiling on the north side and lodged in the ceiling on the south side.

SPEDUNK.

Milton School District Meeting.

At a special meeting of the electors of Milton school district, Inyo county, Cal., held in the new school house of said district, on the 9th day of October, 1875,

Upon motion, Mr. Richard Terrill was elected chairman and W. A. Cassidy, Secretary.

The Trustees of Milton district submitted the following bills for approval of the electors, viz: J. S. Rothchilds & Co., $298 60; Augustus Stecker, $405; C. A. Walter, $95; making a total of $798 60, which bills upon motion were duly approved.

The Trustee further reported as follows: Cash received by subscription and paid to Rothschild & Co., $175; balance yet due by subscription, $135; making a total of cash and by subscriptions, $310, leaving a balance due and unpaid of $488 60.

On motion duly made and seconded, it was ordered that the trustees of said district order an election according to law, at such time and place as they may deem proper, wherein the electors of said school district shall vote for or against a tax to be levied for the purpose of paying off the remaining debt of $488 60 on said school house.

Upon motion duly made and seconded it was resolved that the proceedings of this meeting be published in THE INYO INDEPENDENT.

(Signed) W. A. CASSIDY, Secretary.

Corn in Kern County.

Capt. Noble informs us that he has corn that will yield one hundred bushels of corn to the acre, on his place about ten miles south of Bakersfield. We have as yet seen but little good corn raised in this county. It is generally planted too late, and up to this time has suffered for water before the corn was well set. Some of it was forced by copious irrigation, under a hot sun, and it ran into a towering stalk, as if it really had not time to stop and make corn. The result was one or two small ears dwarfed or unfilled to the stalk. We are now satisfied that the fault lay not in country, but in the cultivator, and something is due to the absence of good seed. If good seed is used, if the ground is properly prepared and planted at the proper time with judicious and not too frequent irrigation, the Kern valley will produce the champion corn of the State. Capt. Noble says his corn bears two and three large, fully developed ears to the stalk, and he is convinced that this is the result of care and judgment in its cultivation, the most common error among our corn growers being that they plant too late and irrigate too much.—[Courier.

A Fountain of Death.

On Netow Ridge, in this county, about four miles from Jacktown, and on the farm belonging to Henry Miller, there is what is called the gas spring. This is probably the greatest curiosity in Pennsylvania. The water is cold, but bubbles and foams as if boiling, but the greatest wonder is the inevitable destruction of life produced by inhaling the gas. No living thing is to be found within a circuit of 100 yards of the spring. The very birds, if they happen to fly over it, drop dead. We experimented with a snake of the copperhead variety on its destructive properties by holding it a few feet above the water. It stretched dead in two minutes. It will kill a human being in twenty minutes. We stood over it about five minutes, when a dull, heavy, aching sensation crept over us, and our eyes began to swim. The gas which escapes here is of the rankest kind of carbonic acid.—[Reading Eagle.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

$6 00 per Annum, in Advance.

Specimen Copies of THE ALDINE, 50 Cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.

Resolutions Adopted by the State Grange.

The State Grange, at a meeting held in San Francisco, October 16, adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the State Grange of the State of California do, and they unanimously petition President Grant to have immediate examination made by the Secretary of the Interior into the recent decision of Secretary Delano, by which hundreds of bona fide settlers on Los Mosquelumnes and other Spanish grants in San Joaquin and Stanislaus counties, in California, are being dispossessed of their homes and lands, for which they already hold, or are entitled to hold, United States patents, and that said decision be reversed if found incorrect.

Resolved, That this decision be sent direct to President Grant, under seal of the California State Grange, and that copies be sent to each of our Senators and Representatives from California.

Resolved, That we petition our State Legislature to pass concurrent resolutions instructing and requesting our members in Congress to request President Grant that such examination and reversal be made.

The following resolutions, presented by Delegate John Wood, was also adopted:

Resolved, That a Special Committee of five be appointed to prepare suitable measures and attend to the general interests of those in this State whose honors are jeopardized through the machinations of the land monopolies of this State.

The following members were then appointed as such Committee: Daniel Inman, Thomas E. Ketchum, W. L. Morton, Vital E. Bangs and Ezra Fisk.

Important Cases Before the United States Supreme Court.

The United States Supreme Court commenced its October term October 11. All the Justices were on the bench except Associate Justice Miller. Many attorneys were present, among them Attorney-General Pierrepont, Solicitor-General Phillips and ex-Attorney-General Williams. At the instance of the Attorney-General, October 26th was set for argument of the appeal of the United States from the decisions of the Court of Claims, the latter having made a decision favorable to the claim of the Union Pacific Railroad on account of transportation. Attorney-General Pierrepont appears for the Government and Sidney Bartlett, of Boston, and E. W. Houghton, of New York for the company. No case before the Supreme Court has had so much money interest as the present one, as it involves the capital stock of sixty-five millions of the company and interest for thirty years, etc., upward of two hundred millions of dollars.

—A number of things are true about David Sweatt of Webster, N. H., who is aged XC. years. He never saw a train of cars until last week, when he rode by rail to Concord; and yet he resides within 3½ miles of a railroad. He expressed great astonishment at the number of people on the train. He was never more than 40 miles from home, and his last previous visit to Concord was 30 years ago. Upon the same two acres of land he has raised corn every but two for the past 50 years, and finally and best of all, during his prolonged life he has never found it necessary to call in an M. D.

—A free bridge is usually considered a public blessing, but they do not take that view of it in Peoria, Ill. It being proposed to make the bridge free there across the Illinois River, a woman and a housekeeper enters her protest. "What will we do," she says, "with our vagrants, scamps, and scalawags in general if we have a free bridge?" Now, it seems these worthies are sent across the bridge to rid the city of them. Not having any means to pay toll back, they stay put out; but with a free bridge they would be back again. Wherefore the cry in Peoria is, "No free bridge until we get a workhouse!"

—With the lamented death of the famous trotting mare, "American Girl," in New York, Oct. 3d, the turf losses one of its finest steppers.

The Vote for Constitutional Amendments and the Constitutional Convention—Both Votes Non-Effective.

[From The Sacramento-Union, Oct. 16]

Considerable inquiry has been made of The Record-Union concerning the effect of the vote at the recent election for a Constitutional Convention, and also upon the proposed amendments to the State Constitution which were officially published in this paper for several weeks prior to the election. Several contemporaries, in referring to the matter, have fallen into error concerning it. The whole subject is capable of easy explanation. In the first place the official publication of the amendments proposed by the Legislature of 1873-4 was not for the purpose of having a popular vote taken thereon, and it will be remembered that the Governor's proclamation made no call for a vote upon amendments. If we may indulge a presumption as to the reason for the publication at all, it was undoubtedly the object of the law to inform the people of a subject matter upon which members of the Legislature, for whom the people were to vote and to elect, might be called upon to act, and thus directly the publication became of interest to the voters, although calling for no direct judgment at the ballot box. It follows that all the votes cast for the amendments were surplusage upon the ballots, and of no effect whatever.

Article X, section 1 of the Constitution provides: "Any amendment * * to this Constitution may be proposed in the Senate or Assembly; and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two Houses, such proposed amendment * * shall be entered on their Journals, with the yeas and neas taken thereon, and referred to the Legislature then next to be chosen, and shall be published for three months next preceeding the time of making such choice."

If the Legislature about to assemble shall agree to the amendments, they will then be submitted to a vote of the people in such manner and at such time as the Legislature shall direct.

In regard to the Constitutional Convention, section 2 of the same article of the State Constitution provides that if a Legislature deems it expedient, and shall recommended to the electors to vote for or against a Constitution Convention, and it shall appear upon such voting that a majority of the electors voting have voted in favor of calling a Convention, then the next Legislature shall provide for the Convention to be held within six months after the passage of the law so providing. Now the first step in this process was taken; the Legislature did submit the question of a Constitutional Convention to the electors voting September 1, 1875, but a majority of them did not approve. The vote for Governor stood: Irwin, 61,509; Phelps, 31,322; Bidwell, 29,752. Total 122,583. A majority of this aggregate vote would be 61,292, and hence that number of votes must have been cast for the Convention to make the recommendation of the Legislature in anywise effective. The fact is, that 34,374 votes were cast for the Convention, being 26,918 too few. That 24,552 votes were cast "Against Convention" is not an element to be considered in the matter, as negative votes were unnecessary; all silent ballots were negative votes, the Constitution requiring the affirmatives to be a majority of all the electors voting at the election and not upon the mere question. It is therefore to be seen, that the voting on both these propositions at the late election were non-effective. Some of the misapprehension on the subject arises out of a specimen of blundering legislation by the last Legislature. That body provided in the Act it passed recommending to the electors to vote on the question of a Convention (Stat. 1873-4, p. 732), that "a majority of the aggregate vote of the State cast for members of the Legislature" should be the basis for determining the wish of the people in the premises. It will be apparent to the dullest intelligence that by no caculation with legislative totals at the last election can the aggregate vote of the State be ascertained. For instance, in Sacramento county there were sixteen candidates, distributed upon four tickets. By what system of computation can any one take the votes for the twelve Assemblymen and arrive at the true aggregate vote? The thing is simply imposiible.

Kernville Mines.

The mining interests of Kernville are fast becoming made manifest, and new discoveries are continually being made. The indications are now, that it will be one of the liveliest camps in the State. The Bunnell Gold and Silver Mining and Milling company has been recently incorporated with 100,000 shares of $100 each, and elected the following officers: Col. L. W. Burr, President; J. S. Collins, Secretary; J. Dunn, Treasurer, and A. Bunnell, Superintendent. The Company has run a tunnel 49 feet and struck the lead at a depth of 109 feet, and found a vein 22 feet wide, three feet of which is ruby silver, and assays as high as $1,000 per ton. The general average of the assay is $348 73 of silver, $53 23 in gold; making a total of $401 96 per ton. It is all milling rock, and we understand that the company contemplate putting up a mill immediately. Kern river furnishes an abundance ot water power for a great number of mills.—[Visalia Times.

Personal Items.

Ida Lewis has renewed her heroism by rescuing another man from drowning. Her first exploit was in 1866, when, in one of the roughest days, she saved the life of a soldier who had ventured out in a skiff. In 1867, while a gale was raging, two men set out to cross the harbor with several sheep, and in trying to rescue one that had fallen overboard, came near swamping their boat; seeing their peril from the window of her father's light-house, Miss Lewis went to their aid, and after landing them safely, went back and rescued the sheep. But her greatest exploit was performed on the 29th of March, 1869, when a boat containing two young soldiers and a boy was struck by a squall and overturned. Though ill at the time, Ida rushed out of the house, launched her life-boat, sprang in, with neither hat on her head nor shoes on her feet, reached the wreck just in time to save the two soldiers as they were about losing their hold from exhaustion, the boy having meanwhile perished, and rowed them to the light-house.

It is said that the Queen of Holland speaks with fluency every language spoken in Europe; and on one occasion, on receiving the Hungarian delegates of some learned society, among many others who attended, her Majesty addressed these gentlemen in Latin, pleading an excuse that she had not studied the language of Hungary. She is able to speak with equal fluency the German, French, English, Danish, Italian, Spanish, Russian, and Swedish languages.

Lord Houghton (Monckton Milnes), who is doing the West before coming to New York and other Eastern cities, is described as "a fresh-looking old gentleman of medium stature, a little inclined to corpulency, and somewhat nervous in his movements. He talks rapidly, yet utters his words with great precision and with but little of the accent peculiar to Englishmen. He asks a great many questions about the country, climate, soil, people, places, etc., and stows away in his mind the information received with evident satisfaction."

Tennessee's greatest man died a few days since, at Greenville. His name was Slusher, and he was nineteen years of age. Had it not been for a bend caused by rheumatism he would have been nine feet high. His boot was eighteen inches long, and one of his hands was about the size of four ordinary ones. He could sit on a chair and pick up any thing three feet from him, which was an advantage. His chest was seven and a half feet in circumference, and his coffin was eight and a half feet long, twenty-eight inches wide, and two and a half feet deep.

It has been supposed that at the death of President Polk's widow, Polk Place would come into the possession of the State of Tennessee, and it has been suggested that a mausoleum be erected on the grounds, to contain the remains of the three Presidents from that State. It appears that it was Mr. Polk's desire to secure his homestead in the possession of relatives, and by the terms of his will the property is to be held in trust by the State of Tennessee, the Governor of which is to designate some person to occupy the premises, always prefering the nearest of kin by the name of Polk. The will, it is believed, was made while Mr. Polk was President, and contains some curious provistons.

A correspondent of Notes and Queries refers to the daily correspondence kept up for a year between Swift and Dr. Thomas Sheridan, the peculiarity of which was that each letter was to be the unpremeditated effusion of five minutes' writing. He mentioned the curious "last words" of Dr. Sheridan. "He was sitting in the house of a friend on September 10, 1738, and the conversation turned on the force of the wind and its direction. Sheridan said, 'Let the wind blow east, west, north or south, the immortal soul will take its flight to the destined point,' leaned back in his chair, and expired."

In Last Leaves from The Journal of Julian Charles Young occurs the following curious paragraph: "Sat for two hours with Lady Brownlow and Lady Marian Alford. The latter told me—we were talking of Shakespear's plays—that her brother, Lord Northampton, had in his possession a document making over, on certain conditions, a grant of land in Fifeshire to the Thané of Glamis and Cawdor, given by Duncan, and signed in a vigorous maculine hand by Lady Macbeth, to which was appened Macbeth's mark."

Among remarkable deaths reported in Paris is that of a man who, the French think, may have been the involuntary cause of their defeat at Waterloo. Pierre Cockx, a naturalized Belgian, was arrested by the army of Blucher, tied to a horse's tail and made to serve as a guide during the terrible days of June 15 and 16, 1815—at least so the French obituary says. Pierre has just died at Nogent, at the age of seventy-five. The papers state that he never forgot the horse's tail, and dreamed nightly of the pistols that were held over him while in that uncomfortable position.

Admiral Porter's son, David E., has sailed for Egypt, where he is to occupy a position on the staff of the Khedive.

—Why is Barnum like the Atlantic coast? Because he is the great American shore.

—"Is that clock right over there?" asked a visitor the other day. "Right over there?" said the boy; "tain't nowhere else."

The Remaining October Elections.

Monday, October 25 elections are to be held in Oregon and Colorado. In Oregon it is not general, but a special election, to fill the vacancy in Congress caused by the death of Geo. A. La Dow (Democrat), who was elected last Fall by a plurality vote of 9,642 against 9,340 for Richard Williams (Republican) and 6,350 for Timothy W. Davenport (Independent). This year also there are three candidates in the field: Lafayette Lane (Democrat), Henry Warren (Republican), and Geo. M. Whitney (Independent). The Republican papers of Oregon express great confidence in the result of the coming contest. The Democrats, however are equally confident, and the friends of Lane predict his election by a handsome majority. Lane is a Roman Catholic, but how far that fact is likely to affect his prospects it is not easy to judge. In Colorado the election is for members of a Convention to prepare a Constitution, preliminary to the admission of the Territory into the Union as a sovereign State on the centennial day of next year. The Enabling Act passed by Congress for this purpose was approved by the President on the 3d of March last.

I. O. G. T.

The sixteenth annual session of the Grand Lodge of California, Independent Order of Good Templars, October 5, was attended by about 200 delegates. The report of Geo. Kalzenstein, G. W. S., shows a membership of 14,112 which is an increase of 1,255 over last year. Rev. Jabez Walker was re-elected G. W. C. T., and Mrs. A. G. Clark, of Napa, was elected G. W. V. T. The next session is to be held at Oakland.

The S. F. Ledger.

The Sunday edition of The San Francisco Ledger is something of an illustrated paper, and altogether is one of the most complete, cheapest and best filled papers now offered in the State. Whenever fairly introduced to the public The Ledger must certainly command a large share of patronage. The Sunday paper only costs $1 20 a year.

Official Changes.

It is said that a number of changes among Pacific Coast office-holders are imminent. W. R. Wheaton is to succeed LaGrange as Superintendent of the Mint; T. G. Phelps to take the place of Shannon as Collector of the Port, and Shannon to become Assistant U. S. Treasurer in place of the present incumbent, Sherman.

New Patents.

Through dispatches to Dewey & Co., Patent Agents, San Francisco, we receive the following advance list of U. S. Patents granted to Pacific Coast inventors, viz: A. L. Bobet, S. An Interest-ing Fact.

A man in San Jose holds a heavy judgment, which was originally on a note for $1,000 drawing ten per cent. per month, interest to be compounded monthly. Two hundred and ninety-one months have elapsed since the judgment was given, and the present value amounts to the neat little sum of $1,110,102,826,763,480.

Riot.

There has just been a terrible riot among the coal miners at Shenandoah, Pennsylvania. A number of men were killed and many wounded. The trouble is said to have been caused by mixing miners of various antagonistic nationalities to work in the mines. At last accounts the riot was quelled.

Metallurgy.

The Mining and Scientific Press is running a series of articles, written by Samuel Burnett, relating to the copper-silver ores of Inyo county—how to work them, etc. We should think these articles would be of material interest to our mining men.

The Outlook.

We have received the first number of the new paper at Santa Monica, called The Santa Monica Outlook. In all respects it is a very creditable paper for even a more real city than this embryo one by the sea.

Annoying Him.

The Government is annoying a gentleman named G. W. Bullock about the payment of $16,000. It is a little balance on account of his Freedman's Bureau disbursements.

—Don't fret. The world will move on as usual after you are gone.

THE EASTERN ELECTIONS.

The returns of the elections in Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska and New Jersey, though not yet entirely complete, show clearly that the Democratic tidal wave, which some sanguine people thought was to sweep everything, was not much of a wave after all. It struck the rocks of hard money and the public school system and was broken.

In Ohio, Hayes' majority, though very much less than at first reported, is 4,753. Returns have been received from all the counties of the State, which are considered as correct as can be obtained until the official returns are received by the Secretary of State. The official returns may vary this count 300 either way. The Republicans have an assured majority of seventeen in the house of Representatives, and three certainly, and possibly five, in the Senate. The balance of the Republican State ticket is probably elected, but the official returns must decide the respective majorities.

In Iowa the Republican victory was overwhelming, Kirkwood for Governor having 35,000 majority. His election was expected even by the Democrats, but not by so large a majority. In the Legislature the Republicans gain twenty members, or 92 majority on a joint ballot. It is more than probable that the school question had much to do with results in Iowa, and in fact all the others. The Democratic party as a mass are just as sound on that question as the Republicans. But whatever opposition which has been manifested against our public school system comes from a faction of the Democratic party, which party was thus made responsible for the proposed dangerous innovation. The result in New Jersey shows, however, that this faction is much more insignificant in numbers than has been thought, the vote on the proposed Constitutional Amendments showing it to be only 2,000 against 90,000.

Nebraska has gone Republican, according to expectation, giving something over 6,000 majority for the Republican State officers.

The great center of interest has been Ohio, first as it was one of the great central, populous States; second because it was the chosen field in which to test the new departure on the money question. To lend it an additional interest, this rag money advocacy by the Democrats was a most radical departure from all the traditions of the party, and really the first positive or affirmative position the party has taken bearing upon any national issue for many years. During these years the party has been content to take a simple negative or opposition stand against Republican measures until this election, leading out in no new ones. The result shows that the effort was an error, and aside from a trifling matter of party pride, the Democratic defeat in Ohio, as touching upon the money question, gives as much satisfaction to a large portion of the Democratic party as to the Republicans. This is the case particularly with the Democrats of this coast, who, of course, have never been willing to father roaring Bill Allen's rag baby. The rag baby is now conceded to be exceedingly dead, and they want it to lie undisturbed. Nor is it likely its father, roaring Bill, the defeated candidate on this issue for the Ohio Gubernatorial chair, and conditional candidate for the Presidency, will ever recover from the depression superinduced by the loss of his rag baby. Tilden of New York is now considered the Coming Democratic Man.

To the Farmers of California.

There is at the present time a large number of good eastern farm hands in the State, many of them young married men with their wives, seeking employment. They mostly desire permanent work, and will labor for reasonable wages if such work is given them. We regard the present, in consideration of the above facts, as the best opportunity California farmers have ever had to begin a most desirable change in the labor system of the State—to give permanent employment to good, steady laborers instead of temporary work to those of a worthless character.

There is also a large number of Eastern people with their families here, endeavoring to obtain land on which to make for them a live ihood—mostly wanting to rent farms on shares.

Both these classes of people are daily and hourly applying to the Sacramento Valley Bureau of Information for assistance in obtaining their several wants. If you want labor of the kind described, send us your orders naming the price you can pay. If you have land for sale or rent in any manner, send us a description and terms, and such other information as will enable the Bureau to serve you. The Bureau is doing a good work for the country, and by giving it your business you can assist it in that work, and without expense to yourselves, serve your own business interest. Direct to

The Boyhood of Farragut.

A clergyman gives the following account of an interview he had, a few years since, with the fighting old Admiral:

I preached on Sunday in the parlors at Long Branch. The war was over, and Admiral Farragut and his family were spending the Summer at the Branch. Sitting on the portico of the hotel, Monday morning, he said to me: "Would you like to know how I was enabled to serve my country? It was all owing to a resolution I formed when I was ten years of age. My father was sent down to New Orleans, with the little navy we then had, to look after the treason of Burr. I accompanied him as cabin-boy. I had some qualties that I thought made a man of me. I could swear like an old salt; could drink a stiff glass of grog as if I had doubled Cape Horn, and could smoke like a locomotive. I was great at cards and fond of gaming in every shape. At the close of the dinner one day my father turned everybody out of the cabin, locked the door, and said to me:

"David, what do you mean to be?"

"I mean to follow the sea"

"Follow the sea! Yes, be a poor miserable, drunken sailor before the mast, kicked and cuffed about the world, and die in some fever hospital in a foreign clime."

"No," I said, "I'll tread the quarter deck and command, as you do"

"No, David; no boy ever trod the quarter deck with such principles as you have, and such habits as you exhibit. You'll have to change your whole course of life if you ever become a man."

"My father left me and went on deck. I was stunned by the rebuke and overwhelmed with mortification. 'A poor, miserable, drunken sailor before the mast, kicked and cuffed about the world, and to die in some fever hospital!' That's my fate is it? I'll change my life, and change it at once. I will never utter another oath, I will never drink another drop of intoxicating liquors, I will never gamble. And, as God is my witness, I have kept those three vows to this hour. Shortly after, I became a Christian. That act settled my temporal, as it settled my eternal destiny."—[Presbyterian Banner.

How's This.

Some months since an Arizona dispatch gave the details of a bloody encounter said to have occurred in Wallapai, in which Dr. Joseph Lesesne lost his life. This was assumed to be Dr. Lesesne, previously a well known physician and resident of Cerro Gordo. But that story is all spoiled according to this, which we clip from The Panamint News of the 6th instant:

"Joseph Lesesne, M. D., arrived here last Friday from Wallapai District, Arizona, and after stopping all day to receive the hearty greetings of numerous friends and acquaintances, took his departure for Darwin, where he will locate for the practice of medicine. The Doctor is well known in Inyo county, has had much experience as an army physician and surgeon, and no doubt will be received by the people of Darwin and surrounding country in a manner commensurate with his talents and ability. The Doctor had some fabulous tales, which he recited to us, of the richness of the ore being discovered in Arizona, all being confirmatory of the reports we see published in papers, and says that all that Arizona needs to make it a great mining country is a railroad, or cheaper transportation facilities—and that's about what ails Panamint.

A Mad Dog, Nearly.

A dog, exhibiting symptons of hydrophobia, yesterday forenoon created quite an excitement at the corner of Buel and Clark streets. He frothed freely at the mouth, ran around for a while in a circle, barking and snapping at everything animate and inanimate that came in his way, and finally, after making several unsuccessful attempts to gain an entrance through a solid brick wall, found the door of the Senate Saloon, through which he passed and for some time held exclusive possession of the premises. He was finally dislodged, however, and struck a bee line up Buel street, and, for ought we know to the contrary, is running yet. It is maintained by many that no actual case of hydrophobia has ever occurred on the Pacific coast, but we have known of a number of instances in this town where dogs have displayed all the symptoms of rabidness, caused, it is said, by a distemper engendered by the poisonous fumes of the furnaces; and while, perhaps, they were not actually afflicted with hydrophobia, we are of the opinion that a bite from a dog in that condition would be anything but conducive to the health of the person receiving it, and it would be a safe practice, whenever a dog is taken in that way to put him out of existance as speedily as possible.—[Eureka Sentinel, Oct. 17.

Baptized by Mistake.

Some of our worthy colored brethren of the Baptist persuasion had a baptism down at the creek last Sunday, and the ceremony attracted a very large crowd of people. Mrs. Pitman's colored servant girl was very anxious to be present, and, as it was not her Sunday out, she slipped away from the house while the dinner was cooking, and went around in her working clothes. Her interest was so intense that she stood close to the minister, who was in the water while the ceremony proceeded. After six or seven had been dipped, the clergyman, filled with enthusiasm, seized her and pulled her into the water. She resisted, but the minister imagined that she was only afraid of the coldness of the water, so before she could explain the situation he soused her. She came up sputtering, and excloimed:

"What you doin? Lemme go, I tell you!"

But he exerted his stength, and sent her "ker-chunk" below the surface again. She emerged, clawing the air wildly and shouting:

"G'way from heah! Don't you chuck me under agin, you nigger!"

But the clergyman was inexorable, and he plunged her under a third time, and held her there for a minute, so as to let it soak in and do her good. Then she came up and struck for the shore, and standing there looking like a draggled mermaid cut in ebony, she shook her fist at the astonished pastor, and shrieked:

"Oh I'll fix you! I'll bust the head of you or'nary trash! sousin' me in dat dare creek and nearly drowned me, when you knowd well enough all de time dat I'se a Methodist, and bin christened by dem dat's yer betters, and knows more about religion dan all de Baptisses dat ever shouted, you mis'able black scum! and me got the rheumatiz enough to set me crazy! Oh; I'll see what de law kin do for you! I'll have you 'rested dis very day or my name's not Johanna Johnson, you wooly-headed herrin! You hear me."

Then Johanna went home to redress, and the ceremony proceeded. Miss Johnson is now persuaded that the Baptists are not any better than pagans.

The Work on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

[From The Bakersfield Californian, Oct. 4.]

From Mr. Crocker we get particulars of the advance of the construction towards Los Angeles. There are now five hundred animals and twenty five hundred men at work in the Tehachapai Pass, and preparations are making to shelter both men and animals the coming winter. Very little snow falls on the mountain, but the cold winds and rains will call for protection as loudly as the deep snows of the higher Sierras. All the force that can be used to advantage is employed. On Saturday, daylight shone through tunnel No. 2, a cut of over two hundred feet. There are fourteen tunnels being cut, of different lengths, in the Pass. The large number of men and horses is calling for immense supplies, and while the animals are consuming hay at the rate of one thousand bales per month, the Chinese are gathering all the hogs on the Island for food.

At the San Fernando mountain the big tunnel is already cut a distance of 1,400 feet. When finished it will be a mile and a quarter in length. It is intended to complete the line to Los Angeles by the first of July next, and the work to be done is enormous. The hauling of the one million feet of timber for the San Fernando tunnel a distance of fourteen miles is no small affair. Mr. Crocker brought down five huge boxes of silver and a good supply of gold notes to pay off the men Sunday, a good part of which is distributed among the merchants and farmers on the Island. The expenditure will materially aid the growth of the country, and the completion of the road will make up for the loss of it by bringing us nearer to the more thickly settled portions of the State.

A Car Load of "Instant Death."

The Salt Lake Tribune says that as a freight train, bound west, left Bryan, on the Union Pacific, a few days ago, the engineer heard a singular cracking, and thinking there might be something wrong with his locomotive, stopped the train and examined the engine, which was found in good trim. An examination of the train was then made, and in the center was found a car containing some sort of fluid which was leaking through upon the track in drops. The car was opened and inside were discovered a number of large tanks labeled glycerine. The car was side-tracked at Granger. In moving it the wheels passed over a drop of it, when it exploded with a report like a pistol. The car was consigned to a firm in San Francisco, but the company have been unable to find who shipped it. It is supposed to be nitro glycerine. The railroad men have tested it by placing a drop of it on the track and striking it with a hammer, which caused a loud report. A few shavings that had been lying in the car became saturated with it, and were laid on the ground and struck with a stone, which caused them to fly in every direction. A track has been built away from the main track, and the car run on it. What to do with it puzzles ever one. There must be from 1,000 to 1,500 gallons in it.

Cake for Canaries.

All kinds of cake are hurtful for canaries. They thrive best on the simplest and most natural food for them. Such food as contains salt should be avoided, as it injures them and makes them liable to disease. Feed canary seed, hemp sparingly, plenty of green food like apples, with cuttle-fish bone.

Earthquake up the Coast.

The Eureka Standard (Humboldt county) of the 2d instant says of the earthquake felt there Sept 30th: Mother Earth, in her last tremble, created quite a commotion among animals. At several stables the horses uttered continuous and peculiar sounds during the vibrations. The cattle, numbering about twenty yoke, used on Carson's logging claim some seven or eight miles from Eureka, bellowed as if they were dying. One of the men engaged on this claim says that the rubbing and falling of trees and breaking of limbs, combined with the motions of the earth, was truly sublime.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Hutching's Party.

This party, to which we have refered several times, consists of J. M. Hutchings, Prof. W. E. James, Photographer, Dr. A. Kellogg, Botanist, Ed. Bedford and Geo. Stanley. Dr. Kellogg was here on a mountain exploration with John Muir two years ago. The party returned Saturday last from an expedition to King's River Canyon, and have now gone northward. The following notes of distances and altitudes will be of interest: From this place to Todd's place, foot of mountain, is 7 miles, the altitude there being 6,300 feet, showing a rise of 2,230 in that comparatively level looking stretch; thence, to Onion Valley above Kearsarge mill, 8 miles, altitude 9,400 feet, thence to main summit, 3½ miles where the height is 11,920 feet; to Little Summit 3 miles, descending to 10,735 feet; Bub's Creek, 10 miles, the last four exceedingly rough and precipitous, descending nearly 2,000 feet in three miles; Bub's Creek to King's River Canyon 10 miles, the altitude at that point being 5,150 feet. The canyon is thirteen miles long, the lower end having an altitude of 4,470 feet. The most prominent peak seen from this valley is the "Watch Tower," a part of the south wall. The view presented by this valley and surroundings is pronounced as one of the finest in some respects, and most picturesque in the world. Several grassy vales, one of three or four miles in length are found on the route, "where, thank God," say the explorers, "no sheep have yet found their way"—simply because inaccessible to that kind of stock. Numerous lakes are to be seen, the largest, about a half a mile in length, just to the west of Little Summit. From the figures given it will be seen that it is just about 40 miles from here to the river, which affords unequaled fishing. The party obtained a number of excellent photographic views during this trip, also, interesting botanical and other specimens. As a basis of comparison we will state that the altitude of this place is calculated at 4,060, Camp Independence 4,070 feet.

Needn't Cuss the Printers.

Certain parties, particularly of Pine Mountain, not finding their names on the Great Register at the September election, straightway fell to swearing at the printers, to-wit this office, because of the omission. We are pained they should have so ignorantly wasted their breath in that way. Not a single name or part of any name found in the copy was omitted by the printers, at that time, before or since. It is altogether likely these misused individuals feel better now that they find their names on the supplemental list, which includes all registered after the fifth day of last August at which time the main book came into the printer's hands, all subsequent registrations being held in the Clerk's office till the fourth of the present month. All those, should there be any, registered since October 4 still remain in the Clerk's manuscript, that being strictly in accordance with the provisions of the Code. Next time if you don't register until after the beginning of the last thirty days before election, call on the County Clerk for a certificate of registration, which you will certainly obtain if you have registered, then show that to the election officers and they will let you vote whether your name is on the printed list or not—and it is certain not to be if not registered before the legal limit has expired, as above mentioned. Meantime don't swear at the printers and expose your ignorance.

The Cerro Gordo Gold Find.

Some two weeks since we made mention of rather an exciting discovery of gold on the dumps of some silver-lead mines of Cerro Gordo. Since then we have seen a very fine specimen of about three ounces weight, being quartz and gold in nearly equal proportions. It is found in quartz boulders of nearly uniform shape but of all sizes. The boulders containing the gold are heavily coated with iron rust or something of that nature, so much so that no metal had been seen or suspected to exist in the quartz until some months since when some Mexicans working the lead mine by contract happened to break a rich piece exposing the gold. The discovery was kept secret for a long time, it seems, at least so far as the owners of the mine, Belshaw & Co., were concerned. In that period the Mexicans, it is said, managed to get away with about $3,000 of the richer specimens. It was soon found that much of this quartz had been thrown on the waste dump of this and also another mine or tunnel near by containing a similar deposit. Hence, these dumps have been pretty thoroughly picked over since. Altogether it is rather remarkable to find rich nodules of gold quartz in a lead mine. It is quite likely this gold quartz has heretofore contributed much to the value of the lead bullion from the Cerro Gordo furnaces, and that it will continue to do so hereafter.

Earthquake.

There was quite a noticeable little temblor here at a few minutes past 5 P. M. election day. The shake itself was not over five seconds in duration, though the preceding and concluding roar was somewhat longer, and was very much like old times when such things were of almost hourly occurrence.

Preaching.

Rev. Mr. Lambert of Bishop Creek will preach in this place to-morrow night.

Has a Runaway.

Rev. L. Case drives a pair of hard-bitted mustangs to his buggy. The other day these mustangs assisted materially in spreading the Gospel over a portion of the country between here and the Post. It happened in this way: Mr. Case was driving quietly along when a brewery wagon drove suddenly up from the rear. One of the mustangs got frightened at the encroachment of lager beer, and, springing ahead, broke a single-tree. The other then attempted to do a similar thing but only succeeded in getting up a high and dangerous rate of speed. As was afterwards ascertained, the wheels on one side at a time would clear as much as eighteen feet of ground at a single jump. It was no matter about the broken single-tree now, for the whole draft was upon the lines. The result was the the foot rest and dash-board both went by the board, and soon after Mr Case himself, who, rolling over and over in the sand, still for a time holding the lines, effected the spread of gospel before alluded to. This is not a Case in which we would think of offering a miserable pun, but we are pleased to know that Mr. Case's case suffered scarcely the slightest inward or outward injury—but that buggy was in a sorry case, indeed, when those mustangs got done with it.

A Native's Shadow.

Ye Lokle, after a deal of coaxing and complimenting Mrs. Captain Jim (the aboriginal office-sweep) on her Joan of Arc statue, her gazelle optics and porcupine tresses, succeeded in inducing her to sit for a photograph, but when the artist wheeled his instrument into position and took deliberate aim at her, she commenced to rise, and seeing him stick his head into the other end of the howitzer-looking thing she come to the conclusion it must be a breech-loader and tried to make a break for the door. However after considerable assuring a focus was obtained and now Captain Jim smiles out from the negative as radiant as a goose looking into a bottle.

Personal.

W. B. Daughterty, County Clerk elect, is now at Watsonville on a visit to his father and other relatives.... Paul Bennett, Esq, has gone to Mono county to attend court there....John Reddy returned a few days since from a visit to Darwin....Mrs. P. Reddy is expected here in a day or two from her extended eastern trip....Chris. Engle has sold out his blacksmith shop at Big Pine, and is floating away to Darwin. Electioneerers, too numerous to mention in detail, have all gravitated to their respective homes after their extended peregrinations, and now feel much better no doubt.

Gets 150 Days.

The other day down at Lone Pine a Portuguese, named John Monterio, fell out with the "Blue Tailed Fly," and mauled her. He was hauled up before Justice Peterson on a charge of assault, but became so obstreporous in court that Justice Bob had to send him up for 150 days in default of $150 fine for contempt of court, so Constable Grothey brought him up yesterday and consigned him to the hospitalities of Sheriff Moore.

Voted Anyway.

If voters generally had had the pluck of P. P. Dow, the crippled veteran stagedriver, the sum total of the vote at the last election would not have been so miserably small. Notwithstanding a broken arm, just beginning to knit, and other severe hurts, he had himself carried in a chair to the polls so that he could deposit a square vote.

Gave It Up.

The boys did the fair thing the other day when that demand was made upon them for certain keepsake jewelry in their possession. Finding flight useless, and the original soft, binding ties had been severed, they each followed the illustrious example of Zaccheus and came down without a murmur.

Justices for the Sixth Township.

At Darwin W. T. Grant received 167 and Thos. Power 73 votes for Justices of the Peace. This township includes Panamint, the vote of which has not been made known. Besides the above, J. W. McManus received 69, Thos Hogan 59 and A. C. Swasey 32 votes for the same office.

Darwin Brewery.

Parties of bibu'ous propensities whether visiting or resident at Darwin, will be pleased to know that Joe Davis has there established a complete brewery and is prepared to accommodate all who may favor him with their custom.

Light Vote.

The vote in this county was smaller even than anticipated. One of the larger precincts, Lone Pine, did not, for reasons best known to a few, open the polls at all. Neither was any election held at Swansea, which, however, is a small precinct.

The Ball.

The ball at Milton school house Friday night, last week, passed off very well, though the attendance, especially from this place, was not as large as it ought to have been, the object considered.

J. P.'s at Bishop.

At Bishop Creek G. C. Alexander received 46 votes for Justice of the Peace, and was elected. Next on the list was C. H. Walcott, who got 33 votes, which we presume elects him, also.

Dr. Stoeckly.

This well-known and popular dentist has again taken rooms at the Blaney House, where he holds himself in readiness to perform dental work of all kinds. He will remain but a short time.

Fish Springs.

Elihu Smith was elected Justice of the Peace for Fish Springs Township.

That Attempt upon Ashim's Life—Full Particulars.

We have seen a number of different accounts of the latest attempts of the Perasich brothers and others to murder B. Ashim near Carson, but all more or less incorrect as to details as we have ascertained them from those who ought best to know.

THE ASHIM PARTY

consisted, besides himself, of Mrs. M. A. Ashim, his mother, her daughters, Mrs. E. K. McNicol, and Miss May Ashim, and Mr. M. Levin. Among other passengers on the stage at the time were Miss Kate Cook, Mrs. Keene and two childrens, residing at Teel's Marsh, Victor Fernbach and S. Pinchower of Columbus, besides others, names to us unknown. Prior to starting for this place it was arranged that Mrs. Ashim and younger daughter, then at Eureka, Nevada, should meet B. Ashim and his sister, Mrs. McNicol, both from San Francisco, at Reno. The party from San Francisco arrived two days or more in advance and went on to Virginia City, whence, on the following day Mrs. McNicol returned to Carson.

SHE WAS RECOGNIZED

by a speckled faced, erysipelas marked Sclavonian waiter at the Ormsby House, and thus it came about that the Perasich brothers of that city were put upon the qui vive, and that they, with Speckled Face, prepared themselves to murder Ashim on sight. Ashim subsequently passed through from Virginia to Reno, where he met his mother and younger sister, with whom he returned to Carson on Wednesday of last week arriving about 5 in the morning, and but a few moments before stage time. While he was taking breakfast at the Ormsby House, Speckle Face notified a Perasich, who, with another man stationed themselves, revolver in hand at the dining room door, waiting for Ashim to come out. Ashim was made aware of this fact, and was advised to leave the hotel by a side door and proceed on down the road, where he would soon be overtaken and picked up by the stage which was then hauled up to the office preparing to start. He did so. Meantime, the remainder of the family and passengers, having no knowledge of Ashim's departure, proceeded to take their places in the stage, Perasich and his chum (not Speckled Face) narrowly watching and peering in the stage after all had taken seats. One of the two then desired to be booked for a passage, but Superintendent Peck, being aware or suspicious of the contemplated murder, declined to give him or any Sclavonian a seat in that particular stage that day. As Ashim did not present himself Perasich and his pal, whoever he may be, and Speckled Face then took the stage road south, and open bosomed shirts (not having taken time to fully dress so early in the morning) to overtake the proposed object of their vengeance, who, as they rightly surmised, had gone ahead as before stated. Ashim, by this time, had proceeded, walking rapidly, about a half mile. Looking back, naturally enough under the circumstances, he saw the three Sclavonians coming. They had not as yet caught sight of him. Jumping over into a cornfield, he

RUNNING WITH DESPERATE ENERGY

in a shallow ditch. The three men came up, Speckle Face and Fatty Perasich panting and much distressed with the unwonted exercise and excitement. Directly opposite where Ashim lay they met a boy driving some cows. Fatty, who talks good English, asked the boy if he had seen a man passing along that road. Boy hadn't seen any man, at all. On the three then went for some distance futher but soon returned, apparently satisfied the object of their pursuit was hidden along the road side. Ashim was lying about twenty feet north of a division fence dividing the field. The three men climbed into the field about the same distance south of the division fence, or say forty feet distant from Ashim, and commenced the hunt through the corn and weeds for their intended victim. The approaching stage was then quite close at hand. When it had arrived opposite his hiding place, Ashim, watching his chance made and crossing the fence, was on the steps of the stage before his pursuers were aware of his whereabouts. The three men then sprang for the road and stage. Perasich firing one shot, and at the same time ordering the driver to stop. At this juncture Ashim fired one shot in return. The six stage horses, at this, started on a full run from the jump. As the stage was passing, Perasich or Speckle Face, it is not certain which, fired another shot which passed diagonally clear

A SPRING FOR DEAR LIFE,

THROUGH THE STAGE

quite close to Ashim's head, as he was falling as it were into the rear seat, thence near Miss Cook on the front seat and opposite side. The pursuers then commenced running after the rapidly receding stage firing several wild shots one of which struck the ground in such a manner as to knock gravel with great force against Ashim's pistol and his mothers hand, extended mother-like, out of the stage window for her sons protection. The hand yet shows effects of the hurt thus received. Ashim, for obvious reasons, exposing nothing but his hand from the window, fired two or three to the rear, and it is likely it was thus Mrs. Ashim received the powder burns reported in the papers. While these things were taking place it is said the screeching of the male passengers or some of them, far exceeded that of the women. Pinchower was on deck or second top seat. Mrs. McNicol sat between Fernbach and the driver. All the rest of the passengers were on the inside. At the first shot Pinchower

THOUGHT HE WAS A DEAD MERCHANT,

and straightening out on the deck of the stage, to the railings of which he held with remarkable tenacity for a dead man, he scarcely ceased to kick and groan for six miles or till the Six-mile House was reached. Then he made a critical examination of himself and finding no bullet holes to speak of, became satisfied he wasn't dead at all, and thereupon got exceedingly valient. Being restored to his abnormal state of mind he then made it known that the most fortunate things that ever befell Speckle Face and Fatty was, that he, Pinchower, did not happen to have had his armament with him at the trying crisis. He ought to suppress his regrets, though, for his body served as an excellent shield for both Mrs. McNicol and the driver. That is, it would have done so if the shooting had been worth a cent. At the same instant Pinchower received his supposed death wound, Fernbach made for a cannon or something he thought might be down in the boot, and so determined was he to get even on those fellows in the road he never gave up the search for the gun, that ought to have been down in the boot, for several miles. His regrets at lack of arms were as impressively made known then as were Pinchower's. That, together with the hot sun or something made him feel so unwell that he couldn't bear to continue his journey on the outside so he thence onward rode inside to encourage the demoralized children, one of whom kept all day feeling for a bullet wound supposed to exist between the shoulder blades. After Mr. Fernbach went down after his cannon, the only prominent marks, (Pinchower's flying legs excepted) for Fatty to shoot at was Mrs. McNicol and he driver both of whom, Greeley like, kept their seats. The driver, whose name we are sorry we cannot give, was

AN INSTANTANEOUS DIVE

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

But for his nerve and skill it is likely the heavy Concord coach must have been upset, as it was whirled along by the flying, badly frightened team. As a part of this story we must mention that Mr. Levin, Ashim's friend, had left the hotel to find Ashim and to protect him as best he could, having a double barrelled shot gun. There are two parallel roads leaving Carson, some two hundred yards apart. Levin took the wrong road, and was crossing over to intercept the stage in sight on the other, when the firing occurred, which he heard but did not see the actors. Had he been on the stage with his shot gun it is possible some results might have been different. Certainly, in that case, he would not have been compelled to await for the next stage, as he did have to do. Ashim had anticipated no trouble at this point in their journey, nor is it likely would have had any but for Speckle Face who, from the moment of recognizing Mrs. McNicol, had been very active in preparing for of her brother. Ashim, it should be understood had been, in years past, in business in Carson, where he and his family have many true friends, and acquaintances, and where, as at Eureka, the family stand high. Through these friends he had been warned that one of the Perasich brothers had announced his intention of waylaying the stage at some point between Carson and Teel's Marsh. An encounter from him was anticipated and in some degree prepared for, but not this one right there in the city of Carson under the noses of its excruciatingly not one of whom, it would appear, but must have had some knowledge of the intended murder of a passing traveler. However, it was early in the morning, and it is likely the officers were calmly drowsing on their beds waiting some bloody excitement to waken them up. Not so the Douglass county Sheriff, at Genoa. He was on hand and ready to furnish all necessary men for protection at $50 each, grub and passage paid. Anyway, if Elias Perasich killed anybody down the road there, as it was known he intended to do, and came blowing back, Douglass would corral him, reward or no reward. He was going to keep within his jurisdiction "howsomedever." It does not seem that Elias (it might not have been Elias) tried to carry out his plan of waylaying the stage. Somebody may have telegraphed him that Pinchower was on board and consequently it would be dangerous. Leastwise nothing of moment took place, and the party, less a number of the passengers who got off at Teel's Marsh, arrived here in safety, Ashim himself, however, getting out up the road somewhere, subsequently coming in under Under Sheriff Dad Moore's protection.

PETE PERASICH

was on hand when the stage arrived, and for some days after, but made no marked hostile demonstrations that we are aware of. It is not our purpose or place to pass judgment on Ashim's acts in killing N. Perasich, whose brothers and friends are pursuing him so vindictively. It is enough to say that they act as though it was a murder they feel called upon to avenge with their own hands, and that they seem to think people at large would commend and excuse them for so doing. They do not apparently appreciate the very probable fact that had they succeeded in either of these attempts, it would have been a murder which in all human probability would have met with instant and summary punishment at the hands of an outraged people. The object of their pursuit, it matters not whether in the full consciousness of having taken a life to save his own, or otherwise, has done all that any community or reasonable man whomsoever can ask to prove his determination to abide whatever judgment or punishment the laws of our country, through a competent court and a jury of his peers, may see fit to award him. Is it for these men or any others to say in advance that our Courts and juries are predetermined right or wrong to condone a murder whether or not, and that in consequence they may also murder with impunity? Do they suppose the people have such a contempt for law and morals as to applaud or excuse a murder of this or any other kind? If they do, it is about time they were awakening from a dangerous delusion.

A WORD OF COMMENT.

As a mere matter of fact, Ashim has been in constant danger of being killed from the day he was admitted to bail down to the present. The danger has been so well known and appreciated that it was deemed almost as much as his life was worth to respond to his bail bond. There are plenty in the world who would not have taken this risk alone to save a $15,000 bail, no matter who the bondsmen. All we have to say about it is, that so long as he was taking this great risk to stand or fall as the laws of the land may determine, this attempt at personal vengeance is an outrage that ought to be met and severely punished as the law provides in all cases of attempts at murder, and more especially, when as the facts show, the lives of innocent and entirely inoffending people, women and children included, were equally endangered. The Alta referring to this attempt and the fact that the perpetrators were only held in $3,000 bail thinks, correctly enough, that that is certainly cheap enough when an attempt at murder virtually involves a whole United States mail coach load of passengers. Ashim is here to answer before the law for his acts. He to all intents and purposes stands with his hands tied behind him and such being the fact, is entitled to whatever protection the law or community can afford him. No less is this the case with his mother, a noble and plucky woman, ready if need be, to protect her son's life at the expense of her own. We have always studiously refrained from any expression of opinion calculated to prejudice the pending trial one way or the other, and without further comment, are content to do so till we have sworn evidence upon which the public can base its own conclusions.

OUTSIDE OPINION.

The latest Carson papers say that the excitement at this occurrence was very great and that if any one of those passengers, or Ashim himself, had been shot the Perasich crowd would have been strung up like dogs. There was strong talk of it as it was.

Goes This Time Sure.

Col. Addis, the photographer fully intended to have moved on northward as per notice two weeks ago, but the fact is, his work has given so much satisfaction that the longer he stays the more he has to do. Nearly everybody in reach of the place has faced his machine, (which is of the best, or it couldn't have stood some of 'em) but whether or no, he will start for Bishop Creek about Wednesday next. It is possible, however, that he will stop a few days at Big Pine, as he has been strongly urged to do. Our friends up that way can depend on getting as good pictures as any artist can make in extemporized galleries, the only kind of course, obtainable under the circumstances. We don't see but his pictures are just as good as those of the same style taken in the best city galleries.

Changing into a City Lady.

The rapidity with which females adapt themselves to the circumstances and fashions with which they are surrounded, and especially the fashions, is simply marvelous. On Monday last a Detroit lady employing several domestics got a new table-girl, just arrived in the city from the rural districts, a bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked damsel, who blushed when any of the male members of the household looked at her; a girl whose hair was combed smoothly back from off a tanned forehead; whose dress had sleeves to it, came up to her throat and down to her feet. On Tuesday her hair went up on to the top of her head, and was coiled up over a—something. On Wednesday she cut the sleeves off her dress, turned it in at the throat, pinned it back and humped it out behind, and could look all the men in the house square in the face for half an hour without the hue of modesty showing through her prepared chalk complexion. On Thursday she completed her degradation by cutting off all but an inch or two of her front hair.

Treatment of Scarlatina.

A strong article in favor of the wet sheet in scarlatina appears in The London Lancet, from the pen of Dr. John Taylor of Liverpool. His plan, which appears to be at least a thorough one, is to immerse a night-gown, slit up at the front, in half a pint to a pint of hot water, pure or medicated with a dram or two drams of tincture of capsicum, or in the infusion of three or four pods, or in mustard water, the clear supernatant fluid from a tablespoonful of mustard to a pint of water; extending the gown over the feet by means of a towel immersed in the same fluid—both to be well wrung out and suddenly applied, and the patient quickly packed in two blankets previously placed on the adjoining sofa or bed, another blanket or two pillows covering all. Dr. Taylor speaks enthusiastically of the amazing relief procurable from the wet sheet, in its simple form, in zymotic and theria simulating croup, and, in strong doses, in inflamatory croup.

Fears of Indian Troubles in Idaho.

A late issue of The Idaho Statesman tells of a threatened outbreak of the Indians in Lemhi valley, and as usual the Mormons are supposed to be at the bottom of it. Letters from Lemhi, have called on the Governor of the Territory for protection. Everywhere on the Utah border the savages have become insolent since the Mormons began to baptize them into the Church, which shows very conclusivly to our mind that the Latter Day Saints have been instigating them to acts of violence against the Gentiles.—[Ex.

Wouldn't Economize.

"Mariar," said one of the horny-handed sons of toil to his wife, "'pears to me it takes a sight o' calico ter make you a dress, these hard times. Can't yer economize with one of them ar pull-backs the city gals wear?" It was then that Mariar fired the great bread-board at him, and remarked that she wasn't "goin' to stop the circulation of blood in her legs for no bald-headed old penny-pincher."

—A farmer's crib is a gnawful place for rats.

—Comfortable quarters—twenty-five cent pieces.

—A man up in New Hampshire named his two children Ebenezer and Flora. He always speaks of them as Eb and Flo—very tidy names.

—John Green, of Minnesota, has shot three men for calling his sister "stub-nosed," and yet public opinion in that neighborhood is still against her nose.

—"Have animals a sense of humor?" asked an owlish exchange. Certainly they have. You will always find jack-asses ready to laugh at the poorest jokes.

—An Illinois debater "had 'em" waen he arose and said: "Yes, gentlemen, Waterloo was the biggest kind of a fight, but Washington whipped 'em like a wink."

—Peter Cooper, of Mississippi, set a spring gun to shoot a chicken thief, but killed the wrong man. Peter was not arrested, because he happened to be the wrong man, and his funeral expenses amounted to more than all his chickens were worth.

—At a city market the other day, a pale faced, solemn man took off his hat, smoothed back his hair, and said: "My friends, we know not how soon we may fall by the wayside. We stand here to-day—next week we may sleep with the dead. I feel that I have only a few days more to stay, and I wish some of you would lend me fifteen cents so that I can get a dish of baked beans." The crowd at once moved away.

—A Silver city (Nev.) young lady, who has a passion for pretty babies, to a little four-year old angel who has a bran new sister: "I say, bub, won't you give me your baby sister; I love little babies?" Young hopeful: "No, I tant." Young lady (winking at her young man): "Why, sonny—why won't you give the baby to me?" Hopeful (indignantly): "Fy, he'd 'tarve to death; your dress opens behine." Painful silence for the next fifteen minutes.

—The Catholic Congress at Freiburg, Baden, which began on the 1st of September, was largely attended. As many as 5,000 persons were said to be present at the opening session. Representatives were reported from all parts of Germany. The Bishops of Mayence and Strasbourg were the leading speakers. Resolutions were adopted "protesting against the interfence of the State in religious education, against the refusal to the Papacy of the free exercise of its teaching office; against the abolition of the Pope's temporal power, and declaring that peace will only be possible when the liberty of the Church is reserved."

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

General Phil. Sheridan.

A little of the history of this illustrious gentleman and great soldier is due at this time:

Major-General Philip Henry Sheridan is a full-blooded Irishman by descent, though American by birth. He was born in poverty. So large a share of American eminent men have been born poor, that it might almost be said that in our country poverty in youth is the first requisite for success in life.

Sheridan's parents, after remaining a few years at the east, moved to Ohio, where their son grew up with very little schooling, and under the useful necessity of working for a living. There is a story current of his having been put upon a spirited horse when a boy of five, by some mischievous mates, and run away with to a tavern some miles off. He stuck fast to the horse, though without saddle or bridle, and without size or strength to use them if he had them. It was by a mere chance that he arrived safe, and when lifted off by the sympathizing family of the inn, the little fellow admitted that he was shaken and sore with his ride, but he added, "I'll be better to-morrow, and then I'll ride back home." The incident is of no great importance in itself, but it shows that even then the boy was constitutionally destitute of fear. He seems to have been made without the peculiar faculty which makes people take danger into account, and try to keep at a distance from it. The full possession of this deficiency (if the phrase is not too direct a contradiction in terms) is quite uncommon.

When young Sheridan received his appointment to a cadetship at West Point, he was driving a water-cart in Zanesville, Ohio. The person who actually procured the appointment was Gen. Thomas P. Ritchey, member of Congress from Sheridan's District. The candidate was very young for the appointment, and very small of his age, insomuch that his friends considered it extremely doubtful whether he would be admitted. He was, however, and passed through the regular West Point course, in the same class with Generals McPherson, Schofield, Terrill, Sill and Tyler, and with the rebel General Hood who was so fearfully beaten by Thomas at Nashville. His scholarship was not particularly remarkable, and as is often the case with pupils who have no particular want of courage, high health and spirits, or of the bodily and mental qualities for doing things rather than for thinking about it, he experienced various collisions of one and another kind, with the strict military discipline of the institution.

He graduated in June, 1853, and as there was at the moment no vacant second lieutenancy, he was given a brevet appointment, and set out in the next autumn to Fort Duncan on the River Grande, at the western edge of Texas, and in the region haunted by two of the most ferocious and boldest of the tribes sometimes called on the frontier the "Horse Indians"—the Apaches and Comanches.

From this time until the rebellion, Lieutenant Sheridan was serving, not exactly his apprenticeship to his trade of war, but what would in German be called his "wanderjahre"—his year as wandering journeyman. It was an eight years of training in hardships and dangers more incessant and more extreme than perhaps could be crowded into any life except this of the American Indian fighter; doubtless its wild experience did much to develop the bodily and mental endurance and the coolness and swift energy which have charterized Sheridan as a commander.

For two years Sheridan was at Fort Duncan, and was then promoted to first lieutenant, transferred to the Fourth Regiment, and after a delay in New York waiting for some recruits, he accompanied them by sea to the Pacific Coast, and immediately on reaching San Francisco was placed in command of the escort for a surveying expedition employed on a branch of the Pacific Railroad. On this duty, and afterward in command of posts or on scouts and expeditions up and down those remote and wild regions, the time passed until the outbreak of the war in 1861.

In the fights and adventures of rough life, Sheridan's soldierly qualities were often exhibited. While at Fort Duncan, being outside the fort with two men, the three were surrounded by a gang of a dozen or more Apaches, whose chief, taking it for granted that the three had surrendered, jumped down from his horse, to tie them up and have them carried off. As he did so, Sheridan, quick as lightning, sprang up in his place and goaded the wild mustang at full speed to the fort. On reaching it, he called instantly to arms, snatched a pair of pistols, and without dismounting or waiting to see who followed, wheeled and flew back as swiftly as he had come. His two men were fighting stoutly for their lives. Sheridan dashed up and shot the chief. The soldiers, following hard after him, charged the savages, and in a moment the discomfitted Apaches were ridden down, dispersed and most of them killed.

During Sheridan's stay in Oregon, his commanding officer, Major Rains, (afterwards the rebel General Rains) made a campaign against the Yakima Indians, in which Sheridan did right good service, and so conspicuously at the affair of the Cascades on the Columbia, April 28, 1856, as to be mentioned in general orders with high praise.

When the rebellion broke out, Sheridan was ordered East, and on May 14, 1861, was commissioned captain in the Thirteenth Regular Infantry. He was soon sent to Missouri, where his first actual services in the war was a term of office as president of a board for auditing military claims. He was soon, however, sent into the field as chief quartermaster and commissary under Gen. Curtis, and in that capacity served through the brilliant and victorious, but terribly severe campaign in which the desperate battle of Pea Ridge was fought. At this time his professional ambition was not very high, for he observed one day that "he was the sixty-fourth captain on the list, and with the chances of war might soon be a major."

Sheridan's next service was as General Halleck's chief quartermaster in the Corinth campaign. Halleck seems to have thought very well of Sheridan from the first, though apparently rather as a trustworthy organizer and manager, than as such a military son of thunder as he has turned out to be. After a time the nature of the war in those parts occasioned a great demand for cavalry officers, and Sheridan being pitched upon as one, was on May 27, 1862, commissioned colonel of the 2d Michigan Cavalry, and was at once sent into the field to help impede the retreat of the rebels when they should evacuate Corinth.

In this and other similar work of that campaign, Sheridan became at once known to the army and to his superiors as a splendid officer, and rose, up to the very last scene of the Virginia campaign, where he wielded the troops that struck the most telling of the final blows against Lee.

In the terrible fight of Stone River or Murfeesboro', Sheridan's part, instead of being merely creditable or handsome, was glorious and decisive. But for him, that great battle would have been a tremendous defeat. How deperate the need of the crisis that Sheridan met there, and how well he met it, may somewhat appear from the terms used by the best historian thus far of that battle, in prefacing the detailed account which he gives of the fighting to Sheridan and his men.

We cannot do more than hastily sum up the later and even more brilliant portion of Sheridan's splendid career; and indeed it is so much better known that the task is the less needful. Sheridan was active and useful during Rosecrans' advance on Chattanooga. At the defeat of Chickamauga, his services were so conspicuous in making the best of a bad matter, that Rosecrans in his report "commended him to his country."

General Sheridan's administration as military governor of New Orleans, was a surprise to his friends, from its exhibition of broad and high administrative qualities. Yet there is much that is alike in the abilities of a good general and a good ruler. Gen. Grant is a very wise judge of men, and his brief characteristic record of his estimate of Sheridan might have justified hopes equal to the actual result. To any one remembering also his early days of authority over the Yakimas in Oregon, it would doubtless have done so; for a Yakima community and the community of an "unreconstructed" southern rebel city are a good deal alike in many things. What Grant said of Sheridan was as follows, and was sent to Secretary Stanton just after Cedar Creek, and a little while before Sheridan's appointment as Major-General in the Regular Army, in place of McClellan, resigned:

"CITY POINT, Oct. 20, 8 P. M.

HON. E. M. STANTON, etc:—I had a salute of one hundred guns from each of the armies here fired in honor of Sheridan's last victory. Turning what bid fair to be a disaster into a glorious victory, stamps Sheridan what I always thought him, one of the ablest of generals.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General."

The extraordinary series of popular ovations which attended Sheridan's recent tour through part of the North, have proved that he is profoundly admired, honored and loved by all good citizens; and unless we except Grant, probably Sheridan is the most popular—and deservedly the most popular—of all the commanders in the war. Such a popularity, and won not by words but by deeds, is an enviable possession.

The History of Postage-Stamps.

[From The St. Nicholas for November.]

The introduction of the postal system, as it at present exists in all countries on the globe, has been credited to England, when, in 1840, covers and envelopes were devised to carry letters all over the kingdom at one penny the single rate. This plan was adopted through the exertions of Sir Rowland Hill, who has been aptly termed the "father of postage-stamps." It now appears, however, that there is another aspirant for the introduction of the stamp system. In Italy, as far back as 1818, letter sheets were prepared, duly stamped in the left lower corner, while letters were delivered by specially appointed carriers, on the prepayment of the money which the stamp represented. The early stamp represented a courier on horseback, and was of three values. It was discontinued in 1836. Whether Italy or Great Britain first introduced postage-stamps, other countries began to avail themselves of this method for the prepayment of letters, although they did not move very promptly in the matter.

Great Britain enjoyed the monopoly of stamps for three years, and, though the first stamps were issued in 1840, she has made fewer changes in her stamps than any other country, and has suffered no change at all in the main design—the portrait of Queen Victoria. In other countries, notably in our own, the Sandwich Islands, and the Argentine Republic, the honor of portraiture on the stamps is usually distributed among various high public officers; but in Great Britain the Queen alone figures on her stamps, and not even the changes that thirty-five years have made in her face are shown on the national and colonial postage stamps.

The next country to follow the example of England was Brazil. In 1842 a series of three stamps was issued, consisting simply of large numerals denoting the value, and all printed in black. Then came the cantons in Switzerland, and Finland, with envelopes which to-day are very rare, and soon after them, Bavaria, Belgium, France, Hanover, New South Wales, Tuscany, Austria, British Guiana, Prussia, Saxony, Schleswig Holstein, Spain, Denmark, Italy, Oldenburg, Trinidad, Wurtemburg, and the United States. Other countries followed in the train, until, at the present moment, there is scarcely any portion of the globe, inhabited by civilized people, which has not postage-stamps.

Barking Trees by Rabbits.

A correspondent of The Weekly Granger says: "I have a recipe to prevent the foraging of rabbits on young fruit trees. I have practiced it for eighteen years, and I know it to be a specific. I intended to have given it to the public every Winter since I proved it by experiment, but somehow I have hitherto failed, until yesterday I was reminded of it again by reading a lengthy, troublesome and expensive remedy. Mine is simple and easy. First, catch a rabbit and kill it. I'll guarantee that it will quit its depredations, but its influence is not done yet. Cut it open and take out the bowels, lungs, liver, etc., and rub them on the young trees as high up as a rabbit can reach; when you get through that, cut a piece of the flesh, a quarter for instance, and rub till you get through. One rabbit is sufficient for five hundred trees, and it will last all through the Winter. I have rubbed them so in November, and a rabbit will not touch it all through the Winter, provided you had no tar or grease previously on them."

MOVE TO DIVIDE THE COUNTY.

We have just heard that a petition is being circulated and generally signed in Darwin and Panamint, with the view of creating a new county out of a portion each of San Bernardino, Kern and this county, with Darwin as the county seat. We have no particulars as to the proposed boundary lines other than that the northern is to cut across about the lower end of Owens Lake. But little over a year ago almost the enrire region to be embraced in the new county was naught but a howling wilderness. Now it has the two towns above named, each quite as large or larger than any of the oder ones In this county, and both with as good assurances as any exclusively mining towns can have to begin with of becoming quite large towns at no distant day. In the same district, or say within a square of some forty miles, all within our present county lines, are a number of other mining districts of but little if any less future promise than the two above named. So far as now understood or known to us this square will comprise everything of taxable value in the new county. The remaining vast expanse, south and west is, with a small exception here and there, a mere waste of sand and rock, and, we should think, more likely to prove a drag on the new county, both in the effort to organize it and afterwards, than otherwise. We are of those who believe the smaller the area composing a county the better so long as it embraces a populative and property value equal to a proper or easy maintenance of its own government. We would' however, most strenuously object to the dismemberment of any county wherein we had an interest when the effect would be to seriously cripple either portion, as has sometimes been the object. As regards the present we consider the risks all on the side of those making it. While we very much regret to have our county deprived of the very cream of its mineral wealth, the very moment it becomes apparent such wealth exists, yet we have always considered something of this kind an event to be anticipated with positive certainty, and one to which it would be useless to object, even if so disposed, if circumstances rendered it possible to carry it through. We certainly think this move extremely premature, and also susceptible of defeat if the people of the remaining portion of the county were so disposed. But we do not believe the mass of the people in this section northward will interpose any objections whatever when all the circumstances become understood and appreciated. We may be in error in that view, but it at least expresses our own sentiments, the reasons for which we shall endeavor to explain hereafter. We should think fatal objections would come from the property holders in the proposed new county, if from any source outside the Legislature, but if they want to go we say let 'em go.

Great Rejoicing.

The Eureka Sentinel of the 23d devotes a large space to an account of the jollification of the people of that place on completion of the Palisade and Eureka Railroad. Flags were displayed and a great feeling of gladness pervaded all classes of the community. Two trains, one a passenger and the other a freight, came in, and their appearance was the signal for immense enthusiasm. We would like to have cause for a similar rejoicing here of our own, and hope to have some day but—it won't be to-morrow or next day, we suspect, as things now look.

Another Guibord Case.

They have got a little Guibord burial case at Mansfield, Ohio, where there is considerable feeling among the German, Protestants on account of the refusal of Father Magenham, the Catholic priest, to allow the remains of Joseph Kelan, the German editor, to be buried in the Catholic cemetery, or to perform the funeral services, on the ground that Kelan had not paid his church dues for some time, and was not a good Catholic.

The Southern Counties.

As indications of the rapid increase of population in the southern portion of the State, the results of the last State elections are interesting. At the gubernatorial election in 1871, eight southern counties—Merced, Fresno, Tulare, Kern, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Santa Barbara, polled 10,188 votes. At the last election the same counties polled 15,421, an increase of 5,233 votes, or more than 50 per cent. in four years—about 13 per cent. annually.

THE OHIO ELECTION.

Politicians and political newspapers are devoting much time and space to the discussion of the probable effect of the late Ohio election upon parties and candidates in the Presidential contest to come off next year. The New York Herald, a political big gun, thinks that election settled many important points. The inflation issue being killed, Grant's chances for a third term are also quite dead. His only chance for a third term, it is claimed, depended on such a wide spread predominance of the inflation sentiment as to alarm business classes to such a degree that they would prefer to risk the manifest dangers of a third term than financial ruin. The Ohio vote has robbed him of his distinctive anti-inflation, prestige, and that being settled, nothing of a general or important nature remains to compensate the large loss of votes that would follow by reason of the common repugnance to the third term innovation. In consequence of the Ohio verdict, according to The Herald and other leading papers, Grant has no chance whatever for another four-years' sojourn in the White House—and we hope such is the case.

By the same tokens, these papers claim, Gov. Tilden, of New York, is also knocked entirely out of the Presidential ring; his chances for the Democratic nomination are hopeless. Even aside from the inflation issue, Tilden is likely to meet with fatal opposition from Western and Southern Democrats because he is from New York, which State has had a monopoly of furnishing Democratic Presidential candidates for defeat ever since Buchanan's time. So we are to conclude Tilden is not the coming Democratic man any more than is Grant for certain Republicans.

The point with these Democratic papers seems to be to make the Western Democrats admit that their pet inflation scheme is dead, to the end that they will thereby deaden Grant's third term aspirations. It appears, however, that the western brethern are rather reluctant to make the admission, even for so great a boon as that. They don't consider a little majority of 5,300 or so in a half-million vote so very decisive, especially as that majority was entirely due to Carl Schurz's influence, which may be counted as opposed to Grant in all third term contingencies. In any event the inflationists still believe they can make the Pennsylvania Dutchmen adopt their rag baby, Ohio and Carl Schurz to the contrary notwithstanding. In this hope they have sent roaring Bill Allen, Morton and many others as dry nurses and to talk to the Mynheers. But it is pretty certain their efforts will all be in vain—and that if Pennsylvania will have none of that baby next Tuesday it will not be heard of more. With the collapse then of that issue comes renewed labor for the political champions on both sides in hunting up some point of difference, no matter how trifling, available for the centennial fight. It now looks as though it was going to be a very difficult thing indeed to find anything to fight about. There are some things, like the rag baby for instance, that will do for one section as a rallying cry, but in others it won't do at all because it rallies the wrong ones for the unity of any one national party, particularly the Democratic, which suffers the most in the lact of a general opposition issue sufficient to kill off the very bad odor that has eminated from it as a party for these many years. The chances are, no satisfactory disinfectant will ever be found. The case became nearly hopeless after Dr. Greeley put the whole party on crow diet with such poor results; and the rag baby remedy don't seem to be any more promising. In truth, though, there is inducement for them to keep trying, for, what with this ancient Democratic odor on one side and obvious Republican corruption on the other, it is much as a general polecat fight; its rankness smells—not to heaven, let us hope, for that place would become extinguished if it did—but high enough to call out the very best talent to effect even a partial relief.

Republican France.

The government of France, even under what is called the republic, is of a very paternal character. It looks after the religion as well as the amusements of the people. The Protestant and Hebrew Churches will receive about $335,600; the Roman Catholic Church will have more than $10,000,000. The railroads are subsidized to the tune of $8,500,000; the new opera receives $2,000,000; the other theatres and the conservatoire de musique will have subsidies amounting to $350,000. The salary of the president is $120,000 a year, and in addition to this he is allowed $60,000 a year for "his household," and $18,000 more for his department at Versailles. President Grant's compensation of $50,000 appears small in comparison with the allowance of the French executive.

The State Election.

Carr beats Fitzgerald nearly 10,000 votes for the State Superintendency. We are glad to know it.

Notable Libel Suit.

Just previous to the late election, The San Francisco Chronicle published a certain letter from a member of a certain Cincinnati school book publishing house, which, on its face implicated Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald in having accepted a $3,000 bribe as an inducement to introduce certain books to the schools of this State, then under Fitzgerald's superintendency. This letter, it appears, was furnished to Marcus D. Boruck, editor of The Spirit of the Times, by a man named Klose, publisher of a religious newspaper, The Pacific, who was formerly a partner of Fitzgerald in the publication of The Spectator, another religious newspaper. Fitzgerald pronounced the whole story of his ever having received as much as one cent in such a way unequivocably false, calling God to witness the truth of his statement. Klose as positively asserts the main fact. To get at the truth of the thing Fitzgerald has entered a libel suit against the De Youngs, of The Chronicle, one of whom was arrested on the complaint but gave bail and was released. It is a case that will excite no little attention, particularly as both sides are so positive in their respective allegations and denials. We take the following from The Morning Ledger:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE LEDGER:—I had supposed until last evening that the alleged letter was a forgery, as I never received such a letter, and Mr. Payot had twice assured me that he had never written me any letter of the kind.

I challenge any human being to bring any proof that I ever received any check, coin currency, or consideration of any kind whatever, for any vote or service in my official capacity; and I particularly and emphatically deny that I ever received a check for $3,000, or any other sum from Mr. Payot or any other person.

I have taken steps to try conclusions in a court of justice with the newspaper concerning this matter.

O. P. FITZGERALD.

Henry Payot, of the firm of Payot, Upham & Co., has drawn up a statement that he never received any answer to his letter to Fitzgerald, and never sent him a check for $3,000, or any other sum. He says he thinks the letter was intercepted and never received by Dr. Fitzgerald. Mr. Upham says that Mr. Payot told him that the letter was written so long ago that he had forgotten all about it, and could not believe he had written it until he saw it in print.

The Post publishes an interview with Klose, in which he admits that he denied knowing anything about the letter to Mr. George, of that paper; but now says that Bolander's story that he got a letter addressed to Fitzgerald, and took from it a $3,000 check which he handed to Fitzgerald is correct.

Zach. Chandler.

The President has selected the above named Michigander for his Secretary of the Interior. We have not seen a paper but expresses dissatisfaction at the appointment, all talking in this strain:

The New York Herald says that until this strange selection Grant's latter appointments have been respectable, the officers selected being a great improvement on their predecessors. The President had offered the position to other gentlemen who had declined. If it be a fact that Grant had been unable to prevail on a better man to accept this important place, it is a striking proof that the Administration has sunk so low that it is no longer thought to be an honor to participate in its counsels. An acceptance of the office would imply acceptance of the President's public endorsement of Delano's course. No wonder, therefore, that after repeated efforts no man of higher moral status than Chandler could be induced to accept a Cabinet appointment, encumbered with such degrading conditions that no officer might refuse to endorse Delano or differ with the President respecting the affairs of his own department.

The Perasich Case.

Commenting on the very remarkable conduct of a Carson Justice in releasing one of the Perasich brothers, when both had gone out on the same murderous mission, The Virginia Evening Chronicle of the 20th inst. pertinently says: "The 'second Daniel,' who glorifies the position of Justice of the Peace in Carson City, has added another laurel to his wreath. Yesterday he discharged George Perasich—who was with his brother Elia when the latter fired into the stage coach about ten days ago—because 'no evidence was adduced to criminate George.' From this we are to infer that George Perasich accompanied his brother in the hope that he might be able to dissuade him from his rash purpose, and with no thought of assisting him in its execution. The next Grand Jury of Ormsby county will doubtless take issue with the Justice upon this point, and give George an opportunity to disprove the charge of being at least accessory to an assault with intent to commit murder."—[Eureka Sentinel, Oct. 23.

The Grape Interest.

The grape growers of the Pacific Slope are shortly to hold a convention at Sacramento to devise some plan to get rid of the insects which this year has been so destructive to the vines.

Indian Battle.

A dispatch to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs states that the Shoshones had a battle with the Arapahoe Indians, near Green River, on the 15th instant, and whipped them.

VIRGINIA IN ASHES.

Great Loss of Property—The Life Labor of Hundreds Swept Away in a Few Hours—A Desolate Scene—Con. Virginia Drops a Hundred.

[From The Nevada Tribune, October 26th.]

VIRGINIA, October 26—11 A. M.—About 5 o'clock this morning a fire broke out at a lodging house on the corner of A and Taylor streets, and there being a heavy wind prevailing at the time, the fire rapidly communicated to neighboring houses and swept like an avalanche down into the center portion of the city.

The firemen were out promptly with their steamers, but the wind was so strong that as fast as they took up one position they were compelled to vacate by the approach of the fiery fiend. Water was scarce, and the little that was used had not the least effect on the devouring element.

The fire made a clean sweep of all that portion lying between Union and Taylor streets, clean down to E street, and is now pursuing a southeastern course.

The Enterprise, Chronicle and Footlight offices are burning rapidly. Piper's Opera House took fire and fell down, scattering burning timbers in every direction.

The passenger depot and the Consolidated Virginia hoisting works are burning rapidly, all efforts to save them proving fruitless.

The Consolidated Virginia works might have been saved had it not been from the fact that the fire department were allowed to use the water from their reservoir, and when the danger to their own building became apparent, the devouring element had it all its own way.

The wildest excitement prevails, and men, women and children are flying from their homes. Such scenes have never been enacted in the State before.

As water has given out, buildings are being blown up to check the flames. A charge of giant powder has just scattered that stately edifice, the Catholic Church, to the four winds.

If the wind does not subside, the largest and richest portion of the city will be in ashes. Large numbers of poor families are left destitute, and suffering will be great.

It is impossible to form any estimate of the losses—suffice it to say they will be up in the millions.

The origin of the fire can be traced to the root of all evil—alcohol. A party of gamblers and courtezans had a wine party, and becoming crazy drunk, got kicking up their heels and tipped over the lamp, which exploded and set fire to the house.

As we go to press we are unable to gather any additional particulars. A rumor is current that the fire extended to and destroyed the Ophir works, but is unauthenticated.

A gentleman who left the scene at 1 P. M. informs us that there is no city to look upon—only a shanty here and there to increase the desolation of the prospect.

We have received no stock report to-day, but learn from those on file in the brokers' office that Con. Virginia dropped $100, and the other mines in proportion.

LATER.

Just as we go to press, we learn on good authority that the new California mill, in course of erection, the Ophir hoisting works, and the Consolidated Virginia mill and hoisting works have been destroyed, and that the fire has communicated with the California mine, and it is fast being consumed by the relentless demon.

The World's Grandest Bridge.

The East River bridge, connecting New York with Brooklyn, will be the most important highway across a river in the world when completed. It is estimated to cost thirteen million dollars, some six millions of which have already been expended thereon. Its towers and anchorages have so far progressed that by June next a temporary bridge for foot passengers will be in operation. This temporary bridge alone will cost $40,000 to $45,000, being composed of steel and iron wire, the galvanized iron rope to weigh twelve pounds to the foot and to be some six inches in diameter. The engineer of the stupendous work is Mr. Roebling, under whose father the undertaking was engineered until his decease. The bridge so long hindered in its progress by municipal mismanagement, is now in a fair way of progressing to completion.

Gatling Guns for this State.

General Bennett, chief of the ordnance department, in an interview with Colonel McComb, of San Francisco, has agreed to accept from California her old Parrot guns at the price charged ten years ago, and issue Gantling guns in exchange up to the full value. The Gantling guns are more easily handled, requiring a less number of horses, while the pieces are vastly more effective in street firing. The twenty-second division of the New York militia is the only body of State troops at present havsng a full battery of Gantling guns.

Stanley, the Explorer.

Stanley, who is exploring Central Africa under the joint support of The New York Herald and The London Telegraph, appears to have had a very severe time of it in his progress toward Lake Victoria. The latest letters from him are as late as the middle of May. In some respects he had been unfortunate. Although his own health was good, two of his companions, Edward Pocock and Frederick Barker had died of fever. He had been obliged to fight his way against savage tribes, in one battle losing twenty-one of his followers. He had lost by dissentery, desertion, fever and fierce fighting, one hundred and eighty-one men out of his total force of three hundred and forty-seven, more than one-half. His course was through a terrible country—hot, dry plains, jungles, over mountains, with the consent of wild tribes, and without the consent of others; a march of battles with nature and the natives.

Governmental.

There are no changes yet in the Interior Department by Senator Chandler who has left for Michigan. It is said a number of Democratic clerks will be removed. There is a prospect that the Indian Service will be turned over to the War Department, Chandler having favored that course when in the Senate. Indications are that the President will take a decided position in his message with respect to the recognition of the Cuban belligerants, but these rumors come from friendly Cuban sources.

The Epizootic Again.

The horse disease known as the epizootic has again got as far West as Cincinnati and Chicago, taking about the same course over the country that it did three years ago, but in a much milder form. The horses throughout the two cities named are generally afflicted with an influenza; and owners or those in charge of ihe animals, are curing the disease by the remedies which their former experience taught them. And timely precautions taken before the appearance of the disease does much in mitigating it when it arrives.

The Osage Land Swindle.

An important case, involving the title to 960,000 acres of land in Kansas, known as the Osage Indian lands, is being argued in Washington. The land is claimed by the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and Leavenworth and Galveston Railroad Companies, as against settlers numbering 500. The case was decided in favor of the settlers in the Circuit Court, but the Railroad Companies took an appeal to the Supreme Court. The land in contest is worth several million dollars.

Horrible Outrage.

On the 9th inst., the house of George Forrest of Bay City, Michigan, was entered by some unknown person who poured acid on Mrs. Forrest's face as she lay asleep. She was horribly burnad and will loose her eyes. The outrage is supposed to have been committed by a man whose suits had been rejected by a girl who lived and slept with Mrs. Forrest.

We are indebted to Bradley & Rulofson for a photographic view, cabinet size, of the world renowned caravansary, the Palace Hotel, San Francisco. Attached to the picture is a printed description of the building and of the "Palace Villa," better known as Belmont, formerly Ralston's country residence, now a part and parcel of the great hotel.

The Nevada Jury Law.

The jury law passed by the Nevada Legislature of 1874-5 was recently declared unconstitutional by Judge Rising for the reason that it denies the defendant the right of peremptory challenge. The old jury law of 1873 was declared by the Judge to be reinstated.

St. Nicholas.

St. Nicholas Magazine for November is full of choice reading for the little folks, contributed by the best writers and illustrated with spirited engravings. One serial story telling how some boys emigrated to California, is of special interest.

Bite of the Rattlesnake.

A Postoffice agent traveling in Texas, tells of the successful use of the gall of a rattlesnake as an antidote for the bite of that reptile. In the case spoken of relief was almost instantaneous to the patient, who was writhing in paroxysms of great pain, rapidly swelling and becoming purple. A friend of the writer, who had spent several years in California and New Mexico, saw the same remedy successfully used among the Indians in the lower country. In one instance an Indian's dog near the camp was bitten in the nose by a large rattlesnake. The Indians immediately opened the reptile and administered the gall. The cure was rapid and effectual.—[St. Augustine Press.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Wheeler Expedition.

Lieut. Birney, commanding party No. 2 of the Wheeler Expedition has about completed his surveys in this section and in a few days, goes to Caliente to disband his party for the Winter. Party No. 1, Lieut. Bergland, commanding, has already disbanded at Los Angeles. Mr. O. Loew, of that party who, with Mr. Brookdoff, called on us a day or two ago, is making a sort of an individual survey of this country through to Virginia City, collecting mining and other facts for publication in a German journal. Earthquake phenomenas, particularly of our little affair of March, 1872, will receive due attention.

To Meet.

The regular terms of the District Court, County Court and Board of Supervisors begin next Monday. The District Court calander is quite a full one we understand. The prominent case is that of Ashim for the killing of Perasich. This case we are assured will be tried here if it is possible to obtain a jury. There is but little business to occupy the County Court. The new Supervisors will have enough to keep them employed for several days, but so far as we know the chief business will be in the examination of bills, particularly those for election services, covering two elections.

New Law Firm.

By card and notice of partnership elsewhere in this issue it will be seen that P. Reddy and A. R. Conklin have entered into a law partnership. The active or office work here in this place will devolve largely upon Judge Conklin, Mr. Reddy's mining operations requiring much if not all his time at Darwin. It is hardly necessary to say that this will be a most responsible and reliable firm, whether its members are taken singly or collectively.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Reddy have both got home rgain after their long absence. Mr. Reddy will remain here during Court, after which he will have to spend most of his time in Darwin, superintending the Defiance Mining Company's extensive operations....Mr. Rhine, of Harris & Rhine, has gone on another visit to Panamint. It is rumored that this firm are likely soon to purchase the entire merchantile business of the Surprise Valley Co. in Panamint. As yet, however, the trade has not been consumated....Mr. J. A. Lank, having rusticated at Panamint long enough, has come back "to run with those cows again."

Will Pay Coin Only.

Mr. Reddy, Superintendent of the Defiance Mining Co., informs us that company will issue no "orders" but pay in coin exclusively, once every month. Coin is a good thing--financially speaking, it stands at the top of the heap--but it is an open question whether it is better for the community than the money order system, under circumstances as they exist here. However we do not propose to discuss that matter now.

Proposed Festival.

Some of the ladies of this place propose soon to hold a sort of a festival or sociable with a view of affording all who choose to participate a little pleasant recreation and at the same time a chance to help a little in another direction, viz., to raise a small sum with which to put the parsonage in a safe and habitable condition. We are not advised as to the proposed programme, beyond that it includes a supper, and that it is not the desire or intention to make it a very grand or elaborate affair in any way.

The Defiance Company's Furnace.

Every effort is being made to have the Defiance furnace in full blast by the middle of November, now at hand. The machinery for this furnace is said to be the very best produced in San Francisco. If the developments in the mine continue a short time longer as wonderfully promising as heretofore down to the present, the company will build another furnace at once.

Habeas Corpused.

Through his attorneys, Reddy & Conklin, John Monterio the Portuguese gentleman who pounded the Blue Tailed Fly at Lone Pine, and then got a 150 days for contempt of Court, was brought before Judge Hannah on habeas corpus Thursday last. By reason of an error in the commitment he was released and now goes forth seeking whom he may pound.

The Potosi Tunnel.

We are pleased to hear that John Simpson has commenced work again on the above named important enterprise at Gerro Gordo. He has a force of twelve men at work laying track and other preliminary work in the tunnel. It will be some time yet before the Burleigh drill is set to work.

Cerro Gordo.

Times in Cerro Gordo are improving materially. Belshaw has had the water through the pipes from the Duval Spring for some time, and his furnace is now in full blast. It does not appear, however, that a force has been put to work in the Union mine yet.

Goes to Darwin.

The Panamint News in its issue of the 21st closes its career in that place and its present name, but will re-appear again in few days at Darwin. The name for the new issue is not yet announced.

Singular Stage Accident.

Some passengers on Thursday's stage from Panamint to the junction came very near getting their necks broken in Shepherd's canyon. These were Sheriff J. J. Moore, Pat Downey and Billy Coulter. Owing to a press of passengers in excess of the capacity of the usual buckboaad, an express wagon had been substituted the hind seat of which was not securely fastened to prevent it slipping backwards. The three passengers named were on this, proceeding quietly up the hill, when the driver sudtouched up his team with the effect of jerking the wagon from under the seat, passengers and all. Falling head first on the rocks all three were knocked senseless, and laid there till the stage had proceeded a hundred yards or so before the driver became aware of what had occurred. By that time Downey had so far recovered that he raised up to look after the stage as it was leaving him and the rest behind. His conclusion then jumped at was that the driver and the other passengers considered him and the other two lying quietly in the road as too dead to bother with without a coroner present, and were going after one. He was congratulating himself on the fact that his life insurance would leave his wife pretty well provided for, when he began to realize he wasn't dead at all, however it might be with his companions; that "that blackguard of a stage had passengers abbord it was lavin' behint," and thereupon sung out and acquainted the driver with the fact. On examination it appeared that Coulter was the most severely injured, blood issuing freely from his nose, mouth and ears; but all were soon able to proceed, and consider their hurts of no permanent consequence.

Panamint.

Judge J. M. Murphy is in from Panamint, having business before the District Court, to convene Monday. The Judge is very sanguine as to the future of Panamint. The shipment of fine bullion from the Company's 20-stamp mill will this month be well on to $80,000, to which is to be added probably $20,000 for the same period from the little 5 stamper of the Sunrise Co. The Wyoming and Hemlock both are developing most splendidly at a depth of 300 feet. The ore body, running to $300 per ton, is full 14 feet wide in the Wyoming, while the Hemlock shows very nearly as wide and quite as rich. Either of those mines will more than supply the big mill; in fact it is estimated there is enough in sight in the Hemlock alone to keep it running constantly for eight months or thereabouts. There is scarce a doubt but the Company will have full sixty stamps in operation within a year, and the population will then number as many thousands as it now does hundreds. We place perfect reliance in the Judge's opinions and statements of facts, and though here scarcely outlined, give them as of importance in various aspects. The town itself is looking up considerably of late. It will still further improve now that Harris & Rhine, by the purchase of the Company's store, will concentrate such a large additional business in the town proper. Consequent on that sale the Company's store was closed to business last Sunday.

Jubilated.

Some of the boys of this place had quite a jollification last Saturday night, in celebrating Judge Hannah's re-election. They sent up rockets, burnt lots of powder, etc., and in doing so, everytime there was a good substantial explosion, hurrahed for the "Stiffs" and, vice versa, when it was naught but a fizzle, 'rahed for the "Belly-aches" and thereupon ordered Pain Killer for all hands. Furthermore, they indulged in extensive cheering not forgetting even THE INDEPENDENT office in the exuberance of their spirits, giving numerous cheers and a tiger, for all of which our thanks are due, even though we didn't stand in more than to give all a fair show. What else happened we are not able to say having ere that retired to a virtuous couch.

From Arizona.

Our old timer, J. L. Darrah, put in an appeaarance yesterday, having just returned on a visit after some months residence away down in Arizona near the Mexican line. He thinks that country beats the 'varsal world in point of mineral wealth, climate, trees, grass and other desirable things, but we cannot undertake now to relate some very interesting facts he tells us regarding these things, particularly an anciently worked mine lately rediscovered, and in which he is part owner. We shall endeavor to tell something about it hereafter.

About a School.

We don't wish it understood that we are assuming any responibility in the matter, but the question we are called on to frequently answer is. "When are we going to have a school in this place?" For weeks our answer has been. "Pretty soon, and it will be a first class one too." The question now is. How long is pretty soon? But that is a question we can't answer. Can anybody else?

Reception Dance.

The numerous friends of Mrs. P. Reddy tendered her a most elegant reception dance and supper last night. The Court Room was used as the dancing hall, the supper being given at Levy's restaurant.

At Mokelumne Hill.

Col. James Brady and family are now residing at Mokelumne Hill whether but temporarily or not, we are not advised.

One of Connelly's teams passed here Wednesday having 10,000 pounds of Pine Mountain bullion aboard.

A Lost Race of the Monongahela.

[From The Pittsburg Commercial.]

Several years ag considerable excitement was created in Fairmont, West Virginia, by the discovery of traces of an old macadamized road extending along the right bank of the Monongahela, opposite that place. Recently the Government engineering party engaged in the survey of the Upper Monongahela river, with the view of slack watering that stream from Morgantown to to Fairmont, examined this old road, and from the members of the party we learn that there can be no doubt but that this road furnishes another trace of the lost race that once dominated the Continent long before the Indians came into posssssion.

There are traces of the road for nearly eleven miles along the narrow strip of bottom land between the hills and the river, though at many points the river, having shifted its channel and cut into the hills, has entirely obliterated every evidence of it. Generally the road is covered by from two to five feet of alluvium, either deposited through the course of ages by the river floods or else by the slow washing off the hills striking it. Its width is said to be fifteen feet.

The most curious feature about the road is that the stone from which it is formed appears invariably to have been burnt. Whenever the road shows itself in the cutting banks, it is marked by the black sub-stratum of ashes. In depth the broken stone varies from six inches to eighteen inches of irregular fragments. The material employed appears to have been largely composed of boulders of red sandstone, and the conjecture is that they were broken after being made hot with water thrown upon them. There being few (if any) boulders in the river or adjacent country, the query arises, where could the material have been obtained to make this road?

At the crossings of the streams there are no traces of bridge abutments or piers, which leads to the conclusion that the streams were crossed on wooden bridges. At many points the road is covered with trees 150 years old, which makes it certain that it was constructed long before the advent of the white man; and there are other circumstances surrounding the case which lead inevitably to the conclusion it was made in those early ages when a semi-civilized people inhabited North America. No one acquainted with the habits of the American Indians would give them credit for constructing such a work of art as this.

Important to Tax-Payers.

It may not be generally known that the sale of property by the Sheriff for delinquent taxes as ordered by Court annuls and invalidates all liens upon said property such as mortgages, etc. We quote from the law on the subject: "And it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the defendant and all persons claiming, or to claim from or under him, and all persons having liens subsequent to the lien of said tax by judgment or decree upon the property, and his or their personal representatives and all persons claiming under them be forever barred and foreclosed of and from all equity of redemption and claim of, in and to said property." The decree of the Court also states that any of the parties who came into possession on the property since the day that the tax became a lien on said property shall deliver possession on the production of the Sheriff's deed for the said premises. It therefore behooves those delinquent to attend to the matter and pay their taxes and costs or they will lose their property.—[Sonora Democrat.

A Lively Day in Washoe.

A Virginia paper of the 18th gives this account of the liveliest day ever seen on the Comstock, all on account of that big, little man, Gen. Phil. Sheridan:

General Sheridan arrived here this afternoon about 2 o'clock. He was met at Gold Hill, where he left the cars, by the military and firemen of Gold Hill and Virginia, and escorted through the principal streets of Gold Hill and Virginia, which were profusely decorated with flags and banners, arches, etc. C street was one dense mass of people, who cheered him heartily as he passed. The whistles of the different mining companies, from the Rock Island to the Sierra Nevada, saluted him with one prolonged sound while the procession was passing. Upon the whole it was one of the liveliest days Virginia City has ever seen. He will remain here until Wednesday morning, the guest of Frank Osbiston, when he takes his departure for the East.

Murder at Tehachapai.

John Burns got drunk and stabbed a man, in Tehachapai, who was employed by Nadeau as a blacksmith. He was arrested and taken before Justice Calhoun, who committed him to the County Jail for consideration by the Grand Jury. Since his arrival we learn that the man whom he stabbed is dead. It is said to be an aggravated case of murder.—[Bakersfield Courier.

Heavy Loss of Angora Goats.

A correspondent of The San Francisco Chronicle says: "That as the flock emerged from the Tehachapai valley and entered the outskirts of the Mohave desert, in the vicinity of Caliente, the animals took to the milk weed which grows there in abundance, with avidity, which has affected many of them fatally. About five hundred of the flock had already succumbed to the deadly poison which the weed contains. The carcasses were scattered all over the plain, and the atmosphere was tainted for miles around by the stench which arose from them. There were some hopes that the remainder would survive. But the dangers of the journey have apparently only commenced. The parched sands of the Mohave desert have yet to be safely traversed. It was Mr. Hardy's intention to proceed from Caliente to Willow Springs, then strike across the desert for the Mohave river, fifty miles distant. Between these two points there is no water known to exist—certainly no springs or flowing streams. There are a few moist spots at various places in the otherwise arid plain, where Mr. Hardy expects he will be able to obtain enough water for his stock by digging wells; but he runs the risk of not being able to get water free enough from alkali and other salts to be fit for use and capable of quenching thirst. Fodder is plentiful, a sage plant, the leaves of which the goats are very fond of, growing abundantly; the object of selecting this, route in preference to the safer one by way of Los Angeles and San Bernardino is because there will be a saving of about two weeks travel, and it is expected that the hardships to be encountered on the short route will be less trying than the tax upon the endurance of the animals which the longer one would impose.

A Miscreant.

O. H. Purdy, Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Idaho Territory, has received a communication from the Secretary of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, A. F. & A. M., Chicago, stating that one Edmond Ronayne, a Past Master of the latter lodge, is traveling through the country, delivering lectures and working in public on the three symbolic degrees of Masonry. The miscreant was expelled from all the rights and privileges of the Order, by reason of unmasonic conduct, and takes this execrable method to "get even."—[Idaho Avalanche.

Pedantry Piqued.

"So you have finished your studies at the seminary? I was much pleased with the closing exercises. The author of that poem—Miss White, I think you called her—bids fair to become known as a poet."

"We think the authoress will become celebrated as a poetess," remarked the young lady pertly, with a marked emphasis on two words of the sentence.

"Oh!—ah!" replied the old gentleman, looking thoughtfully over his spectacles at the young lady. "I hear her sister was quite an actress, and under Miss Hosmer's instructions will undoubtedly become quite a sculptoress."

"The seminary," continued the old gentleman with imperturable, gravity, "is fortunate in having an efficient Board of Manageresses. From the Presidentess down to the humblest teacheress unusual talent is shown. There is Miss Harper, who, as a chemistress, is unequaled, and Mrs. Knowles has already a reputation as an astronomeress. And in the department of music few can equal Miss Kellogg as a singeress."

The young lady did not appear to like the chair she was sitting on. She took the sofa at the other end of the room.

"Yes," continued the old gentleman, as if talking to himself, "those White sisters are very talented. Mary, I understand has turned her attention to painting and the drama, and will surely become famous as a painteress, and even as a lecturess."

A loud slamming of the door caused the old gentleman to look up, and the criticess and the grammarianess was gone.

The Original Mary's Little Lamb.

A writer in The Springfield Republican has had a pleasant interview with the real Mary who had a little lamb, and who related to him the incidents on which the immortal poem was based. The lamb was a twin, thrust out of the pen by its unnatural mother. Mary took it home and nursed it until well, and it naturally grew into a great pet. One morning when it was to go as usual to the pasture it could not be found, and when Mary went singing on her way to school it followed her; at the school-house door she picked it up and managed to carry it secretly to her desk, where she covered it up with her shawl. But when called up to her spelling-class the lamb got up too, and came pattering after her, which made the children laugh to see a lamb at school. It happened that morning that a young man named John Rowlston, the son of a riding-master in Boston, who was fitting himself for Harvard, was at the school, and a few days afterward produced three verses of the poem. How it ever came to be published Mary did not know, for the young man died soon after, ignorant of the immortality of his verses. But the lamb lived and had five lambkins before it met its death by an angry cow. Aside from its memory there yet remains of it the residue of a child's stocking, which is gradually unravelling to furnish momentoes for the many friends of Mary and her little lamb.

A Car-Driver's Religion.

The Chicago Tribune contributes the following: "'What religion am I, eh?' said a driver on a Randolph street car, 'Wall, I'm a kind o' limited Univarsalist.' 'Limited Universalist?' responded his querists in amaze, 'if you're a Universalist at all you must believe that every one'll be saved.' 'I know, I know,' replied the man of brakes, 'most every one'll be saved, but of course there's got to be exceptions, like there is to every general rule. It stands to reason 'taint likely an all-merciful Father 'd save them draymen as always crossess a down grade of a suddent, or the woman that talks on the crossing with her panier turned to us till the car's gone by, and then hail it and scolds the driver, or the man who stops the car in the middle of a block and then gets on again because he has made a mistake. No, sir, p'raps of course they'll stop the celestial car for them cattle, but if they do you bet they'll have to hang on the brake iron. No seats for them, I guess. Car?'"

Cost of the War.

Lieutenant-General Adams has given us the figures, representing the total cost of the White Pine Indian war. They are not large, showing that Mr. Adams, had faithfully and honestly looked after the best interests of the State. The whole bill only foots up $13,500, a mere bagatelle considering the number of men called out from this place, White Pine and Pioche. The accounts allowed by the Lieteuant-Governor are all just and will of course be paid. The amount is too insignificant to create opposition in any quarter, and every fair-minded man will concede that it should be paid. Mr. Adams' estimate did not include the pay of the men, who, in response to the Governor's call, dropped their $4 per day to go to the front. It is but an act of simple justice that they be paid for their time, but that is a matter depending entirely on the liberality of the next Legislature.—[Eureka Sentinel.

A Safe Part of Kentucky.

We hear persons very frequently speak of the condition of things in Breathitt county, as though one would be in danger of losing his life in passing through that county, and we understand many persons are actually afraid to go to Jackson, the county seat, to trade or transact business. Such fears are by no means well founded. The time has never been when a stranger was in any danger, except it should be from an accidental shot.—[Mountain Echo.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any interior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

$6 00 per Annum, in Advance.

Specimen Copies of THE ALDINE, 50 Cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of James Sutton, President.

A Friend in Need.

[From The Turf, Field and Farm.]

It is generally known that thouroughbred and other well bred horses have their attachments for stable companions—cats, goats, dogs, and at times even for domesticated fowls, geese, ducks, etc. To these they exhibit great partiality, and often a marked affection. The following incident, one among many we could recite, is an illustration in point: A gentleman living in Norway, Maine, owned a thoroughbred horse, which he used for the saddle. He also owned an English coach dog—a handsome, faithful animal—between whom and the horse there existed a friendship strong and hearty. The dog's bed at night was under the horse's manger, and they were seldom apart. In fact, the dog, at length, would not leave the horse except he was called away to accompany his master, and on such occasions the horse would very freely and touchingly manifest his restlessness and unhappiness. One day the horse was feeding upon a grass plot back of the house, being tethered by a sweep of rope attached to his halter so as to allow him good scope without permitting him to encroach upon the adjacent corn-patch. The coach dog was with him as usual. At the same time a friend chanced to call on business, accompanied by a powerful bull-mastiff. The mastiff—an ugly, quarrelsome brute—made his way around into the garden and attacked the the coach-dog, very soon getting his savage jaws set upon the other's throat, with a prospect of seriously injuring, if not killing him. The horse saw and quickly comprehended the situation. With one wild bound he broke his tether and rushed to the scene of conflict, where he set his teeth upon the neck of the strange dog with a force and power that brought forth howlings loud and agonizing. But the horse was not satisfied with making the mastiff let go his hold. He lifted the belligerent cur bodily into the air and bore him to the gate, where he shook him until a piece of his hide gave way. When released the mangled brute retreated with yelps and howls of pain.

Financial Opinion.

She said she'd take a dozen eggs, but while the grocer was counting them out she asked the price. He told her and she shrieked:

"Seventeen cents?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Why, that's outrageous!"

"Well, it's hard times, and everything is up."

She sat down on a sugar barrel, sighed several times, and asked if eggs were likely to be lower or higher. "I don't claim to be a prophet," he replied, as he twisted a sheet of paper into the shape of a funnel, "but I dare say that they'll be down to sixteen and one-half cents in less than a week, and perhaps go lower. Trade, which is naturally depressed during July and August, is looking up a little. Our exports of gold are now equaled by our imports. The calling in of bonds puts more ready money afloat, capitalists are much more hopeful this week than last. The crops are about ready to move, navigation prospects are brighter, and public confidence in financial measures is rapidly returning. One thing moves around another, you see, and though as I said before, I am not a financier, and my predictions are not entitled to any great weight, it seems clear to me that eggs have got to come down. A great current of eggs is setting toward this point from a dozen different directions, and even if the calling in the bonds of the sale of surplus gold don't produce lower prices, I cannot see why figures should go up."

She reached into the pickle barrel, nipped a cucumber, and went away wondering why her husband never knew any thing.—[Detroit Free Press.

And a boy climbed on the alley fence, waved his hat, and cried out: "Why in blazes hain't the reporters around here to get this awful tragedy?" A Virginia Fire Incident.

Yesterday, after the Consolidated Virginia and Ophir works were in full blaze, a gentleman, whose residence is east of the Ophir shaft—and which residence had been on fire several times—had finally given up that the house must be lost, and had ceased further exertion; suddenly he was surprised to see a mountain quail light at his feet. In a moment the bird flew up to his breast, and lit on his vest. The man unbuttoned two buttons of his vest, when the bird ran beneath it and nestled close over his heart. He buttoned his coat over the bird, and then said to himself, "That means that my house can be saved," and went to work again. Just then the uncertain wind changed, the volume of smoke was turned another way; the house was saved, and now, next to the children, the bird is the highest prized treasure in that house.—[Enterprise, October 27th.

Pups Before Babies

During the intense excitement that prevailed in Virginia City yesterday, as is usual in such cases, persons were observed to exercise the greatest solicitude in regard to articles of the smallest value. One woman, the mother of several children and the proprietress of a healthy litter of bull pups, hailed a Truckee man and requested him to assist her in carrying a wash tub in which she had the pups tenderly packed. She had left the children in the house.—[Truckee Republican, October n7th.

Johnny's Composition on Girls.

Girls ain't animals, but humens which gro up to be wimmins, same as calfs git to be cows. Girls has long hair, too lazy to cut it off and wear frocks, not like me and Billy, trowsers. If I was a girl you'd see me take them things off mity sune, I can tell you, cos they luke dicklous in em, like sugar lofes, only not sweet. I hate girls, and Billy, he hates em too, but not my sister, cos she can't help it. Uncle Ned, who has been in Injy and every where, he says he was to a place once where all the little boys like me and Billy hates the little girls like takin pills, but after the little boys is grode up, and the girls too, they like em. I said Uncle Ned, where's that? and he said, Madigigasker. Then I said: Oh, that accounts for it, them boys is niggers, and he said that's a fact, Johnny, they is likd of Ohpake to luke at, but that's wot makes it more surprising, cos the girls there is niggers too.

Yesterday when Aunt Marthy was at our house with her little baby she gave it to me to mind, wile all the fokes was in the dining rume, and her too, so bime by Mary she came a runnin in and said Johnny, mite she give it a goody, the darlin little angel, and I said yes, she mite, if she would so a patch on my little red wagon where it was worn out. She said she wud, and what do you think she gave, wy a pickle walnut wich was so big it wud hardly go in it mowth. Suce stranglin and koffin and hollerin was never saw, and wen the fokes came in my father had to git it out with the handle of a table nife, and all the wile the vinegar bustin out of his nose. Wen it was all over my mother she said, Mary, how under the sun did the chile git such a thing, and Mary she said, O, if you please, mum, it must have ketched it passin the hospittle. But Uncle Ned, who has been to Injy and every where, he says the poor little toper must have been mixin his drinks, cos wot it had was a little fit. I don't kno what he means, for how cud it mix em les it had 2 mothers?

Girls like to play with dols, but gimme a hammer, and a kite, and a wiptop, and a wagon, and a hobby horse, and lots of twine, and some nales, and lots of chocks, and a wooden sword, and lots of marbles, and I'll git on with, jest the littlest dol wich can be made and I don't care whether it has close on or not.

Girls is all very well wile thay stick to their dolses and such nonsense, but wen it comes to ridin on a sack or coles and playin thay was cavalry, I say it's disgusin, but me and Billy is as brave sojers as ever you see.

Facts Worth Remembering.

A correspondent gives the following useful recipes:

If you have been picking or handling any acid fruit, and have stained your hands, wash them in clear water, wipe them lightly, and while they are yet moist strike a match and shut your hands around it so as to catch the smoke and the stains will disappear. If you have stained your muslin or gingham dress, or your white pants with berries, before wetting with anything else, pour boiling water through the stains, and they will disappear. Before fruit juice dries it can often be removed by cold water, using a sponge and towel if necessary. Rubbing the fingers with the inside of the paring of apples will remove most of the stains caused by paring.

To clean and restore the elasticity of cane chair bottoms: Turn the chair bottom upward, and with hot water and a sponge wash the cane; work well, so that it is well soaked; should it be dirty, use soap; let it dry well in the air, and it will be as tight and firm as new, provided none of the canes are broken.

Match mats can be made of ordinary sand paper, cut in circular and octagonal shapes, fastened upon pasteboard and bound with bright-colored braids, a ring attached to each, and the whole hung near the match safe for use whenever a match is lighted. The unsightly marks that disfigure many walls may by this inexpensive and simple arrangement, be entirely prevented. There should be one in every room in the house.

What Carson is Doing.

All the bakeries, public houses and restaurants are engaged in cooking to their full capicity for the Virginia sufferers. They are to be kept going until further notice by order of the Relief Committee. Many private houses are engaged in the same work. A special train will take the provisions to Virginia this morning. A coin subscription has been started, headed by D. L. Bliss with $500. Our people should raise at least $10,000. Farmer Treadway will send up several tons of produce. The Finance Committee were out yesterday afternoon. The citizens responded most cheerfully. They were out only a few hours and there was subscribed $2,500. They do not intend to stop short of $10,000. Those who are able to give should do so like men. All should give, clerks as well as business men. The names of the committee are E. B. Rail, O. P. Willis and William H. Bryant.—[Appeal Oct. 27.

—Two finished sections of 50 miles each of the Southern Pacific Railroad have been inspected and accepted by the Government Railroad Commissioners. The first section commences at San Fernando, in Los Angeles county and runs to Spadra, and the second reaches from Spadra to San Gorgonio Pass.

What to Eat.

Dr. Hall relates the case of a man who was cured of his biliousness by going without his supper and drinking freely of lemonade. The next morning this patient arose with a wonderful sense of rest and refreshment, and feeling as though the blood had been literally washed, cleansed and cooled by the lemonade and fast. His theory is that food can be used as a remedy for many diseases successfully. As an example, he cures spitting of blood by the use of salt; epilepsy, by watermelons; Kidney affections, by celery; poison, by olive or sweet oil; erysipelas, by pounded cranberries applied to the part affected; hydrophobia, by onions, etc. So the way to keep in good health is really to know what to eat and what medicines to take.

He is Wanted.

As will be seen from the following, Woodbury Jackson, a long time since from Boston, and latterly in the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad is wanted:

Texas Cattle.

The Houston (Texas) Democrat says that fully 250,000 head of cattle being driven to market, have crossed the Colorado at and near Austin, the present season. Average these cattle at $26 per head, and it will leave the neat sum of $5,000,000, very nearly all of which will come back into the State as profits to the drovers.

Warlike.

A Washington dispatch says: We have the best authority for the statement that reports relative to a change of policy on the part of the Government toward the Cuban question are in the main correct. That subject is now attracting the earnest attention of both the Government of the United States and that of Spain, and it is believed that in his forthcoming annual message to Congress the President will recommend that the independence of the Cubans be recognized. And a New York dispatch of the 29th says: Advices in Cuban political circles in this city, from Paris, state that on the 25th instant, the Secretary of the Spanish navy at Madrid issued orders to the Curacoa navy yards to get the Spanish iron clads and all wooden vessels not temporarily needed, and which are around the Spanish coast, ready for service in the West Indies. Also that the appointment of Gen. Cabellos to succeed Count Valmezeda in command of Cuba is a foregone conclusion with the Cabinet, Valmezeda refusing to remain longer.

School Matters in New Orleans.

New Orleans is just now agitated from centre to circumference by the school question. An order has recently been issued by the New Orleans Board of Education, abolishing all distinction on account of color, race or nationality, in the public schools; but the citizens, or rather those who were brought up in the pro slavery school, have rebelled against this new departure. Great numbers of children have been taken from school, the members of the board have been requested, urged and ordered to resign, and civil suits and injunctions are as thick as in a street railway war in New York. The board does not, however, exhibit the remotest inclination to yield by resignation or revocation. On the contrary, the members declare that they intend to fight it out if takes all winter.

The Figures.

Inflation is now at its hight. There is in this country a circulation at this moment $769,840,119 in paper money, which in round numbers is: Two millions more than in 1874; 29 millions more than in 1873; 40 millions more than in 1872; 58 millions more than in 1871; 86 millions more than in 1870; 63 millions more than in 1869; 91 millions more than in 1868; 76 millions more than in 1867]; 71 millions more than in 1866; 141 millions more than in 1865: 167 millions more than in 1864; 482 millions more than in 1863; 437 millions more than in 1862; 591 millions more than in 1861.

Postage.

Postmaster-General Jewell is understood to be opposed to the total repeal of the amendment to the Postal Law passed last Winter. He believes in the present rates of postage on all third-class matter, including transient newspapers. He wishes the present rates retained on all articles of merchandise, but for newspapers and magazines he will recommend that the rates which existed previous to the passage of the Hamlin amendment be restored.

Murdered and Eaten by Cannibals.

A Boston special says the barks Delia M. Long and Jewess, both of Boston, and a British bark which sailed some time ago from New South Wales for Auckland island, were becalmed in the Hecia islands and boarded by cannibals in large numbers, who overpowered the crews, plundered the ships and scuttled them. The entire crews were killed and eaten at a cannibal feast.

Notable Death.

James Otis, Mayor of San Francisco, died October 30, after a short illness. Mr. Otis was one of the oldest and best known merchants of the city, the house of Macondray & Co., having been established in 1849, and standing firm through all the commercial vicissitudes of San Francisco. Mr. Otis had but a month of his term yet to serve.

Ann Elizea and Brigham.

Judge Borman, in the Third District Court, has just decided that the order made by Chief Justice McKean some time since, ordering Brigham Young to pay Ann Eliza Young $7,500 alimony be enforced, and that Brigham Young be imprisoned until the same is paid, with costs, and he was so imprisoned, but in his own house.

Thanksgiving.

The President has issued his proclamation for a Day of Thanksgiving, fixing that event to occur this year on the 25th of this month.

IS IT WAR!

From certain facts just reported it would seem as if the authorities at Washington think we are just on the eve of war with some foreign power. Orders have been received at the Mare Island Navy Yard to put the two turret ships Camanche and Monadnock in fighting trim with all possible despatch. The material for this purpose is being sent by rail at very great additional cost over the usual method of sending such heavy freight by sea. From all this it is inferred that San Francisco is threatened with imminent danger from some powerful foe. But, so far as the public is informed, no one can say from what source the danger is expected. And yet there must be danger anticipated, else why these extraordinary efforts to put San Francisco harbor in defensive condition? Both of the iron clads mentioned will have to be rebuilt almost entirely. This, of course, will require time. It is supposed by some, that the point is to have this work done in time to checkmate Spain which, in view of Cuban affairs may see proper to declare war against us before Congress meets, and thus obtain a decided advantage while we are getting ready if that work is postponed till Congress authorizes it. It will be remembered that the President has been recently credited with having determined to recognize belligerent rights to Cuba, and that in consequence Spain must take it as a casus belli. But even that would hardly seem to afford a satisfactory reason for this alleged haste on the part of our Government in preparing for war since the proposed recognition cannot take place till after Congress meets, and till that is done it is not at all likely Spain or any other power would think of commencing hostilities wholly in anticipation of a tangible cause. Yet there is something astir, having more than the usual smell of gunpowder, but it is all speculation as to what thet something is.

One Hundred Christmas Presents.

The December Number of The St. Nicholas will contain an admirable article, entitled: "One Hundred Christmas Presents, and How to Make Them." This article is full of practical descriptions, by the aid of which girls of all ages, and boys, too, for that matter, can make beautiful and useful Christmas Presents for all their friends and relations. It will be ready November 20th.

"The Nursery"

Is the name of a handsome little monthly published by John L. Shorey, at Boston. It is published at the low price price of $1 60 a year in currency, and is well worth the money. It is filled with pleasing and attractive illustrations, choice and well culled selections adapted to the juvenile comprehension.

Rich Strike in Austin.

The Austinites are jubilant. At the 400-foot level of the South American mine a ledge has been struck which will add materially to the bullion production of Lander counry. The Raveille says the ledge is eighteen inches in width, and the ore assays on an average $200 per ton.

Coming to a Conclusion.

Don Carlos is about to hold a council with his leading generals to determine whether the war for the Spanish crown should be continued or abandoned. Don Carlos has evidently reached a crisis which demands a submission to the inevitable.

More Steamships.

Trenor W. Park, of the Panama Railroad says that his road has determined to start a new line of twenty first-class steamships between New York and San Francisco, taking in Central America and some of the South American ports.

The Burnt District After Dark.

[From The Gold Hill News, October 27.]

Virginia City presented a sight last night such as has been seen by but few on this coast; a sight that all pray never to witness again. The fairest portion of the town, that in which was located all the principal business houses and large hoisting works, that were the very life-blood of the city, and main source of wealth on the coast, was one heap of blackened, burning and falling ruins. Very few of the walls of the buildings that passed through the fire remained uninjured, and the greater portion of the noblest edifices were but confused piles of brick and mortar. Early in the evening the house of Banner Brothers, on the corner of C and Taylor streets, that had been burning inside for several hours, burst out into bright flames, and the greater portion of the brick walls fell to the ground with a loud crash. The wind was at the time blowing in gusts that frequently amounted to a gale, and terrific whirlwinds swept over the city with a fearful noise, carrying coal oil cans, pieces of tin roofing, and great clouds of dust and ashes wherever they went. The danger to life on this account was so great that very few had the courage or hardihood to pass through the smouldering ruins, in the early part of the night, but hundreds could be seen on the outskirts looking with rueful countenances on all that remained of their happy homes of the morning. And those remains, what were they? Simply the ground that the insatiate element in all its mad fury could not destroy, nothing more; for out of the thousands who in a few short hours were rendered homeless, very few saved more than the clothes on their backs, and will have nothing but the charity of the benevolent to depend on in their hour of need.

Passing along the western side of town the curious spectator might have seen groups of people sitting among a few of their household goods that had been saved from the flames, those of that side of town being fortunate enough to get some of their goods away from the fire. At the north end of town very few were to be seen, the great majority of the people having, to the credit of those who had a shelter to offer, being provided with quarters for the night. In this, Gold Hill came nobly to the rescue.

A New Hot Air Engine.

Another novelty in motors driven by hot air was exhibited in motion at the late fair of the New York Mechanics' Institute. It is described in The Scientific American as follows: It consists of two cylinders, one for power, under which the fire is built, the other simply for compression. The latter has a water jacket, and both cylinders have pistons, or more properly, plunger. The piston of the compression cylinder passes through packing at the top of the same, but below fits loosely in the bore, so that the air compressed is at liberty to pass up around the piston, and to enter a connecting passage, which leads it into the power cylinder, where it is heated and expanded, and so lifts the piston. As the two pistons are set on cranks 180 deg. apart, the down stroke of the power piston corresponds to the up stroke of the compression piston, so that the air, which just before has been expended, is now returned to be recompressed and again used. Thus the air is merely shifted from one cylinder to the other, and its cooling or heating is quickly accomplished through its being exposed to the action of the cold water or the fire in thin annular sheets. The machine (one horse power) we are told, burns very little fuel, one scuttleful answering for an entire day. The expenditure of oil is also very small. This seems to be a very simple apparatus, and one well adapted for a large number of light uses. It is almost entirely free from disagreeable noise usually incident to caloric engines.

Rates of Postage.

Rates of postage need to be frequently repeated to meet the wants of the careless, the forgetful and the ignorant. Here they are:

All letters to all parts of the United States and Canada, three cents per half ounce. Local or "drop" letters, that is, for the city or town where deposited, two if delivered by carries, and one cent if there is no carrier system Newspapers, daily, semi-weekly, tri-weekly, regularly issued and sent to regular subscribers, two cents per pound payable at the office of publication. Newspapers and magazines published less frequently than once aweek, three cents per pound. All other printed or miscellaneous matter not exceeding four pounds in weight, one cent for each ounce or fraction of an ounce. Manuscript for publication in newspapers, magazines, etc., is subject to letter postage. Undelivered letters can be resent to a new address without additional charge. Stamps cut from stamped envelopes are rejected by the Post office. Letters to European countries, including Great Britain and Ireland, five cents the half ounce or fraction thereof, except to France, which require nine cents postage. Newspapers to Europe, two cents for four ounces or fraction thereof, except to France, when three cents are required. Postage to Asiatic countries varies with the route.

Hot Water in a Mine.

A miner named Wm. Terry, working in the Savage mine, was badly scalded yesterday under the following circumstances: He was descending the incline upon the "Comanche," and was lowered a little further than is customary, his feet and legs entering the water at the bottom. The water was so hot that it took all the skin off his left leg from the knee down, and badly scalded the right leg and foot. Had he not made a spring immediately upon striking the water and instantly got himself out, he would have been scalded to death.—[Va. Chronicle, Oct. 25.

—The mean annual depth of rain falls at the equator is 96 inches.

Interesting Political News.

A New York despatch of the 23d ultimo gave this in relation to Cabinet affairs:

The Herald's Washington special says Vice President Wilson made a flying visit to Washington to-day, remaining only a few hours, and returning to New York. He came to see for himself the effect in political circles here of the appointment of Secretary Chandler to a seat in the Cabinet. The open break in the Republican camp caused by this appointment offers Wilson an opportunity for his own well known ambition to be Grant's successor, and his visit was in the nature of a reconnoisance to learn the extent of the latest rebellion against Grant, which is so pronounced that to kill him off Senator Cameron will probably let the Pennsylvania election go by default. Furthermore the early resignation of Postmaster General Jewell is predicted by his friends, his withdrawal from office being the biginning of the breaking up of the Cabinet, which, it is believed, was apprehended as soon as Chandler was made Secretary of the Interior The resignation of Mr. Jewell from the Cabinet would allow him to put himself with a good grace in the hands of his friends, who are desirous of securing him the position for Vice President in 1876. The decapitation of Assistant Secretary Cowan on the return of Chandler from Michigan will be the signal for the resignation of Secretary Bristow who will then also be free to accept the ministrations of his friends in furtherance of his nomination for President All this shows the progress of the movement inside the Republican party against its control by the President, and indicates the strength of the Bristow Jewell combination in the Cabinet. Doubtless the formidable aspect of this combination for a Republican ticket next year was too much for the peace of mind of Vice President Wilson, and hastened his return East.

Grant and the Mormons.

It is again reported that the President contemplates aggressions upon the Mormon stronghold, and that in his forthcoming message he will make some very "strong" recommendations concerning them. We are quite prepared to learn that this step has been taken, but we are also prepared to discover that it has no effect whatever upon the Mormons. The triumphant impunity with which Brigham Young and his followers have during an entire generation trampled the Constitution and laws of the United States under foot, has been so steadily maintained that we are almost inclined to suspect Congress has been subsidized by the Prophet. Certainly history furnishes no parallel to the case, and unless public opinion undergoes a very marked and decisive change, the probability seems that we shall continue to let the Mormons severely alone in the future as we have in the past, however we may amuse ourselves by periodical fulminations against them, or abortive and farcical proceedings sush as those in connection with the Mountain Meadow massacre. —[Union Record.

The Black Hills.

Professor Jenney, the geologist of the Black Hills expedition, has returned, after a five months' sojourn in that region. He reports gold fields extending forty miles wide that contain gold in quantities which will pay from $3 to $5 per day to each man. There are a number of streams that will pay much more than that. Water supply is ample for working purposes and fully sufficient to carry water from the top of most the bars and allow tailings to be readily disposed of The gold is loose, good and easily separated. Professor Jenney corroborates General Custar's report of the Hills, and says that they will support thousands of miners when the Government opens them for settlement. The valleys are all adapted to agriculture, and the hills and canyons to stock raising. The rainfall is plentiful and timber abundant.—[Sac. Herald.

Artificial Wants.

Bulwer says that poverty is only an idea, in nine cases out of ten. Some men, with ten thousand a year, suffer more from want of means than others with three hundred. The reason is, the richer man has artificial wants. His income is ten thousand, and he suffers enough, from being dunned for unpaid debts, to kill a sensitive man. A man who earns a dollar a day and does not run in debt is the happier of the two. Very few people who have never been rich will believe this; but it is as God's Words. There are thousands upon thousands with princely incomes who never knew a moment's peace, because they live beyond their means There is really more happiness in the world among working people than among those who are called rich.

Holds Up.

Although the mines in this immediate neighborhood have not for some time past, produced as much bullion, as some other districts, the general business of the town continues very fair—croakers to the contrary notwithstanding. The best evidence of the business of the town is in the quantity of goods, lumber etc, that is arriving daily from the railroad. There is not another town in Nevada where bills are more promptly met than in Belmont, from the smallest to the largest dealer, and yet we meet now and then a class of non-producers who are eternally complaining about "dull times."—[Belmont Courier.

Tulare.

The Visalia Times, October 30, has these items:

The sheep are starving to death in large numbers in the mountains.

The Good Templars initiate new members at almost every meeting.

The bears have killed several cows for Mr. Joseph Potter, thirty-five miles from here, in the mountains.

The case of J. Powell, for the killing of W. Z. Campbell some time ago, at Squaw Valley, terminated at Fresno this week in the acquittal of Powell.

—An unpaid board bill will strike terror to the heart of the best poet living.

—During the conversion of ice into water, 140 degrees of heat are absorbed.

—Water, when converted into steam, increases in bulk 18,000 times.

—The water is so low in some of the Western rivers that the catfish have to stand on their heads to breathe.

—"Stay," he said, his right arm round her waist, and her face expectantly turned to him, "shall it be the kiss sympathetic, graphic, oriental, intellectual, paroxysmal, quick and dismal, slow and unctious, long and tedious or what?" She said perhaps that would be the better way.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

A Judicial Fact.

A friend tells us these "true facts." It is well to state though, that the occurrences date back over a year or more. "Judge" F—— was elected Justice of the Peace for one of our neighboring townships. Shortly after, a Mexican citizen took exceptions at the way his wife was carrying on, and thought the best way to settle it would be by legal divorce. He applied to Judge F., for the required relief. His Honor made due examination through his law library as to his powers in the premises, and finding that he was authorized to tie the knot matrimonial, and not specifically prohibited from untying it, logically concluded the latter power was vested in his office also. Demanding and receiving a $20 fee he, in proper phrase and legal form, drew up the required bill of divorce, and after reading it to the recalcitrant couple, told them to go their separate ways, that they were no longer man and wife! and they did. But His Honor was much troubled in mind when he learned that the Grand Jury, then soon to assemble, would look up the law governing Justices of the Peace, so to save worry, ere that time, handed in his resignation. The same Justice prided himself much on his muscle, if not upon his knowledge of the law. During one of his first cases a scrub lawyer disputed his ruling on a certain point of law, and told him to examine his books. Gathering up his library in his arms, and looking at the several books with a perplexed air for a moment, he threw the whole library in a body at the scrub lawyer's head, and striking a gladiatorial attitude, said, while patting the swelling muscle of his bared arm "I don't know nothing about book law, but here's law no tam liyar must dispute!" No exceptions was taken to the ruling.

How the Work Proceeded.

It required two days steady work, and considerable squabbling to obtain a jury of twelve to try Ashim. Out of the 1st panel drawn five were accepted by the people, three of which were peremptorially challenged by the defense. The conditions were the same in the 2d panel, except that the people challenged off one, the defense two. In the 3d panel the people accepted three, two of whom the defense challenged off. In the 4th but one passed challenge for cause, and the defense peremptorily took him off; In the 5th five passed for cause, but the peremptory challenging of the defense left but three. Then up to the 9th drawing, all were water hauls, the people making one peremptory challenge, the defense three. The 9th haul secured three sworn jurors, besides two peremptory challenges by the defense. This made 11 in the box and but one to go. The 10th call was a failure; no peremptory challenge. The 11th was a success and the box was filled. It being then dark, (last evening) Court adjourned till 9 A. M. to-day when the trial begins. The names of the jurors will be found elsewhere. We purpose, as stated heretofore to give as complete a report of the trial, and in as near the exact language used as we possibly can, but of course, none of this can appear before our next issue.

The Cuervo Mine.

This mine, originally located as the Promontorio, Darwin district, is one of the most noted and promising as regards surface indications and quality of ore, in the district. Its development has been kept back somewhat by threatened litigation, but as all danger from that source is now happily ended, by proceedings in the present District Court, work will go on. Mr. G. P. Cornell, Superintendent, has been here during the week, and started for Darwin this morning. He informs us that he has all the machinery on the ground for the furnace, with lumber for the building on the way, and that he will have the furnace completed and running just as soon as the work can be done, which will be within a few weeks. The furnace will be located at the head of Main street, Darwin, which is about one and a half miles from the mine, with an easy road. Altogether, we think this both an important and gratifying piece of news, and will say in our opinion the Cuervo Mining Company, the owners of the property, that they have an excellent boss in Mr. Cornell.

An Inyoite Abroad.

One of our well well known citizens, notorious for his bland-like, unbiased, conscientious (?) manner in which he imparts startling information, or embellishes a narrative, was called upon while in Kern county not long since to answer the queries of a couple of Massachusetts Yankees who were traveling for information. In course of the conversation they inquired what kind of climate we enjoyed in Inyo. "Why," said Mr. Inyo, "the climate is not only salubrious like the rest of California but so healthy that there are no prevailing diseases to speak of—only one death having occurred in the county." "And what did he die of?" they anxiously inquired. "He didn't die from disease," replied the honest Inyoite, "you see he was an indolent cuss and the Supervisors to save the county from expense drawed his breath with a cork-screw." The Massachusetts gentlemen looked at their watches and remarked it was about train time.

Additional Members.

The proprietorship of the Darwin brewery, hitherto the property of Joe. Davis, as advertised, is now shared by Messers. Klieu and Jergensen.

Make an Order.

Ye Honorable County Dads, believing it to be in accordance with the desire of a vast number of tax payers and co-nwners in our court house, have formally resolved against its future use by "traveling shows," religious meetings and all such, save political and legal. This is a good order, no doubt, since it is clear that if a dozen of people should occupy seats in that court room for an hour or so once or perhaps twice a month, in the course of a few centuries the gloss would be partially worn off the seats, stairway and possibly the cornices, much to the pecuniary and mental damage of the aforesaid tax payers. It is altogether better to keep the noble structure under rigid lock and key, so that it may smell the sweeter when opened semi-annually or thereabouts for the excepted occasions. We would suggest that the respective School Trustees make a similar order with reference to school houses, which are also public property that ought not to be worn out by a lot of people too poor to build suitable places of worship. Inyo would then take rank as the banner and only county in the State in thus showing how to take care of its public property.

Aboriginal Rites.

Two squaws were observed near the office the other day marching slowly around a hugh sage brush fire and filling the air with their hideous wailing, gnashing of teeth and coyote screeching. The day was clouded and gloomy which made the ceremony all the more impressive. We tried to interview them, but like Sharon, they had an innate dislike to being questioned by reporters. It is customary with them to return to the spot where a relative has died, after a certain length of time, to make a sacrifice by burning corn, pine nuts etc. and celebrating in the manner described. Whether they have an evil spirit of darkness to contend with, or a regular communication with the departed souls, we know not.

Weather.

Until the beginning of the present week the Fall season for this region has been remarkably mild—a mere extension of a pleasant Summer a month or two beyond the usual time. But this week, what with rain and wind and snow (the first of the season) on both ranges of mountains, we begin to get a foretaste of regular old Winter. But it don't make any difference if the snow comes forty feet deep, nothing in the world will make us depart from our rule laid down years ago, never to quote or make any reference to that sort done up in poetry, "The Snow, the beautiful Snow." It would be robbing ninety-nine in every hundred newspapers of one of their most telling poetical references

A Cunundrum.

Two gents up at Cerro Gordo have taken to Creedmore rifle practice, at which, one of them, Billy Crapo, is said to equal anything in the State, 1,000 yard shots. While practicing the other day, a ball fired by one of the two after going nearly a half a mile, wounded a Mexican slightly in the shoulder and then struck his jackass, which he was driving ahead of him—and that is what is worrying the quid nunes. If he had beed leading the ass, which of course would then have been behind him it wouldn't be so hard to account for the incongruous wounding There was one fact, though, the boys did understand—and that was that they had to pay for the wounded ass.

Bad.

It is an admitted fact that the pending case known as the "Big Mining Suit" or the San Felipe Co. vs. Belshaw & Co., has a material influence upon times in Cerro Gordo. As it is now passed till another term, the prospects for active work on the Hill and consequent lively times are lessened that much, and "that much" is considerable, we are constrained to believe.

Concerning the Bridges.

The Board of Supervisors have been notified that there is something wrong with both the Bend City and Lone Pine bridges. The latter, it is said, will require extensive repairs; the trouble with the former is connected with the approaches. On Thursday the Board made an official visit to the Lone Pine brigge to see for themselves what is required.

Biased.

Our Senior has taken up his quarters in the Court room this week in reporting legal proceedings. We hope he wont be summonsed as a juror, for to our certain knowledge he has emphatically expressed an unqualified opinion on several different occasions. It was in the morning when the boys laid abed late.

Officers Elect.

Following is a list of the officers elect for the ensuing quarter for Busy Bee Lodge, I. O. G. T., this place: P. A. Chalfant, W. C. T.; Miss Ida Hardy, W. V. T.; R. W. Woolard, W. S.; Wm. Goodman, W. F. S.; Mrs. Rilla Clark, W. M.; A. Wayland, W. T.; F. Hitchcock, W. I. G.; M. S. Clark, W. O. G., and L. Case, recommended L. D.

To the Orphan Asylum.

Mrs. D. D. Gunnison started for San Francisco Monday last for the purpose of placing the two elder children of her sister, Mrs. A. G. Cook, in the Protestant Orphan Asylum. The unfortunate father of these children, it will be remembered, is now in the Insane Asylum at Stockton, with little or no hope of recovery.

No Go.

It turns out that Harris & Rhine did not consummate that trade for the Surprise Valley Company's big store at Panamint, after all.

Preliminary to the Trial.

A venire for one hundred jurors was issued on Monday, returnable Thursday. When Court was called about four fifths to try the Ashim-Perasich murder case, of the venire answered to the call. Some twenty excuses, personal and by letter were then offered, but not all finally disposed of till the afternoon session. His Honor requested all who thought they had good excuses to step forward and be sworn. A dozen or more complied. The majority told the old story of suffering to their respective business interests. The old story wouldn't do for his Honor, and all such were told to stand aside. Two gentlemen on being asked for their excuses, stated in so many words that they "had no excuses at all." Notwithstanding their wistful looks they were also told to stand aside. In response to the Court's inquiry if parties were ready for trial, the prosecution desired first to know if their witnesses were present. On call several failed to answer, but on the assurance of the Sheriff that they would certainly be here the business of empaneling began. Mrs. Ashim, her two daughters and two lady friends were present and anxious watchers from the beginning. The prisoner looks pale and much emanciated. Physically he appears to be the furtherest possible remove from the desperado, and we will undertake to say if appearances are to be at all relied upon, that there is no such element in his composition.

Gen. R. M. Clark, of Carson, is the leading counsel on the side of the prosecution, District Attorney Snelling having little or nothing to say. It does not need Mr. Clark's extended reputation as a lawyer to give force to the first sight opinion that he is a quick, wide awake and thorough lawyer, ready and capable of maintaining his side of the question for all there is in it. It was a settled conviction at the beginning that with him to conduct the prosecution, if conviction did not follow it would not be because the people's side did not have a man capable of representing it, as is so often the case. In a seat next to the lawyers for the prosecution, sat Pete Perasich, brother of the deceased, attentive and determined, but a pleasant looking man withal.

For the defense appears Judge Quint of San Francisco and P. Reddy of this place, a brace of lawyers not excelled in effective legal ability by any in the State, so far as our knowledge extends. Measuring this trial by the weight of legal talent engaged on both sides, to say nothing of the many peculiar circumstances connected with its first cause, subsequent events and the parties in interest, etc. it bids fair to take rank as one of the celebrated criminal trials of the period. At this writing (the first day of trial) it is impossible to say when witnesses will be called or whether a jury will be obtained at all or not, therefore we submit these remarks in this shape in advance of the complete report we design to publish, should the trial take place. The prospects now are that a jury will be obtained and the case go to trial this week, but scarcely in time for us to be able to give much it any of the evidence this week.

DISTRICT COURT—Reed, Judge.

Court met Monday, November 1st, at 10 A. M.

People vs B. Ashim, murder; continued from May term. District Attorney Snelling and R. M. Clark, for the prosecution, L. Quint and P. Reddy for defense. In this case, it appearing that the Judge's order for a jury, having arrived one day after the time set for the usual drawing on agreement of counsel a special venire, returnable at 10 A. M. November 4, for one hundred jurors was ordered, to be summoned by Under Sheriff W. L. Moore, (Sheriff Moore being absent) from county at large, the said Under Sheriff having been duly sworn and subjected to questions as to qualification.

On separate motions of P. Reddy, A. R. Conklin and John M. Murphy were admitted to practice in this Court.

Tuesday the case of Tarpey & Carroll vs. R. Cuervo being called, P. Reddy, counsel for plaintiffs withdrew from the case in toto, V. A. Gregg, counsel for same side appearing. Quint, for the defense moved for a decree and judgment for defendants, after Cuervo had been sworn. So ordered.

J. H. Muller vs. W. G. Watson; passed for the term.

The Bessie Brady Afire.

While the steamer Bessie Brady was crossing the lake a day or two since her cargo of baled hay took fire from a spark from the smoke stack, but by dint of hard work was extinguished before a serious damage to the boat ensued. Some seventeen bales of hay were burned, that being about the sum of the loss.

Personals.

This being Court week and a large percentage of the county's electors being here, we can't afford to indulge in a personal list—haven't room to give the names of our personal friends we meet, much less those who like to growl at us.

Board of Supervisors.

The new Board of County Dads met in regular term last Monday, but as yet have transacted little business except allowing the usual number of bills for salaries, special services, etc. They seem to be working slowly and with the determination to understand every detail in the engineering of the county's machinery. Following is a minute of the proceedings up to this, Wednesday evening:

Going Ahead.

In a private letter from the Defiance mine at Darwin, we find the following in reference to the development of that mine: "The mine is looking splendid all around. They are rolling galena from the slope from the north level at a rapid rate and it is coming out in large boulders weighing from 6 to 600 pounds. I assayed some of this ore which runs 76 lead and 97.50 silver. Mr. Elder got back Tuesday night and is pushing ahead with the furnace buildings. Altogether the mine looks like a very 'elevated bhurd'."

Was on the Tax List.

"Are you on the tax list for this county," quired the counsel of a candidate for a juror's seat in the Ashim trial. "Yes sir, I am." "For what kind of property?" "For a poll tax, but I haven't paid that yet."

The Jury.

Following are the names of the jurors in the case of the People vs. Ashim: H. C. Wright, Green Hitchcock, David Thomas, H. Huckleby, Frank Dabeeny, J. A. Lank, I. W. Hunt, Richard Hessian, J. G. Mairs, Thomas Kehoe G. W. Hitchcock and Robert Arnold.

Preaching

There will be preaching by Rev. L. Case at Lone Pine, Sunday, November 7, at 11 A. M., and at Independence in the school house at 7 P. M., also at Big Pine, Friday, November 13, at 7 P. M.

For Life

H. Granice, who murdered Edward Madden at Merced in December last, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life in the State Prison, in accordance with the verdict of the jury that tried him. A motion for a new trial was overruled, but, of course, an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court, that city of refuge for cut-throats and murderers, and villains of every description, and the man who hid behind a dry goods box till his enemy passed and then stepped out and shot him in the back, will in all probability, under one pretense or another, be turned loose yet among decent people. If everything else fails, Gov. Irwin will be importuned for a pardon. But we don't believe he will dare to grant it. We trust enough in his sense of justice to hope this.—[Kern County Courier.

—The best paper now issued is the greenbacks signed by Treasurer New. It is not on our exchange list, however.

—The difference between perseverence and obstinacy is that one often comes from a strong will, and the other from a strong won't.

—Mme. Pation, ninty-four years old, still dances in a French circus company which leads to the belief that her method is Patented.

—A Vincennes, Ind., man and his wife after a stand up fight of an hour concluded to call it "a draw." She drew about six handfuls of hair out of his head.

—A rich upstart asked a poor person if he had any idea of the advantages arising from riches. "I believe they give a rogue an advantage over an honest man," was the reply.

—A shopkeeper having advertised his stock to be sold under prime cost a neighbor observed that it was impossible for him to do so, as he had never paid anything for it himself.

—When a Missouri engineer ditched his train, he faintly asked, "Did it kill any one who parted his hair in the middle?" They answered that three such were lying dead. "Then I die happy!" he sighed, and was soon no more.

Only Four Per Cent.

If 1 cent were set out at compound interest in the year 1, at four per cent., the 1st of January, 1866, it would amount to 1 quintillion 201,458 quadrillions, 332,000 trillions of dollars. If we were to take this sum as a capital and would use its yearly interest—four per cent—then the income tax we should have to pay at the rate of one per cent. would be 480 quadrillions, 583,320 trillions of dollars. If we paid the tax collector this sum in silver he would need 3,003,645,000,000,000,000,000 wagons for its transportation. Provided the whole earth's surface, both land and water, were people as closely as possible, we should hsve but 1-2000000 part of the drivers required, and the line of wagons would have a length of 8 trillions, 442,000 billions of miles. The speed of light, as mentioned, is 192,000 miles per second, and it would takn 743,600 years to reach the collector, beginning at the furthest wagon, if he, to have better control over the wagons on both sides, stationed himself in the center of the line. Again, a robbery could be committed on the hindmost wagon which could not be discovered until the 24,780th generation of tax collectors. If, on the contrary, instead of using the interest of the capital—the bulk of which, by the by, in gold would be equal to 44 globes—this capital were distribited amongst the people of the earth, each one of its 1,000,000,000 of inhabitants would receive about 1,200 trillions of dollars to live on, and could every second use 2,000,000, for 38,096,000 years without reaching the bottom of his purse.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete polume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

PEOPLE VS. ASHIM—Third Day.

Court met at 9 A. M. All the jurors answered to their names.

District Attorney Snelling made a brief statement of the case, to-wit, that Nicholas Perasich came to his death from pistol shots fired by B. Ashim, the defendant, while deceased was quietly taking dinner in Sullivan's Restaurant on the 11th of March, 1875, in the town of Darwin, this State and county; that the killing was wholly unjustifiable.

Mr. Clark, for the prosecution, had previously proposed to waive this part of the proceedings, but the Court said it could not be done.

Mr. Reddy—We desire to submit a statement on our side.

The Court—It would be contrary to the statute.

Under Sheriff Moore was here desired to produce the pistol used by defendant. He did so, stating that the one produced (a six-inch six-shooter, self-cocking Whistler, large caliber) was given to him as the identical pistol, but that was all he knew about it.

Agreed that Clerk should take the testimony in narrative style, omitting questions, except when otherwise ordered.

In this respect it is well to state that the same course was pursued herein, the answers indicating the questions in nearly every instance.

J. Milstadt, sworn. Questions by Gen. Clark for prosecution. Witness was born in Copenhagen, Denmark; came to the United States 15 years ago; had resided in Darwin during the past 10 months; kept restaurant there; was keeping the restaurant there in which the homicide was committed on the 11th of last March; it was a common frame building; dining room and kitchen; the former 16 feet wide and 27 deep; witness and partner Sullivan, the deceased, Nicholas Perasich and his partner, X. Petrovich were in the room or kitchen just prior to the entrance of the Ashim party; the kitchen stood to the rear, and in size was 14x16 feet; the building stands on the north or northwest side of Main street; the front or street door was in center of front; but the one door in the front; also, but one, in center of partition, opposite end of room, leading into kitchen; about 4 four feet in front of this door was a screen 3 or 4 feet wide, 6½ high; 6 tables in dining room, each about three feet by five; three on each side, ends touching walls; alley way about 6 feet wide—that is between rows of tables; deceased and partner were seated at the middle table, east side of building, right side from front entrance; witness identified defendant present.

Witness, at request of counsel (Clark) made a rough diagram of the room, stating that he was mistaken as to the position of one of the tables (6) which was behind the screen; not against west wall, where there were but two. (4 and 5)

The position of the several parties, both at the beginning and conclusion of the difficulty, was as shown in the following diagram marked by Milstadt and substantially confirmed by all the eye witnesses:

EXPLANATORY—At the beginning, a being the front door, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 the tables, Montgomery stood at M, Carroll at T, Ashim at W, witness, Milstadt, at G; deceased sat at table 1 at X, opposite, at O, sat Petrovich. The bullet marked coat lay on the floor at or near c; the bullet hole in the mop board at d. Defense claimed these as the result of Ashim's two first shots, one as having passed through the right hand of the deceased, the other (the second) not touching him at all. All the remaining bullet marks in the building testified to were in and about the screen. When last seen alive, then standing erect, the deceased was at C; his dead body lay at P2.

Witness—Carroll stood to the right of the front door, coming in; stood facing Perasich; Montgomery was in the door; witness stood three or four feet to the right and rear of deceased, on a line toward the kitchen door; defendant stood at the end of the table; witness was in full view of all the parties; Ashim said to Perasich, "I want you to pay me that bill now," as he advanced to the table. Deceased said, "Yes, I'll pay you." Ashim said "G—d— you, pay me now." He then pulled out his pistol and fired it off towards deceased; witness was about three or four feet from him; can't say what kind of pistol it was; think it was like this in Court; before this, in answer to Ashim's second demand, deceased said something about paying the bill; Ashim drew his pistol at the instant of making the second demand; fired instantly; might have delayed a few seconds; deceased was then in a standing position; had a plain view of him; after the first shot, deceased kind of turned to run; not positive, but think his hands were in this position (clasped and held up near or touching his left ear); had nothing in his hands; he started to go toward rear or kitchen door.

Witness marked direction on diagram from X to P2, about 7 or 8 feet toward centre and rear of the room from first position.

Deceased was facing to rear of the room from Ashim at time of second shot; Ashim was then at Q, 5 or 6 feet from where he fired first shot; he did not follow in same direction of Perasich; deceased had no pistol in his hand at the time of second shot; nothing was said by either party after the first shot; both were excited from the first words spoken; second shot entered head of deceased just behind and a little above left ear; witness got out of the way at that time; did not stop to see the effect of the shot.

Q. Where was Carroll at that time.

A. The last I saw of Carroll he stood as just described to the right of front door, facing toward witness and others; can't say that Montgomery changed his position; didn't take any notice as to that; saw a weapon in the hands of Carroll; a number of other shots were fired after the second shot; run out of the house; came back in about ten minutes; saw Perasich lying on the floor in a dying condition; no other person was in the room; he was almost if not quite dead; other persons came in then or soon after; none went in with me; deceased had on a light gray business coat; can't say as to his other clothes; saw one wound at that time; others afterwards; one was in head, the other in the left side; he had a Colt's revolver; it was in the scabbard on his belt; it was loaded; none of the chambers were empty.

CROSS EXAMINED BY MR. QUINT.

Witness—Can't say where my partner was at time of the shooting; would have been likely to have seen him had he been in the room.

Mr. Quint—What did Perasich do when he said "I will pay you."

A. Didn't do anything; was then sitting at the table.

Q. What did he do when Ashim said "Pay me now."

A. Rose from his seat and turned toward Ashim; didn't see what he did do with his hands; don't know that he put his hands behind him towards his pistol; first shot was fired soon after he rose up; he reeled around and started to run toward rear of the building; my position was at G, as when Ashim came in; did not see the shots strike deceased; saw pistol discharged; there were 10 or 12 other shots fired; saw Ashim fire the first two; don't think he fired any more; saw Carroll fire once, when I was close to rear door by side of the screen; Perasich was then at C; that was the last I saw of him, till after I came back; he was standing erect then; did not see Perasich when Carroll fired; Perasich was standing sideways to defendant at time of 1st shot; his face was turned toward Ashim; at second shot his back was toward Ashim; second shot struck deceased in left side of the head above and back of the ear; I was the first person in the room after the shooting; did not make a thorough examination of deceased; saw blood running from his mouth and hand; didn't examine his clothing; saw pistol in his scabbard; can't say who next examined him; a number came in; Petrovich took charge of the body; pistol was handed to me by Mr. Reddy here; don't know that there was any money in pockets of deceased; the body was removed in about an hour after to vacant house across the street.

Mr. Reddy here proposed to take the witness.

Mr. Clark said, that while he should not object in this instance or till after a rule was established, he yet should protest against both defendant's counsel hereafter questioning the same witness at length.

Mr. Reddy then proceeded to question witness as to a shot hole in a coat lying on the floor near where deceased sat, another in the base board behind where deceased sat, some ten inches from the floor; also, as to a number in the screen and partition wall, ten in all besides the two which struck the deceased.

Witness—Can't say where I was when I saw Carroll fire; Ashim had fired his two shots before I started to run; had my eye on Carroll; had good reason for watching him.

Q. Might not Carroll's shot have struck deceased.

A. There were several shots fired before I got here (near the screen).

Q. Don't you think deceased might have been struck in the head after you left the room? With that shot in the head he would have fallen instantly, would he not?

Mr. Clark earnestly objected to the method counsel was pursuing in arguing with the witness.

Mr. Reddy claimed that as witness had stated circumstances as facts, it was proper to call his attention to such as would show that witness was in error.

The Court, in ruling, would allow great latitude, but counsel must not argue with witness.

Witness—The wound was in left side above the arm pit; could not say it would prevent a person from going the distance described; witness said he was no expert (in surgical knowledge).

Witness was asked to state what had occurred between the parties on the day before at which time deceased and his partner Petrovich, Ashim and Montgomery were all at his place taking dinner.

Mr. Clark denied the right of counsel to thus cross examine witness as to facts not before called to witness' attention.

Mr. Reddy said that he was not exceeding his right; the cross examination of a witness is only limited by the res gesta; the whole subject matter may be covered in cross examination.

Noon recess was then taken; the point of difference being unsettled.

Business began again at 1 P. M.

Mr. Quint claimed the right to make witnesses on the other side, his own in cross-examination.

The Court—Parties have the right to make witnesses their own, but must not go back of matters already presented; to do so would not be cross-examination.

Mr. Reddy—The question was: Will you locate these parties at the tables occupied by them that day, the 10th of March?

Mr. Clark—Objected to as improper and incompetent, because the witness had given no testimony in direct examination except as to the actual homicide and the circumstances attending it, on the 11th of March, 1875, and because the evidence to be elicited relates to another day and different transaction, and is, in no sense, a cross-examination. The people object to defendant proving his case before the State has closed its case.

Mr. Reddy—This particular transaction relates to matters already before the Court. It is legitimate for defence to show that parties went there on the day before, and on the day of the homicide, in accordance with custom—otherwise the inference is given the jury that defendant went not as a custom but for a special purpose.

The Court—Cousel can ask if the parties were in the habit of boarding there, but particulars purely of defense, not connected with the immediate transaction, cannot be admitted.

Exception noted.

Witness—It was the usual dinner hour; the parties were in the habit of coming there at that hour; both parties were excited; can only undertake to give main features of the occurrence.

RE-DIRECT BY MR. CLARK

I did not fire any shot; saw Carroll fire at myself; I was at the middle door or screen; saw no powder burns on deceased; his feet were toward the passage way or middle door as he lay dead; deceased was standing erect at time of first shot; both parties were excited.

Q. What kind of excitement was manifested.

Mr. Quint—I object.

Mr. Clark—I withdraw the question.

Mr. Clark gave witness pistol to demonstrate particulars of firing. It was shown that the first shot was fired at less than two feet distant; the second at about six feet. One bullet struck the mop board behind deceased six inches above floor; did not think the ball came through deceased's body.

Mr. Reddy then took the witness again to illustrate with pistol, actions and parties in place to represent originals, how the wounds were received. It was thus shown that, as first placed, it was not possible to inflict both or either wounds as received by deceased while sitting in the chair right side toward defendant. It was however shown secondly that it was possible to inflict the shot under the left arm, as witness placed the representative deceased, and also, after the latter had reached the center of the room the second shot could strike him above and behind the ear.

John Sullivan, sworn—Reside in Darwin, this State and county; kept restaurant there in partnership with Milstadt; was in business there on the 11th of last March; the building had two rooms, dining room and kitchen; in size the dining room was 16 x 26 feet; knew defendent present and the deceased; last saw Perasich, deceased, alive, between 11 and 12 o'clock, March 11th, 1875; at that time he was seated at his lunch. (Position of table and parties, described as by previous witness.) Witness was in the kitchen near the door when the Ashim party came in; looked out of the kitchen door, when they came in; it was Mr. Ashim, the defendant, Thos. Carroll and Montgomery who came in; Montgomery stood in or near the front door; Carroll was to his right, close by; Ashim was near the table in front, where Perasich and Petrovich were eating; saw Ashim have a pistol in his hand; inferred from that there would be trouble, which excited fears for myself; my attention was directed to Ashim, which prevented me from noting the particular actions of deceased at that moment; can't swear that deceased did or did not attempt to draw his pistol; Perasich became excited when Ashim made the second demand for the money; not before that; both parties were excited when deceased rose from his seat. Before this Ashim said "Pay me that bill;" Perasich said "I will;" Ashim then said "Pay me right here; you can't scare me like you did yesterday;" Perasich said "I will pay you when I get to Panamint." Ashim held his pistol drawn; pointed right at Perasich's head, as it looked from where I stood; he held it a few seconds; I went back into the kitchen when I heard the report. Carroll had changed his position, away near the center of the room; I had had trouble with Carroll and expected him to shoot me. I had heard Ashim's demand before I stepped in front of screen, facing the parties; had looked out before; deceased was sitting down at the table when I saw Ashim draw his pistol; am positive as to that; did not see the shot fired.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Did not come out till after the first demand; stood to left side of kitchen door, same side of the room the parties occupied; Ashim was quite excited when making the first demand; was not noticing deceased at that time; his side and side of his face was toward me; can't say whether he was excited or not; saw Carroll; was afraid of him; he had abused me out on the street; had abused my partner, Milstadt, in the house; was watching him (Carroll) almost exclusively; on that account could not take accurate note of time; had reason to anticipate a difficulty.

Mr. Reddy—Had anything occurred at or immediately before the shooting to lead you to believe there would be trouble between deceased and defendant?

Mr. Clark—I ask the Court to caution witness to confine his answer to occurrence of this day only.

Mr. Reddy—I object to course of counsel; I ask that the question be overruled or answered in full.

The Court—Witness will confine his answer to the occurrances of the day.

A—There was nothing only what I have stated.

Q. Was that demand for money the only reason you had for believing there would be difficulty between the two men?

A. They had had trouble before; it was not immediately at the time or before the shooting.

Q When did that trouble take place?

A The day before; that was the reason I had to anticipate trouble. I did not examine the body; was not present when the first shot was fired; can't say that the clothing was powder burnt; there was six or seven feet between them at the second shot,

Mr. Quint—Did you testify as follows before the committing magistrate: "When I came in the room the deceased got up from the table in an angry manner; deceased went back to the table and said something like 'yes I will pay you'! deceased called defendant 'a d—d s—n of a b—'."

Mr. Clark—I am truly astonished at the course of the counsel—your Honor has twice specifically ruled against the admission of testimony relating to a different time and transaction, as does this, yet counsel persists in forcing it before this jury. I must protest.

Mr Quint—We offer this to test the credibility of this witness.

The Court—I will allow you to do that on your examination in chief when you call this witness for your side. You must confine yourselves to the transactions of the 11th day of March.

Exceptions noted by defense. Defense said they should call this witness on their side.

Court adjourned till 10 A. M. Monday.

Monday—Fourth Day.

Court met at 10 o'clock, pursuant to adjournment.

X. Petrovich, sworn. Born in Dalmatia in Europe; am 26 years of age; educated in Dalmatia; attended college there; cannot give the names in English of the books I studied; talk the Sclavonian, Italian, Spanish, French and German languages; was Secretary of (or for) the "Community," for three years after I quit school; cannot explain the duties of that office very well—when any person wanted information about the affairs of the government, must come to that board; kept books in my father's wholesale liquor store two years; since coming to America kept store part of the time; knew deceased in his life time; knew his father in the old country; knew Perasich in Los Angeles more than a year ago; also at Panamint and Darwin, this county and State; was in business with him, was his partner; kept store in Los Angeles; sold groceries and liquors; did not come to Panamint together; I came in December, Perasich in October, last year; was partner in a restaurant and liquors; knew defendant first in Panamint; he kept store there; knew deceased and defendant on the 11th of last March; saw defendant there that day; his place of business was in Panamint, 40 or 50 miles from Darwin; saw deceased in Darwin that day; it was the last place I saw him alive; in Milstadt & Sullivan's restaurant; it was a house of wood, one room where he was eating and a kitchen—it was on left hand side of street going up; Milstadt, Perasich and I were in the room; no one else; deceased and I were at the same table; it was the first table from the front, right of door, coming in; it was about 1 o'clock; Ashim, Montgomery and Carroll came in from the street while we were eating; Ashim was first, Carroll next, Montgomery last, one after the other, about two steps apart; Ashim came next to me; (witness pointed out position of parties on diagram, Carroll at T) Ashim said "you pay me that bill of the Mexican Hypolite;" he was excited; Perasich said "yes, I will;" Ashim said "you s— of a b—, pay me here now;" he drew his pistol then—at that Perasich raised up and Ashim fired; I was sitting in my place yet; had not moved; ball struck here on Perasich (under left arm); deceased threw up both hands this way and started toward the kitchen; I saw Carroll shoot at the owner of the restaurant, as Nick fell; I had moved out from the table; I went out through the kitchen: when I came back Nick was lying on the floor; he was dead; he had been in good health up to this time; I saw the wounds on the body after the dress was taken off; one was on the head here, one was here; I did not see any hole where the bullets came out.

Juror—How far did he walk after he was shot?

(Witness explains on diagram) I was looking at deceased when he received the second shot; I was looking at both.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Mr. Reddy—What business had you and deceased in Darwin? Had you quit business in Panamint?

A. We were both in Darwin to start business there; had been in business in Panamint together.

Mr. Reddy—I would like to get at this transaction in the order in which it occurred. We have authorities now which, we think, will sustain our right to bring out all the circumstances connected with the one transaction, which had its real beginning some time previous to the homicide.

Mr. Clark—In order to bring the present issue fairly before the Court we will consent that counsel submit his question?

Mr. Reddy—Were you present at Milstadt & Sullivan's restaurant, and did you see and hear a difficulty or altercation there between Nicholas Perasich, the deceased, and B. Ashim, the defendant, on the 10th day of March, 1875?

Mr. Clark—We object on the ground, first, that it is not a cross-examination; second, that it is irrelevant and incompetent. It is not proper to examine our witness on matters we have not touched upon, and which relates to another day and different transaction.

Mr. Reddy—This is for the purpose of showing by this witness that at the time and place stated, the deceased with pistol in hand, in the presence and hearing of the defendant, threatened to kill this defendant, and poured upon him a torrent of abuse. And that the deceased at that time, endeavored to kill the defendant, and would have done so had it not have been for the interference of this witness and Sullivan and Milstadt, the owners of the restaurant.

Mr. Clark—Do the gentlemen offer this in extenuation, mitigation or justification, or for what purpose?

Mr. Reddy—We offer this as a constituent part of one transaction. We intend to couple these threats with that of a threatening demonstration against defendant on the part of the deceased at the time of the homicide.

Mr. Clark—On the part of the prosecution we have consented to the putting of this question in order that it may be settled at this stage, and obviate a further discussion on this point which otherwise must sooner or later arise. We object, because it is not cross-examination; it is to nothing to which witness has given testimony.

Mr. Clark cited authorities and spoke at some length in support of his objection. At the close of his remarks, it being near 12 o'clock, the Court adjourned for

NOON RECESS.

On re-assembling at 1 o'clock Mr. Reddy spoke for about an hour to prove the right of the defense to show all the facts bearing upon the case, within the knowledge of the witness, whether these facts all occurred at the precise moment of the homicide or some hours or more previously, so long as it was one and the same transaction as were these in fact.

Mr. Clark, in a reply occupying about forty-five minutes, showed that it was not the proper course on cross-examination. Both gentlemen talked remarkably well, and were listened to with interest, but we can attempt no synopsis even of their remarks. Mr. Quint thought his colleague had said all that was necessary upon their side, and would submit the question.

The Court—The objection is sustained.

Mr. Quint—We except.

Here, we will state, that, when this witness was called, Mr. Clark suggested, and afterwards urged that an interpreter be sworn, as witness had but a very imperfect understanding of English. The defense, for reasons set forth, declined to do so, as witness had once before testified in this case and in the English language; that testimony was on record and it was important that what he should say here to-day, should be shown to conform or not therewith.

Owing to the fact that every question, with perhaps not a single exception, had to be repeated, often a number of times, and differently worded, and that the witness was determined not to commit himself, the cross-examination was extremely tedious and uninteresting.

Witness—One of us to stay in Darwin, the other to go back to Panamint; had suspended business in Panamint for the time being. I speak five languages. My mother tongue is Sclavonian; had known deceased about one year; knew his father in the old country, but not deceased; liked my partner, (the deceased) as I do other good men; I would not put myself in great danger to help anybody; would not endanger my life not even for my mother; if it is in my business I would take money out of my pocket to help my partner; I I would do anything to help my partner that was honorable. Have been in this country three years; quit school when I was eighteen; kept books three years; kept store two years; am twenty-six. Ashim fired the two first shots, Carroll the third shot; don't know who fired the next; Montgomery fired at me when I started to run; that was just as Perasich fell down; Ashim was excited; Perasich was "like always;" Ashim said "Pay me you s— of a b—" and fired. Perasich was not setting down; he was just rising up; there was only a moment; Perasich was sitting at the table; he had a six-shooter; never saw Perasich in a difficulty; Perasich made no effort to draw his pistol; it was three or four feet between them when the first shot was fired; Ashim was at the end of the table near where I sat; he put the pistol up very near his coat; I could see how he pointed the pistol; saw smoke coming out of the clothing of deceased; Carroll pointed his pistol at me; Montgomery also; there was seven or eight shots fired before I left the room; I staid there so long because I was so surprised; after the second shot I started to run; I was so surprised I couldn't get out; I was running during the time the seven or eight shots were being fired. I was afraid of course; don't know how long it took me to get over that surprise; did not stay in that room to take part in the shooting; had no pistol that day; it was twenty days before this when I came to Darwin; had a pistol on some days before; don't recollect that I testified before Judge Schalten that I had a pidtol on on the 10th; don't recollect that I had a pistol on the 9th.

Mr. Clark—I object; this is immaterial.

Mr. Reddy—This is to test the memory of the witness, and to show that he was a party in this affair.

Mr. Clark—If you think it pertinent, I withdraw the objection.

Witness—I had an I. X. L. pistol when I was in Darwin, I gave it to one of my countrymen; he asked me for it; he wanted it to hunt rabbits; gave it to him some days before; a few days.

Mr. Reddy—Was it not after Ashim and deceased had a difficulty in the restaurant that you gave him this pistol?

Witness—I told the magistrate that I did not understand English very well; could understand it, when talked easy. I was shot in the hand at time of the homicide; I was running out, the marks of the wound are not on my hand now; it was on the first and second fingers; don't recollect that those fingers were powder burnt. Did not sell the liquors in the cellar at Panamint; rented the building; don't recollect that I testified before the magistrate that the clothing of the deceasod was on fire; I did not take the clothing off; did not pay attention to the wound in the hand to see if it was powder burnt; I was the first to come into to the room; saw Hypolite Cervantes in town after the killing; did not see him that day before that time; had seen him there some days before. Think Milstadt was running when I saw him during the firing; I was watching Ashim and Perasich; they were talking; did not expect to see any firing; they were not good friends; I don't know of any other reason besides this talk, why they were not good friends; have not paid or agreed to pay any sum of money to secure assistance in this prosecution; never talked with Dr. Gelcich about hanging Ashim; want Ashim to be punished according to law; have talked with some parties about this; I have no feelings toward Ashim to want to hang him outside of the law; if he is acquitted it is all right.

Witness, at request of counsel here demonstrated with parties in place how the shooting was done.

Witness—I don't recollect; never was in Judge Murphy's office in Panamint; never saw Perasich draw his pistol on any one.

Witness here identified his signature to evidence given before the committing magistrate.

Witness—Was in Cerro Gordo a few days before this difficulty; I was at Lone Pine and Cerro Gordo, then went to Darwin; can't tell how long it was before the shooting; had the I. X. L. pistol with me then.

Mr. Quint—Did you see Perasich have a difficulty there in Lone Pine?

Mr. Clark—We object.

Mr. Quint—We offer all the evidence given now and heretofore by this witness for the purpose of contradicting the witness.

The Court—Objection sustained.

At this point Court adjourned till 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Tuesday—Fifth Day.

Mr. Clark—The case for the people is closed.

Mr. Quint—May it please the Court we, the defense, might with perfect safety, close our own also. It has been shown that three different men were firing at the time deceased came to his death. It has not been shown to this hour, that the defendant fired the fatal shot. It has not been shown that there was any collusion, any conspiracy to kill, between these three men, of which this defendant was one. We propose to show that, admitting that Ashim fired the fatal shot, which, let it be distinctly understood, we do not admit, that he was or could have been perfectly justifiable in so doing. We propose to show that he acted in pure self-defense; the defendant has never been known, has never been accused of being a desperate character in any sense. He has ever been known as a quiet, peaceable young man not in the slightest degree to brawling or fighting or threatening the peace and welfare of any person whomsover. We propose to prove on the other hand, that deceased was a desperado; that he had not only threatened the life of this defendant, but had made actual demonstrations to take it. We propose to put in as evidence for the defense the testimony of S. Montgomery, taken before the committing magistrate. We offer it in this manner for the reason that the deponent is not now a resident of this county or State, and cannot be brought before this Court in person.

Mr. Clark—We object till gentlemen lay a proper foundation for advancing that kind of testimony.

Under Sheriff Moore was put upon the stand, and proved that he used due diligence to serve subpœnas upon the missing witness, and also, as he stated to Mr. Clark on cross-examination, to serve a warrant issued for the arrest of Montgomery who was under indictment for this same murder. Witness had written to various Sheriffs in this State in this connection, and had likewise made a personal search, extending through to San Francisco, etc. Was satisfied Montgomery was not in this State.

P. Perasich was called by the defense for the same object, and stated that he had used his endeavors to procure the arrest of Montgomery under this warrant, but unsuccessfully. Knew nothing of his whereabouts since last May.

Mr. Clark did not think the proposition had been legally established.

The Court overruled Mr. Clark's objection.

The questions and answers of Montgomery taken in the Justice's examination were read by Mr. Quint, who also read portion of the evidence given by Petrovich on that examination to show that it did not correspond with that given in this Court.

X. Petrovich called by the defense.

I have no pistol with me now; have never seen that I. X. L. since I gave to my countryman.

Jos. Schalten, sworn.—S. Montgomery and B. Ashim were examined before me on the charge of killing Perasich; Montgomery was examined first; Montgomery

BY WAY OF APOLOGY.

Ordinarly we should feel as it some thing of an apology was due to our readers for devoting so much of our limited space to the consideration of but one subject, and that of a kind having no immediate or direct interest to but few; but having started in to make that account as fair and complete as possible, we now feel more constrained to apologize because it is not as full and complete as we should wish, particularly as a fair understanding of all the facts would possibly do more to restore a proper feeling generally in certain respects than anything else at our command. But as all the tangible, obvious facts necessary for that purpose are not at our command, and perhaps never will be, we now hope to close that particular record for good and all, and take up something hereafter more agreeable than murder trials, and their sequences.

The Next Congress.

In the Forty-Fourth Congress there are 292 members of the House, of which 165 are Democrats, 6 Independents and 103 Republicans, with 17 vacancies to be filled during 1875. It is an impossibility therefore to change the vote of this branch of the national Legislature so as to destroy the Democratic majority. The Territorial delegates stand four Democrats and four Republicans. The Senate is composed of 46 Republicans, 28 Democrats and one Independent, (Newton Booth,) with no elections to take place before 1877. On joint ballot conceding that the Republicans have five representatives and all the Independents vote with them the result would be 182 Democrats and 166 Republicans. Congress as at present constituted will count the electorial vote for President in 1876. Concerning the legislation of the next session there is no probability that any measures having the least bearing upon party issues can pass both houses. It will doubtless be a sharp game on both sides to commit the respective parties to certain lines of action for political effect.

His Nerve.

Brigham Young shows himself to be equal to the difficulties which surround him. The world can now appreciate the nerve and spirit of the old prophet which has held so many wives in subjection. The ordinary man who struggles with the difficulties of one matron and one household, meets the milliner's and grocery bills, and satisfactorily accounts for his evenings spent out of his homestead, has a faint conception of the trials of the great polygamist. Brigham has met the new danger which threatens the loss of his entire patrimony from the suits for divorce by his many "better sixty-fourths" in a truly Spartan manner. He will remain in jail the rest of his days rather than pay the alimony to his recently divorced spouse. This fortitude and resignation will bring the dame to repentance and we expect to see her again in Brigham's household.

Mississippi.

The latest news from Mississippi appears to indicate that the election in that State was on the whole fairly conducted, and that either the Democrats did not employ their Spencer rifles in securing compliance from the negroes, or used them only in parts of the State. At all event the alleged election of an Administration candidate to Congress shows that no intimidation was practiced, and that the sentimental Washington Judge who recently predicted a general promiscous blood-letting in Mississippi was singularly infelicitous in his vaticinations. Perhaps, however the stubborn refusal of Grant to be scared into sending Federal troops down there, and the consequent despair of the Ames faction, had a good deal to do with the peaceable nature of the result.

Sinking of the Pacific.

The American ship Messinger, Captain J. F. Kilkey, arrived at Port Townsend, Nov. 8th, nine days from San Francisco, and reports picking up a part of the pilot-house of the lost steamer, Pacific, twenty miles south of Cape Flattery, and Henry L. Jelly, the only survivor of the ill-fated steamship, which sailed from Victoria on the morning of Nov. 4th, and foundered 400 miles south of Cape Flattery at 8 o'clock the same evening. Mr. Jelly floated on the pilot house from 8 o'clock Thursday night until 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Several boats were launched, but all foundered. About 200 passengers were lost. It is quite certain that the steamer struck a rock instead of colliding, as Jelly stated.

IN CONCLUSION.

We have devoted so much time, space and labor in endeavoring to give a full report of the proceedings in the Ashim trial, to the end that all may be able to judge for themselves as to its real merits about which such difference of opinion prevail, that we would gladly without another word consign the whole matter to oblivion. But notwithstanding the extent of space taken up with the evidence given, we are reminded at a very late hour that there is not yet a word as to the final and most interesting proceedings, and now propose as briefly as possible to wind that part up also. But it cannot be done with but a line.

As elsewhere stated the case was submitted for argument just at the usual hour of adjournment, on Wednesday evening. The following day, the sixth of the trial, was devoted until about half past 8 in the evening to arguments of counsel. During the whole day the attendance, including a large number of ladies, was very large, and after supper, when Gen. Clark for the prosecution occupied the floor, the large room was literally packed with interested spectators of both sexes. Some there were and had been from the first hour of the trial through to the end, who felt a vital, most anxious and painful interest in the proceedings. These were the mother and sisters of the deathly pale young man whose fate was in the balance. In fact so highly wrought up was that mother, what with the anxious days of waiting and suspense, the closeness of the tobacco tainted room and most trying ordeal in having to listen to the pictures of her real and possible sorrows, the extent of the latter then to be determined, as portrayed by the able counsel doing battle in her son's, and her own behalf as well, added to the scathing language of the no less able counsel on the other side—so great was the stress upon her feelings with all this, she fainted dead away and had to be carried from the room, just as the Court was closing the instruction to the jury prior to telling them the future of that young man was now wholly at their disposal. At that stage of proceedings nearly the entire audience rose to their feet, a circumstance which added no little to the impressiveness of the scene. On the other hand, with a far different interest in view, sat the brother of the man whose taking off has caused so much of sorrow and trouble, resolved to leave no stone unturned to bring to punishment the assumed murderer. Save in the blood thirstiness displayed throughout, this man received and was entitled to full sympathy.

But to go back to the begining of this days proceedings:

District Attorney Snelling, as soon as the roll call showed that all the jurors were present, which was a few minutes after 9 in the morning, rose to make the opening address for the prosecution. He gave a brief review of the main facts of the evidence, and the law applicable to the case, but, contrary to rule of attorneys generally, without making any positive assertion that the prisoner at the bar had been tried, found guilty and must, in the nature of the law and evidence be so declared by the jury, delivered a very fair charge as if from the Bench as to what should be the verdict, should they conclude this or the other to be the fact. He would leave the analysis of the testimony upon which their verdict was to be founded, to his able associate. This, together with the time taken to read over a portion of the testimony, occupied about one hour.

Judge Quint then began the opening argument for the defense. The hour of noon arrived before he had reached a conclusion, so, after Court met at 1 the eloquent counselor continued his remarks for some twenty minutes longer. Judge Quint made a strong appeal to the sympathies of the jury, portraying the ruin and life-long sorrow an unjust verdict at their hands would surely produce, and in so doing waxed eloquent at times. But, most likely to better purpose, he gave quite a critical review of the evidence, deducing therefrom the very plausible theory that the only two shots fired by the defendant, (the prosecution having proved but two) were both harmless, had both utterly failed of their object, if, as might be admitted, that object was to kill deceased; that the evidence conclusively showed that the first shot fired by this defendant had merely inflicted a slight wound in the hand, as it was being raised to take the life of this defendant; that the second had done nothing more than mark a coat lying on the floor. Consequently, and as a matter of fact, it was not this defendant who had fired the fatal shot—that one through the head. In short the learned gentleman went over the entire ground of defense, leaving but little not touched upon for his colleague, who was to follow. It is not our purpose, nor is it possible to give even a fair synopsis of the extended arguments on either side, but inasmuch as both counsel for the defense presented their respective views each upon all the salient points, what we do have to say is fairly applicable to both.

At the close of Judge Quint's address Mr. Reddy began the concluding, three hour asgument on the side of the defense, maintaining himself well, and as feelingly as if he himself was the party for whom he plead, until after 4 o'clock, when the Court took a recess till half past 6 that evening, at which time Gen. Clark said he would be ready to make the final argument in this protracted case. Mr. Reddy claimed two adequate grounds for immediate acquittal: First, that this defendant had not been shown to have fired the fatal shot; that, under the law as rendered by the Supreme Court of this State, the proof must be positive beyond a reasonable doubt that it was he who did fire the fatal shot—further, that a conspiracy for the purpose between the several parties, some one of whom had fired that shot—must all be proved nor this defendant must be held guitless; that neither of these facts had been shown in this trial; secondly: that admitting that Ashim had fired that shot, he was clearly justified in so doing by the first law of nature, that of self defense, clearly recognized as sufficient by every statutory law of mankind. In support of the rightfulness of this defense he showed that the deceased had proved himself a man of violence, not only with respect to this defendant, but others, and that aside from the obvious and proven threatening demonstrations at the time of the fatal occurrence that that of the preceding day was proof positive that danger was to be apprehended by this defendant, even if he so much, however gentlemanly, presumed to exercise the slightest manhood and demand his simplest right; that furthermore, it was clearly beyond the nature and well established character, to say nothing of his social and business nigh standing in society of this defendant—utterly inconsistent with the traditions of the Jewish race, of which he was a member—to resort to violence liable to lead to the death of any person, unless it should be wholly and solely that he did so to save his own life; that that consideration alone, well founded as the evidence here had shown it to have been, was the actuating and sole reason for the part he had been forced to take in this most unfortunate occurrence which has plunged two families—fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers on both sides—into lasting sorrow. Was it for this jury to most wrongfully add even a feather's weight to that sorrow by now shutting their eyes to patent facts and consigning this unfortunate youth to a felon's doom? He, though but a counselor engaged in a paid duty, felt in his heart that they as honest men, sensible of the rights of every man and every human being to defend his own life—to say nothing of the abstract question of honor—would say by their verdict that this defendant had done nothing more than they, everyone, would have felt bound to do under similar circumstances. Mr. Reddy made a complete and effective argument.

The Court re-assembling pursuant to adjournment, Gen. Clark began his argument for the prosecution. The Court room, well lighted up for the occasion, was crowded almost to excess to hear the Nevada lawyer, of whom much was expected, and in which expectation there was no disappointment. We are not sure but that the sympathies of the large audience were to a considerable extent on his side, not so, if at all, because he was for the prosecution, (though this was doubtless the case in some instances) but because he was single handed, as it were, contending against two such adversaries. Throughout he had contended step by step for whatever of legal right might be brought to bear toward bringing to justice the man who had committed "this most diabolical murder"—to use his own expression—and if he failed in that object it was because of the weakness of his cause, whether legally or morally considered, and not for lack of lawyer like representation. Up to this time he had made no use of the prerogative usually arrogated by attorneys who build up sympathy for their own side by denouncing the other, especially when that other is an alleged murderer; on the contrary the learned gentleman had shown a laudable consideration, if not for the defendant, at least for those others present so nearly interested in his fate and being. But now, whether that he felt in advance that as a mere legal proposition his case was not promising, or as the real expression of his own sentiments, we know not, he pictured this deed of this defendant in the blackest colors. By words and action he showed there was scarce a mitigating circumstance in the taking off of that young man, whose aged parents in a distant land mourn this murder most foul. He pointed out the sophistries of the defense in their claim that this defendant and his murderous companions had gone to that restaurant, had taken their peculiar stations around and prepared as they were for the purpose of—taking a meal! that and nothing more! And if so why was this manifest attempt to slaughter two or more other men who had given no cause of offense? Was it not plain that this vaunted act of self defense was a preconcocted plan between these three men, one of whom at least, was a known desperado, to inveigle not only the deceased but his companions into a difficulty to the end that they might under cover of technical law, murder all! In the course of years of practice, some times for the defense, some times for the prosecution, he, the speaker, had never known a more diabolical murder than this! He implored that jury as they valued the welfare of the community, not to ignore their plain duty to themselves, the law of the land, the peace of society, by pronouncing this man guiltless! What would become of society if this defendant is pronounced guiltless, on the simple ground that there might be a possible doubt as to whether it was he or one of his murderous companions who fired the deadly shot, and because it was not clearly proved that a previous conspiracy to kill existed. Was it not shown that this defendant had tried to kill. Could he on such special pleading be held guiltless of all crime? Would not such a plea be sufficient to legally vindicate each and every member of every murdering gang who choose to adopt the joint stock system of doing their murders? Their only care need be to see that no previous agreement could be proved, because, when two or more are simultaneously engaged in firing at some one they want to kill, it can scarcely ever happen that any particular shot can be identified as from any one of the number, beyond all reasonable doubt. In such cases, unless a case of clear self defense is rightfully set up, each and every one of such shooters are guilty of murder in some degree.

But notwithstanding all this the jury believed that the plea of self defense was a good one, which, coupled with the unquestionable uncertainty existing as to which person did actually fire the fatal shot, and also under the instructions from the Bench in relation to defendant's right to the benefit of such doubt, justified but the one of the two verdicts they were authorized to name—that of not guilty. And who, honestly weighing all the facts and passing judgment as those whose oath to do justice to both living and dead requires, can say that that verdict was not the right one? We believe it was. Others, having no more personal interest in the matter than we, (and that is not the slightest except such as every member of the community must feel) think differently. We know perfectly well that society suffers in every case like this which tends by its uncertainties, to prove to society that the law is a shield, instead of a terror to wrong doers; but society will suffer less from the effects of that belief, so long as it is but a belief, than by making one extremely probable if not absolute wrong indemnify another.

[From The Gold Hill News.]

Those horrid maps or diagrams of the burnt district at Virginia City, published in the San Francisco papers, have been the subject of all sorts of jokes, yet it but justice to them to say that they have not been ridiculed any more than they deserved. The differences and discrepancies between them is simply owing to the fact that they were sections of old maps of Boston, Chicago and other noted fires. Each of those enterprising newspaper offices has a lot of the old wood cut representations thereof piled away in a corner, and when, as on this occasion, a quick job is needed, the foreman or devil saws out a chunk of suitable size, changes the name, etc. to suit, and in it goes to illustrate the fire. Thus it is that our Virginia neighbors, as well as all other Comstockers, were sorely puzzled, while former residents of Boston and Chicago recognized the old familiar localities at once, notwithstanding the change of names. The Grass Valley Union, in the following reasons for the discrepancy, is partially correct, although evidently prejudiced:

The San Francisco Chronicle and The San Francisco Ledger each published a map the other day of the burnt district of Virginia City. The maps were not at all alike, but that is easily accounted for. The carpenter who blocked out The Chronicle's map was a total stranger to the wood butcher who did the work for The Ledger. They used different hatchets—did their work at opposite and different points of the city of San Francisco. Neither of the map makers had ever seen Virginia City, or had any kind of copy before him by which to work. No wonder the maps were somewhat unlike.

Dangerous Counterfeits.

For the benefit of those who deal in currency we publish the following poster from the office of Comptroller of the Currency. The five dollar notes of the banks named are to be refused:

The First National Bank of Chicago, Ill. The Traders' National Bank of Chicago, Ill. The First National Bank of Paxton, Ill. The First National Bank of Canton, Ill. and The First National Bank of Aurora, Ill.

Nearly the entire amount of the genuine five-dollar notes of these banks has been withdrawn from circulation, and no additional issues will be made. The Comptroller is desirous of retiring the whole amount from circulation, and all persons receiving such notes are urgently requested to deposit the same with the nearest National Bank, or forward the same to the Comptroller's Office, for redemption.

Our Round Valley Correspondence.

ROUND VALLEY, Nov. 9.

MESSRS. EDS:—Jeemes has left us. Dead? No; worse—threatens to commit matrimony. Death only ushers its victims into the bright "Summer Land," a country where all respectable bachelors are destined to go and joyfully bach it forever-more. But when a promising young man precipitates himself into the bonds of matrimony, words are lacking.

"Marriage is like a flaming candle light,
Place! in a window on a Summer night;
Inviting all the insects of the air
To come and singe their pretty winglets there.
Those that are not butt their heads against the pane,
Those that are in butt to get out again."

Yes, the ever genial James Shaw of Bishop Creek has gone east (started this morning) and is determined to capture a boss—for his culinary department. The boys always regarded Jim as a man of good sense, courage and perseverence—one of the strongest pillars of our fraternity, but he has lately lost his grip—ailing—for which the doctors find no remedy. Such a worthy man deserting our ranks is rather discouraging, still we remain firm and hopeful, being assured that veterans like Goodrich, Reynolds and others—brethren who are invincible and invulnerable to the bewitching charms of a whole regiment of pin backs—will everlastingly cling to the bachelor brothehood.

For years what a fine rendezvous for the boys Shaw's domicil has been. Hundreds of noble (the ladies contend that a more expresaive adjective is "rusty") bachelors have been hospitably entertained at his table. Yes, and many a married man, during a severe "tempest in the teapot" at his own home, would call in at Jim's where peace always reigned supreme, and get a good square meal without any "sass." Ease, comfort and freedom always characterised the host and guests. No special rules of etiquette were essentially necessary to be observed. Should a brother bachelor feel disposed, after refreshments, to elevate his heels on the table, thus disturbing dishes, frying pan and coffee pot, no restrictions were interposed. Yes, even should a brother perchance spit on the floor there was no carpet to soil, and so long as he didn't hit another bachelor in the eyes it was all right.

After the lady's arrival, may we trot in as of yore and yell for something to eat, go down cellar and snatch a lunch, or hook a biscuit from the cubboard with Jim's bland consent to "help yourselves, boys?" Not much! she'd have us arrested in fifteen minutes, being that Judges Wacott and Alexander are so close by. If admitted at all, we shall have to be prim, sad and solemn—muse in pensive mood.

Years ago, when delving in the mines, a few bachelors (Shaw included) agreed on paper, duly signed, (the document is still preserved by a certain lady) that the one who should get married first was to receive a heifer from each remaining bach. Hence Jeemes' contemplated matrimony is a matter o' money to the boys. However, "to err is human, to forgive divine." Let us be sympathetic. He will need the heifers. Just think, brethren, of the fifteen hundred yards of calico, four or five miles of ribbons, besides hair pins, frills and fineries innumerable and indescribable, which must be purchased yearly! Brooms? Well, any economical bachelor knows that a broom, judiciously used, will last him for five years, and then sell to a Pinte for four bits. But turn a woman into the same cabin, and she will never let up until fifteen worn out brooms, like dead marines, lie worthless in the dooryard. Brooms are also effectively used to sweep out "my old man." Buy a broom Jeemes, bring a car load along, and may the gods bless your noble soul and unison, is the prayer of a host of friends.

O. PSHAW.

The Fryer Process.

This still continues to be a mystery to the public—like the Keely motor—but it is being practically tested, with very good results. The San Francisco Mining and Scientific Press, of the 6th instant has an interesting article on the subject, from which we extract the following:

The owners of the process, who, by the way, seem to care very little what the public think one way or the other about it, are perfectly certain that they can do what they claim. They will have no hesitation whatever in making the whole thing public as soon as their patents are all obtained. When they are ready they will in all probability let the public know; but for the present, the public must continue to be curious without having its curiousty gratified.

Our friend Mr. W. A. Skidmore, well known among mining men on this coast, and Deputy of the United States Mining Commissioner, has been up at Grass Valley for the past two weeks, and on his return we questioned him as to what the Fryer process was, and what it was doing. He does not know anything more about the system than the rest of outsiders; he says there are no stamps, but there is a steam engine, the latter being the only part of the machinery visible to the outside world. He is satisfied, however, that as far as working the ores up to a high percentage is concerned, the Fryer process is a success. Moreover, that seems to be the opinion of most of the miners in that section. The works are of large capacity and expensive. The ore is being treated by the ton; not in small lots. It has been practically a success on a large scale, and as far as he can see, will be in some measure like milling in this respect: That the ores can be worked cheaper on a large scale than on a small. just as a 60-stamp mill can work cheaper than a 5-stamp mill, the addition of labor not increasing with the additional machinery.

Mr. Skidmore informs us that they have worked a large number of samples of ore from different parties, charging nothing for working it, and invariably returning the gold and silver resultant to the owners of the samples. It seems to make no difference as to class of rock, free or refractory. They are now working several tons of rock, from the Providence mine, situated near Nevada City, which is considered the most refractory in the State. What they have already worked of this has given good results. This ore is usually worked by chlorination, but this process is said to have worked the ores better than the chlorination, saving considerable silver as well as the gold.

The expense is a trifle more than the ordinary first class milling treatment, but all the precious metals are saved. The operators claim that they are able to save ninety five per cent., of the assay value in any class of rock, no matter what the gangue matter may be.

There is no water used in this process; that is, the rock is not subjected to the action of water at all. The system is founded on the fact of the extreme divisibility and atomic character of gold in rock.

The gentlemen interested in the process, and who have "put up" the money, came out from the East recently and last week visited the works. They are all completely satisfied that the thing is a success and have returned home again. Mr. Fryer himself is no mere adventurer. He is well known to a number of the gentlemen comprising the company. He is an inventor of some note, and although a man not more than thirty years of age, has already perfected a number of very important inventions. He has come here to make his home, and has proved conclusively to those who have assisted him to perfect his process that he can do what he claimed. It is understood that as soon as the company's arrangements are perfected the right to use the process will be sold for a very small royalty, so that no very extensive capital will be required. We notice that the Nevada county papers have an abiding faith in the process, having become convinced that it is a perfect success. Skeptical persons, however, will naturally desire to see the works, and learn the rationale of the process before believing in it completely.

The Prince of Wales arrived at Bombay, Nov. 7th. All England will now be on the alert to hear of the manner in which his majesty purposes to bombard the elephants, boa constictors, tarantulas and other "varmints." LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Waucoba.

But little has been heard of this promising district for some time, but notwithstanding all that, the owners have not been idle. They have been doing all they could towards putting things in shape to insure its development. And we have a very good assurance that the time for this work to begin will not be much longer delayed. An entire new Board of Directors and officers have it in hand and would have had a force on the ground ere this but for the late general financial troubles in San Francisco. The difficulties arising from that source have so nearly disappeared that we may look with confidence for something of importance to be commenced in this, one of our nearest mining districts, before a great while. Just when, however, we can't say now, but hope to have something definite before the snows get very deep. Knowing, as we do of our own knowledge, of the extremely promising character of dozens of the huge silver lead mines, plainly cropping into full view in this district, the wonder with us is that any difficulty should even for a day have been experienced in inducing any amount of capital in taking hold of it. It certainly is a splendid prospect, this Waucoba District.

Ubehebe Mines Sold.

We learn that Messrs. Porter & Hunter have disposed of a portion if not all their mining interests in Ubehebe District, to San Francisco parties, receiving therefore a good round sum. We believe that Mr. M. W. Belshaw is the purchaser. The sale includes their wonderfully large and promising copper mine. It has been demonstrated that the ores from that mine can be delivered on the dump at a cost not exceeding one dollar per ton and that they can be easily and profitably worked. Works are to be erected at once. Our informant believes that the prospects for Ubehebe, better known as Rose Springs District, is second to no other in the county. There is no doubt but it has a member of magnificent silver ledges besides this monster copper mine, and from what we know about it we don't think our informant at all extravagant in his anticipations.

A Dance, Etc.

Quite a fine and highly enjoyed impromptu dance came off at the Masonic Hall, Thursday evening. It came near being a failure, though, because of the difficulty of procuring music. It fortunately happened that Late. Gill was here on a visit from Darwin and they succeeded in pressing him in to a good purpose. And we are hereby reminded of a neglected duty, to-wit: To inform all those in this place desiring to get up dances that our late Independence String Band, hitherto always ready and able to furnish the best kind of ball music, have irrevocably gone out of commission, and authorize us to say that neither, individually or collectively will they, hereafter, furnish music for festive occasions of the sort terpsechorian on any conditions—a fact that party managers, who have hitherto always depended upon them, will bear in mind and govern themselves accordingly, by looking elsewhere in time.

District Court.

In the matter of Rafael Cuervo v V. A. Gregg, it was ordered that the title of the case be changed to the Cuervo Mining Company, said company having acquired all the title orignally vested in former plaintiff. Defendant withdrawed demurrer, and was given till the second Monday in January, 1876 to file a new answer, to which time the action is continued.

Rafael Cuervo et als vs New Coso Mining Company. Decree and Judgement entered in favor of, and as prayed for, by defendants.

Honor (Military) Lodge, No. 4 I. O. G. T.

Our military Good Templars, at the Post, have received their charter and No. from the Grand Lodge, and are progressing finely in their Lodge, the name of which, is as given in the above caption. The meetings take place every Thursday evening, beginning at 6 o'clock. All members of the order calling will receive a most cordial welcome, and even more to all members of the fraternity, citizen or otherwise, who will join them in their good work. The officers, a list of whom we published at time of election, were duly installed Thursday night of last week.

Justices of the Peace.

The following is a list of the newly elected Justices of the Peace who have filed their official bonds: C. H. Walcott, and Geo. C. Alexander, Bishop Creek; R. L. Peterson, Lone Pine; W. T. Grant, and W. J. McManus, Darwin; John R. Hughes, Cerro Gordo; Duncan Campbell, Big Pine; Chas. Keppler, Georges Creek. Jos. Schalten was re-elected Justice for Independence, but his present term does not expire till January, 1st.

Gone to Lone Pine.

Dr. A. F. Stoeckly, Dentist, having performed a good deal of work here always in a satisfactory manner, started yesterday for Lone Pine, where he will re-locate for a short time prior to a change to Darwin. See his card.

Departed.

Lieutenant Birney of party No. 2 of the Wheeler Exploring Expedition, departed a few days ago to make his report at headquaters, and turn over material as a conclusion of the duties of the Expedition for this season.

The Coso Mining News.

The above is the the title, and a very good one, we should think, for Harris' paper, late The Panamint News, just started at Darwin. The new issue looks well, being reduced to quarto form with five wide columns. The News has our best wishes for its success, particularly, as we know that the fortunes of any newspaper enterprise in a new country is the true indicator for the success and values of the locality with which its fortunes are most directly linked. We are sure The News will do much to promote their interests, and in so doing, must proportionately do the same for this whole section, where, from an obvious not to say peculiar, condition of affairs, the acknowledged high prosperity of any one mining district is a reliable guarantee in kind for the whole and vice versa.

Ores shipped.

We observe quite a large quantity of the rich ores from the Silver Sprout mine piled up at Harris & Rhine's for shipment to San Francisco. Some thirty tons in all have lately been brought down for that purpose. The mine is said to be looking remarkably well, as does the Lamb, a neighboring one of the same series, and which has always ranked quite as high as the Silver Sprout itself, though, until quite recently, little or no work has been done upon it this Summer. The late snow, up at that great altitude has caused a suspension of work for the present. s

Professional.

We would call the attention of parties having legal matters requiring an attorney at Darwin that F. M. Pfister, Esq., has located himself in that place for that business. We cannot speak from personal knowledge of Mr. Pfister's legal knowledge but we believe nevertheless that he will be found well qualified in every particular, and a reliable gentleman in all respects.

Panamint.

Numerous Panaminter's have been in town this week, but, except that all maintain that they have just the most promising camp there is, and that some seventy five additional miners are said to have been called for there quite recently, we have no special items of interest to record concerning the camp.

Lone Pine School.

We have the following report of Mr. Rittger's school at Lone Pine for the last school month of 20 days teaching: Whole number of days attendance, 638; whole number of absence, 82; average daily attendance 31 9-10; average daily absence 4 1-10.

Adjourned.

The district Court adjourned for the term on Friday, quite a number of cases going over. The "foreign" legal gentlemen and natives attending Court have all become scarce.

Letter from Bishop Creek.

BISHOP CREEK, Nov. 11, 1875.

MESSRS EDS:—Kind fortune seems to frown on us poor sinners in this section of country, for nothing occurs to mar the even tenor of our lives; people have even ceased to talk of the Ashim trial and evince no interest in the action of the jury.

A FIRE.

A fire broke out last Sunday evening in the haystacks of H. G. Plumley, destroying some 90 tons of hay, stable and sett of harness. As a result of this fire John Dehy is now undergoing an examination before Justice Walcott for arson, on a warrant sworn out by Plumley. The whole thing is in the court and for that reason I withhold and opinion.

THAT COUNTY LINE.

County Surveyor Thompson, of Mono, commenced the survey of the northern line of this county. Good for Mono, for there is no foolish idea of economy in her Supervisors. The line throws Piute District in our neighbors territory

TO START UP.

R. M. Johnson's five-stamper will start the first of next week on ore from his gold mine, and will no doubt make a good run. Mr. Johnson is an energetic man and good miner, and all join in wishing him success.

STOCK AND FARMERS.

The stock question is settled here and amicably, for which all should be pleased. The stock men are buying the feed and everything is lovely. Sheep are leaving for the other side, where feed will soon be plentiful.

TYRO.

Another New Paper.

We inadvertantly omitted to mention last week the receipt of No. 2 of another new paper for Bakersfield. It is called The Gazette, J. A. Linthicum, a well known newspaper man of this State, editor and proprietor. The paper is a good one in every respect save one, and that is a matter that concerns us only in a general way and because we think whenever any newspaper (or individual) makes a noticeable effort to "smudge" another that paper can't help but blacken its own face somewhat. The exception we make refers to the efforts of The Gazette to smite its two local contemporaries in their fifth ribs—for which, however, it may have good and sufficient reasons, other than a desire to be disagreeable to somebody for disagreeableness sake merely. It is very possible these contemporaries need something to bring them to a realizing sense of the error and wickedness of their ways.

—It is a serious quarrel that is not condoned by a new dress.

PEOPLE VS. ASHIM.

[CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.]

was acquitted and discharged before Ashim's examination commenced; there were no charges remaining against him; Petrovich testified that Perasich sat with both hands on the arms of the chair, in the act of getting up when the first shot was fired; I remember that his attention was called to the fact that there were no arm chairs in the room; nothing but stools; he said he could not understand English when spoken fast; can't say that he said this when the chair business came up.

Sullivan called by the defense,

Saw defendant in my restaurant in Darwin on the 10th day of March last; it was about 11 o'clock; Montgomery was with him; no one else; they were eating their dinner; deceased and Petrovich were there eating at the same time; at another table; they were quarreling over a bill; Perasich raised up to go to Ashim; I told him, "Here I don't want any of this thing here;" Ashim said something that I did not hear; Perasich stated over to the table again and said "you s—of a b—;" he had his hand to his pistol or hip in a threatening manner; Ashim said to me, "you remember that;" Ashim said to Perasich, "you can't scare me; I'll make you pay that bill;" Ashim did not use any vulgar or abusive language to Perasich that I heard.

Mr. Reddy—You testified as follows, did you not?

"Deceased told Ashim not to bother him any more about that bill; he would pay it when he got to Panamint; he said something in a threatening manner; he stood with his hand under his coat in a threatening manner."

CROSS-EXAMINED BY PROSECUTION.

This occurred on the day before the homicide in my place of business; I came into the room while they were quarrelling; they were talking as if mad; about a bill contracted in Panamint by Perasich or a Mexican; heard Perasich's voice first; he was saying, "I will pay you when I get to Panamint;" they were setting at the table; don't recollect what Ashim said to this; both were talking; Perasich got up from his seat very soon after; it was something Ashim said that induced him to get up; Perasich started to Ashim's table; went within six feet; Ashim was sitting in his seat; saw nothing in Perasich's hand; Ashim said something and Perasich got up again; went over to the table and said, "If you trouble me about that bill again, I'll——;" Ashim said to me, "You remember that;" Ashim said, "You can't scare me; I'll make you pay that bill;" Perasich had his hand on his hip this way (shows); I didn't see a pistol; saw him throw his hand up; he went back to his seat then on that day.

Mr. Quint—Wasn't there somebody interfered then?

A. Petrovich was trying to prevent a quarrel.

Milstadt re-called by defense.—All the parties were in the restaurant on the 10th; Ashim and Montgomery came in first, Perasich and Petrovich afterwards; they recognized each other; deceased then asked defendant if he came to collect that bill from the Mexican; he said he had; deceased replied that he didn't see the use of his running after Hypolite, as he (Perasich) stood good for it; he considered himself responsible for it; after some more words Ashim said he would either make him or Hypolite pay it; Perasich then rose from his seat and went over there and said, "You d—s— of a b—, how are you going to do it?" Ashim said nothing; Perasich turned and sat down to his table again; some words passed that I didn't make out; Perasich rose from his seat, stepped towards Ashim and said to him, "If there is anything you want, come right on;" then Petrovich and Sullivan quieted Perasich down, and he went back to his seat; this was all; Perasich and Petrovich went away first; neither Ashim or Montgomery got up from their seats at all while this was going on.

To Mr. Clark—Perasich had complained about Ashim having insulted him about that bill before.

Dr. Hehner sworn—Studied my profession in Europe; testified in this case before the committing magistrate for the prosecution; examined deceased about two hours after he was shot; found three wounds on the body; one between thumb and forefinger on right hand; it was a mere cut; another was under left arm in the chest about two inches from the arm-pit; it was powder burnt; probed the wound; cannot say that wound was necessarily mortal; there was another above and about two inches back of left ear; the ball passed through the brain, and lodged on the opposite side; probed that wound; it was a fatal wound; a person with such would drop instantly. Examined Petrovich's wounded hand; that was eight or ten days after; the muscle and skin of the middle and forefinger showed a bullet wound; there were powder burns on those two fingers; none on the other two; think that the wound and powder burns on the first two fingers, with none at all on the others could only have been produced that way by a pistol held in that hand; (Whistler pistol shown witness). A ball from that sized pistol must have torn the fingers more than were these. (Witness shows with a small IXL pistol how the wounds were inflicted—the discharge occurring while the muzzle was being held in the left hand to aid in cocking the weapon). The ball entered from the inside next the small and unwounded fingers.

CROSS-EXAMINED BY PROSECUTION.

Graduated in Marburg, Prussia in 1867; did not practice in the old country; have a diploma but not with me; was 20 when I graduated; had attended school three years; came to this country immediately after I quit school; was in a store three years in New Orleans; was in a drug store two years in Los Angeles; attended lectures a year and a half in San Francisco; have attended a great many gunshot wounds at hospitals both in Europe and San Francisco; a few in practice; attended Murphy in Cerro Gordo and some others; have had hardly any experience in use of fire arms; have practiced with pistols; never to see just at what distance a pistol will powder burn; can tell what authorities say; it must be in close contact; two or three feet; never saw a man just at the time of receiving a fatal shot; it is not a universal rule that a shot through the brain will cause the person to drop instantly, but the general rule is to the contrary; a person in motion receiving a shot through back part of head might yet take a step or two forward; think the wounds received by deceased were made by a large bullet; the torn edge of the wound in Petrovich's hand was on the inside; if the pistol was close the point of entrance would be the largest and most torn; if at a distance the point of exit; do not think the flesh must necessarily all be torn off under the circumstances; a shot received from a distance would make a round smooth hole at point of entrance.

RE-DIRECT.

Powder burns on the inside ten days after; none on the opposite side.

B. Ashim, sworn in his own behalf—Arrived in Panamint, January 25; born in South Carolina; raised on the Pacific coast; San Francisco and Carson City; was about 12 when I went to Carson; partly educated there; remained till I was about 17; am 24 years of age; my family consists of my father, mother, two sisters and a brother; I am the eldest; had known Perasich since the first week I arrived in Panamint; I kept a store there; was keeping it at time of this difficulty; after my return from Coso on the 11th of March, I went to the restaurant to get my lunch; saw Petrovich, Milstadt and deceased; I stepped up to the table or near it where Petrovich and Perasich were sitting; I said "Perasich, Hypolite, is in town; I want you to see him before he leaves town and settle that account;" the said "I will settle that in Panamint;" I said "you have no business in Panamint, and I want you to see Hypolite and settle this bill to-day;" he said, "God d— you, I'll settle it now," at the same time rising in a threatening manner with ferocity pictured upon his countenance; put his right hand upon his pistol, which he attempted to draw; I immediately drew and shot at his hand; shot again in the same direction; all I wanted to do was to disable him; he stepped forward; I fired three shots; the last at Petrovich; he had fired at me; I received a shot he fired at me on the right breast; Carroll and Mentgomery had large pistols like mine but of a different manufacture; don't know how many shots were fired in all; there were other shots fired besides what I fired; I don't recollect or can't say exactly; there were six or seven.

J. M. Murphy, sworn. I reside in Panamint; know defendant for five or six years; knew him in Pioche, Eureka, White Pine and Panamint; knew his general reputation; never heard his name mentioned as having been in a difficulty before; his reputation was good; knew deceased; knew him since last October in Panamint; knew his general reputation for peace and quietness was bad as I should consider it; he was considered as quarrelsome and somewhat desperate, at least during the last few months of his residence in Panamint; he was in the habit of carrying weapons; defendant was living in Panamint after deceased had established such reputation

Q. Did you ever meet deceased in your office, and if so what occurred?

Mr. Clark—We object.

The Court—Let the matter go to the jury in full. The objection is overruled.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

(The first portion of the cross-examination elicited nothing of importance, unless it was that witness could not specifically name the sources of his information as to defendant's good character as a peaceable man in the several places he had known him). Knew deceased from about the time he first came to Panamint; had heard several parties speak of his reputation for violence; that was prior to the 11th of March, 1875; never heard of his shooting anybody; knew of his striking a man named Constantine. It occurred in this way: It was just before Perasich and Petrovich closed their restaurant in Panamint They were owing Constantine about $100 for work; he was their cook; they refused payment; he came to my office to enforce payment; I advised him to try and settle the matter without a lawsuit as they had on property he could reach in that way. Subsequently they gave him an order for $20 on a man in Darwin, and he went there to get it; the person refused to pay it on the ground that he owed the parties nothing; Constantine went back to Panamint, and came to my office wanting this Perasich arrested; I told him that was not the way; meantime he had lost the order. I wrote to Reddy & Wilson at Darwin to have them go with this cook to have Perasich, who was there, acknowledge the debt; he went and Perasich said he would pay him $20, no more. They both came back to Panamint, and I sent for Perasich and Petrovich to come to my office, as I desired to have the matter settled; Constantine was there when they came, and they got into a quarrel. I stepped between them and ordered Mr. Perasich to retire; wanted no difficulty in the office. He turned to go out, when Constantine charged him with having tried to bribe him to assassinate his (Perasich's) former partner in Panamint. Mr. Perasich became furious and attempted to rush on the other man; he was prevented from doing so, and soon went home. Constantine wanted to employ me to arrest Perasich on that charge; I refused, but told him to go to Justice Smith and make complaint. Constantine went to Darwin soon after this. On the way going or coming back, in Shepherd's canyon, Perasich made an assault on him with a pistol. Constantine, in Panamint, got a warrant for his arrest There was no officer there to serve it. I do not of my own knowledge know of these things except those that occurred in my office.

F. P. Ball, sworn—Was in Lone Pine shortly before the 10th of March last; knew deceased and Petrovich. I was Deputy Sheriff at that time. Saw Petrovich present at a difficulty in Lone Pine when Perasich was a party.

Defendant re-called—Had heard of several difficulties in which deceased had been engaged in before I left Panamint; knew his reputation in that respect thoroughly.

W. C. Smith, sworn—Have resided in Panamint for the last 18 months; have known defendant for six or seven years about; his general reputation was good—of the best—good as mine. He has always been engaged in business since I knew him; I was a Justice of the Peace since October last; know deceased in Panamint; he had become desperate, very desperate, through ill success in business I think. He was desperate in carrying weapons.

The cross examination of witness, though quite lengthy, elicited nothing more than some unimportant particulars as to his acquaintance with defendant in other places.

H. M. Isaacs testified that he knew defendant, then a boy of 14, ten years ago in Carson, but not since that time. Defendant was then a reporter in the Legislature; had a good reputation.

Sullivan, on re-call by the prosecution, testified that Petrovich had nothing in his hands when he ran out through the kitchen. Witness called his attention to his bleeding hand. [To defense].—Don't know that he had no pistol in his pocket at that time.

Milstadt, on re-call, testified to the same effect.

MONTGOMERY'S TESTIMONY.

Following is a mere synopsis of Montgomery's evidence given in the preliminary examination. As read it gives the most complete account of the whole affair than any other witness, but its great length precludes its publication as a whole:

Witness was born in Canada, was not a Jew, was not related to defendant in any manner except as his clerk in Panamint. Had accompanied him in that capacity to Darwin, where defendant came with the view of establishing a store. Got there between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the 10th of March last. On inquiry was recommended to Milstadt & Sullivan's restaurant as the best place in town to stop at. Before going to supper, while looking about the place, had some conversation with John Wilson, with whom Ashim was acquainted in Pioche, about town lots, prospects of the place, etc. Agreed to come after supper and look at Wilson's lots, and fix a time to go to see the mines next morning. Carroll, who was a stranger, came up, and having heard what Ashim's business was, said he had lots to show him; would also show him around the mines, he having some locations. Arranging to see Carroll at 8 or 9 in the morning, they then went to supper when the difficulty of the 10th occurred. They were seated at their table when deceased and Petrovich came in and sat down at another table; recognized each other, and began the talk in relation to that bill. In this Ashim asked Perasich if he was not mistaken about Hypolite's name—if it was not Cervantes? "At that Perasich became very pale and wild, and started towards Ashim." This demonstration ending as elsewhere given, Perasich took his seat again, but soon commenced to abuse Ashim in the vilest language, and starting up with his hand to his pistol, said, "If you ever speak to me about that bill again I'll blow a hole through you." Sullivan and Petrovich stopped him; Ashim had made no reply to his threat and abuse except to tell Sullivan to remember it.

Early next morning while about to start out with Wilson, Carroll came up and said he had arranged to go with them, whereupon Wilson said it was all right, and left them with Carroll. Ashim having heard that Hypolite was at old Coso, decided to go there first, saying they could go to the mines after they came back in the evening. Carroll, having lots to sell apparently had a motive in keeping Ashim in hand, and said he would go with them, that he knew the road. Before starting P. Reddy told them the Mexicans at Coso were angry and excited, and that they had better go well armed. They got each a revolver and started. On the way met Hypolite but not knowing him, went through, finding out the fact, and returning to Darwin immediately. It being late in the day decided to have lunch before doing any business, and went to their usual place to obtain it, inviting Carroll to lunch with them. Going into the restaurant they found Perasich and Petrovich there, and then followed the shooting substantially as related by the other witnesses, except that deponent did not discharge his pistol at all, all the loads being found in it by Elder, to whom it was surrended immediately after the shooting.

THE VERDICT.

The jury retired at a quarter to 9, and at about 10 came in with a verdict of NOT GUILTY, having balloted three times, one juror voting a blank twice.

Remarkable Attack by a Boa Constrictor.

A very curious incident took place in the Zoological Gardens of Amsterdam about a fortnight ago. A gentleman well known in South Wales visited the gardens, accompanied by a friend and a courier. When passing by the compartment in the snake house, in which the huge boa constrictor is kept, the keeper asked whether the visitors would like to see the boa fed. Receiving an affirmative answer, he went for a rabbit, and on returning litted up the glazed door a few inches with the view of giving the snake his meal. No sooner had he done so than the boa, who was coiled up in the corner, darted with fury at the opening of the glass door, and sent his fangs into the hands of the gentleman, making fearful gashes. The keeper, aided by the courier and another, laid hold of the snake by his throat, and succeeded in shoving him back under the opening of the window. I had an opportunity of examining the wounds inflicted on the gentleman's hands, and it is remarkable how he escaped further and more serious injury. He is now convalescent, but he evidently got a shake to his nervous system, which can scarcely be wondered at. It is said that the Amsterdam boa is the largest in Europe.—[Cor. Land and Water.

A Novel Way to Catch Woodchucks.

The Chester county Village Record is responsible for the following plan to kill the woodchuck or ground hog: Procure a small dog; get a water turtle small enough to enter the hole, bore a hole in his shell just above his tail, procure a piece of wire about six inches long, fasten to one end of this wire cotton wick saturated with kerosene oil, fasten the other end of the wire to the turtle, place him in the hole, and then light the cotton wick, and in a moment the turtle will enter the hole in double quick time until he reaches the end of that hole, and then retraces his steps and appears in front again ready for another march for another camp. You can imagine the surprise of the woodchuck on the entrance of such a blazing enemy. He leaves his fort only to meet death at his own door by the dog sentinel. I would remark that this effective plan is the invention of a Virginia negro. I have seen it put in practice often, and never knew it to fail. It matters not what is in the hole—woodchuck, skunk, or any other animal—he must leave on the approach of this formidable torch-bearer.

—The latest from the Keely Motor is that an application for a patent will then learn whether it is an important discovery or a grand humbug.

—Giles, the defaulting postmaster of Prescott, Arizona, was, on the 21st instant, sentenced to two years imprisonment, and to pay a fine of $10,000.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Something for Boys.

From the moment a babe begins to notice surrounding objects, his character is under the process of formation; as day by day, through infancy and childhood, here a little and there a little, character grows with the growth and strengthens with the strength, until good or bad, it becomes a coat of mail. Look at a model man of business—prompt, reliable, conscientious, cool and cautious, yet clear headed and energetic. When do you suppose he developed all these admirable qualities? When he was a boy. Let us see the way in which a boy of ten years gets up in the morning, works, plays, studies, and we will tell you just about what kind of a man he will make. The boy who is late at the breakfast table, late at school—who never does anything at the school—who never does anything at the right time, stands a poor chance to be a prompt man. The boy who half washes his face, half does his task, forgets half his errands, half learns his lessons, will never makes a thorough man. The boy who neglects his duties, be they ever so small, and then excuses himself by saying, "Oh, I forgot! I didn't think!" will never be a reliable man. And the boy who finds pleasure in the pain and suffering of weaker things will never be a noble, generous, kindly man—a real gentleman

A Beautiful Extract.

"Generation after generation," says a fine writer, "have felt as we feel now, and their lives were as active as our own. They passed away like a vapor, while Nature wore the same aspect of beauty as when her Creator commanded her to be. The heavens shall be as bright over our graves as they are now around our paths. The world will have the same attraction for our offspring yet unborn that she once had for ourselves, and that she now has for our children. Yet a little while and all will have happened. The throbbing heart will be stilled and we shall be at rest. Our funeral will wend its way, and the prayers will be said and our friends will all return, and we shall be left behind in silence and darkness for the worm. And it may be for a short time we shall be spoken of, but the things of life will creep in, and our names will be forgotten. Days will continue to move on, and laughter and song will be heard in the room in which we died; and the eye that mourned for us will be dried and glisten with joy; and even our children, will cease to think of us, and will not rememember to lisp our names. Then shall we have become, in the touching language of the Psalmist, 'forgotten and gone out of mind.'"

Capital and Experience.

The Drawer was chatting a few weeks ago on the piazza of the United States Hotel, at Saratoga, with a bright German gentleman, retired from business, who related the following little anecdote:

"Going down to New York the other night on the boat," said he, "I got chatting with a German acquaintance, and asked him what he was doing."

"Vell," he replied, "shoost now I am doing nodings, but I have made arrangements to go into pizness."

"Glad to hear it. What are you going into?"

"Vell, I goes into partnership mit a man."

"Do you put in much capital?"

"No, I doesn't put in no gabital."

"Don't want to risk it, eh?"

"No, but I puts in de experience."

"And he puts in the capital?"

"Yes, dot is it. We goes into pizness for dree year; he puts in the gabital, I puts in de experience. At de end of dree year I will have de gabital, and he will have de experience!"

Arrangements for the Centennial.

The Act of Congress which provided for "celebrating the one hundredth Anniversary of American Independence, by holding an International Exhibition of Arts, Manufactures, and Products of the Soil and Mine," authorized the creation of the United States Centennial Commission, and entrusted to it the management of the Exhibition. This body is composed of two Commissioners from each State and Territory, nominated by the respective Governors, and commissioned by the President of the United States. The enterprise, therefore, is distinctly a national one, and not, as has been stated, the work of a private corporation.

The Exhibition will be opened on May 10th, 1876, and remain open every day, except Sundays, until November 10th. There will be a fixed price of 50 cents for admission to all the buildings and grounds.

The Centennial grounds are situated on the western bank of the Schuylkil River, and within Fairmount Park, the largest public park in proximity to a great city in the world, and one of the most beautiful in the country. The Park contains 3160 acres, 450 of which have been enclosed for the Exhibition. Besides this tract, there will be large yards near by for the exhibition of stock, and a farm of 42 acres has already been suitably planted for the tests of ploughs, mowers, reapers, and other agricultural machinery.

The Exhibition buildings are approached by eight lines of street cars, which connect with all the other lines in the city, and by the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads, over the tracks of which trains will also run from the North Pennsylvania and Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore railroads. Thus the Exhibition is in immediate connection with the entire railroad system of the country, and any one within 90 miles of Philadelphia can visit it at no greater cost than that of carriage at the Paris or Vienna Exhibition.

The articles to be exhibited have been classified in seven departments, which, for the most part, will be located in appropriate buildings, whose several areas in acres are as follows: Main Building, 21 47; Art Gallery, 1.5; Machinery Building, 14; Agricultural Building, 10; Horticultural Building, 1.5; total 48 47.

This provides nearly ten more acres for exhibiting space than there were at Vienna, the largest International Exhibition yet held. Yet the applications of exhibitors have been so numerous as to exhaust the space, and many important classes of objects must be provided for in special buildings.

An important special exhibition will be made by the United States Government, and is being prepared under the supervision of a Board of Officers representing the several Executive Departments of Government. A fine building of 4½ acres is provided for the purpose, space in which will be occupied by the War, Treasury, Navy, Interior, Postoffice, and Agricultural Departments and the Smithsonian Institution.

The Women's Centennial Executive Committee, have raised $30,000 for the erection of a pavilion in which to exhibit every kind of women's work. To this collection, women of all nations are expected to contribute.

The list of special buildings is constantly increasing, and present indications are that their total number will be from 200 to 250. Most of the important foreign nations—England, Germany, Austria, France, Sweden, Egypt, Japan, and others—are putting up one or more structures each, for exhibiting purposes, or for the use of the commissioners, exhibitors and visitors. Offices and headquarters of this kind, usually of considerable architectural beauty, are provided by the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Missouri, Kansas, Virginia, West Virginia, Nevada, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Delaware; and it is likely that others will follow the example.

A number of Trade and Industrial Associations, which require large amounts of space, will be provided for in special buildings. Among these are the photographers, the carriage builders, the glass makers, the cracker bakers, the boot and shoe manufacturers, beside, quite a number of individual exhibitors. The great demands, for space will probably render this course necessary to a considerable extent, especially for exhibitors who have been tardy in making their applications. In the Main Exhibition Building, for example, 333,300 square feet of space had been applied for by the beginning of October by American exhibitors only; whereas, the aggregate space which it has been possible to reserve for the United States Department, is only 160,000 square feet, about one-third of which will be consumed by passage ways.

The Machinery Building, like the others, is already fully covered by applications. There are about 1,000 American exhibitors in this department, 150 English, and 150 from other European countries—which is about 250 more than entered the Vienna Machinery Exhibition. Extra provision is being made for annexes to accommodate the hydraulic machinery, the steam hammers, forges, hoisting engines, boilers, plumbers, carpenters, etc.

Power in the Machinery Hall will be chiefly supplied by a pair of monster Corliss Engines. Each cylinder is 40 inches in diameter, with a stroke of ten feet; the fly-wheel is 31 feet in diameter, and weighs 55 tons; the horse-powers is 1400; and the number of boilers is 20. This engine drives about a mile of shafting.

For the Art Exhibition, the most eminent American artists are understood to be at work, and it may be confidently stated that, especially in the in the department of landscape painting, the United States will present a finer display than the public has been led to expect. Quite aside from the contributions of American artists, applications from abroad call for more than four times the exhibiting space afforded by the great Memorial Hall. Provision for the surplus will be made in temporary fire-proof buildings, though all exhibiting nations will be represented in the central Art Gallery.

The Secretary of the Navy has arranged that a United States war vessel shall call next Spring, at convenient European ports, to collect and transport hither to the Exhibition the works of American artists resident in Europe. Among the ports thus far designated, are Southampton for England, Havre for France, Bremen for Germany, and Leghorn for Italy, to which, if desirable, others will be added.

Mr. Bell, the eminent English Sculptor, who designed the groups for the plinth for the great Albert Memorial in Hyde Park, London, is reproducing in terra cotta, at the celebrated works in Lambeth, the one which symbolizes America. The figures in this group are colossal, covering a ground space of 15 feet square. It will probably be placed in the great central gallery, opposite the principal entrance.

The Art Exhibition will include, in addition to the works of contemporary artists, representative productions of the past century of American art—those, for instance, of Stuart, Copley, Trumbull, West, Alston, Sully, Neagle, Elliot, Kensett, Cole. These, as well as the works offered by living artists, will be passed upon by the Committee of Selection, who will visit for the purpose, New York, Boston, Chicago, and other leading cities, in order to prevent the needless transportation to Philadelphia of works of Art not up to the standard of admission.

Timber Lands.

It is said Commissioner Burdett, of the General Land Office, will in his report strongly recommend that all timber land offered by the Government be appraised and thrown open to purchasers at not less than their appraised value He is of the opinion that unless they are thus placed under private guardianship the fine forests of the country will soon be wantonly exhausted by lumber companies and speculaters who are now stripping the land of its timber under cover of dummy pre-emption entries, or without any pretense of compliance with the law, while the Government derives no revenue from its property, and the country sustains almost irreparable damage from the sweeping denudation of large areas of its water-sheds, He will also condemn the practice of extending the system of subdivision surveys over immense bodies of worthless land west of the one hundredth meridian, and suggest that only such tracts be minutely surveyed as have any attractions for settlers. He will also recommend that provision be made for connecting the land office surveys with important points established by geological surveys of the Territories, and that monuments at section corners, etc, be constucted in a much more lasting manner. The recommendation of his predecessor, that pre-emption laws be abolished and the homestead system made the only method of obtaining title to agricultural lands is repeated and earnestly urged upon the attention of Congress.

The Forthcoming Message.

There is much speculation as to the probable tenor of President Grant's coming message to Congress. A Washington special says, however, that it is certain the public school question, the finances and condition of affairs in Cuba will each have a prominent place. The same special further says: "Senator Morton who has been in the city for the last week or so, is responsible in a large degree for the President's assuming a position upon the school question in the coming message. He has been persuading the President that he must assume the position of Gladstone, in England, and Bismarck, in Germany, and come out against the growing demands of Catholicism. There is but one thing to be said about the President's Cuban policy, and this can be said by the highest authority. He will not talk of war, or the possibility of war, in his message, but will urge strongly the justice of recognizing the rights of the belligerent Cubans. He has made up his mind that he will carry his point in this regard with the aid of Congress if he can, and if not without its aid. In the absence of Congress the Constitution gives him power to act. He proposes, however, to give Congress one more opportunity to take the responsibility upon its shoulders."

The Third Term Question.

The New York Herald, speaking of the prospect, says if Grant forces his nomination, which he has the power to do, he could not be elected; whereas, any other candidate posessing the confidence of himself and the party, might easily carry off the prize. If Grant should be the Republican nominee, there would be an opposite Republican candidate. The inflationists would also put forward a candidate, and a scub race would be the result, with probably two Republican and two Democratic candidates in the field. The Herald deprecates such an event on various grounds, and says the result would ultimately be a Democratic President. Grant can tie up all this storm by a frank renunciation of all personal aspirations, and by giving his aid and influence to some good candidate sound on finance and posessing the confidence of the party.

Another Steamer Lost.

The Steamer Waco, from New York to Galveston, was burned outside the Galveston bar on the 8th instant, and what is singular about it is, that up to the 10th no trace of crew or passengers has been discovered. It was supposed they had taken to the boats and were blown to sea, but that in the main all will turn up alive. A number of steamers had been dispatched to hunt them up.

To Be Admitted.

It is said to be definitely settled that Colorado will be admitted into the Union on the Fourth of July 1876. The Centennial State will have three electoral votes in the next Presdential election.

TO WHOM CREDIT IS DUE.

The Los Angeles Herald sets up the claim of having originated, and of having sustained beyond any other paper, the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad, now complete from that city to Santa Monica. The Santa Monica Outlook denies the claims, par excellence, of The Herald, and says that Ayres of The Express is entitled to more credit for the origination and persistent, effective support under the most discouraging circumstances, than any other man or newspaper. The Express, as truly says The Outlook, started in to have the road built, and never ceased until the result was at least partially accomplished. Others, including The Herald, faltered, and about gave up the project as beyond reach. Not so The Express; every issue had something to urge, something to say of the vast interest at stake, the vast profits to flow into the hands of Los Angeles if it would use the means at its disposal and build this all important road. With this hammering, its influence and reasoning, induced at least a few of the local capitalists to take hold, and after them came enough smaller subscribers to give it a living prospect. Then came Jones and his millions to join hands with these few subscribers, and now the undertaking is so far advanced as to be considered perfectly assured of absolute completion, even far beyond the original intent. Besides the foregoing, and other times, the Los Angeles papers at this time and heretofore have arrogated much credit to themselves and their Legislative delegation in the last Legislature for introducing and pushing the great enterprise into a tangible, living shape. The energy, influence and perspicuity of that delegation, of ex Governor Downey and other leading men and the papers of the angelic city have been frequently extolled therefor.

Now, upon this, we have a word or two to say. We see no great results in the way of works complete or prospectively assured or even began on the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad proper, to grow extatic about, or to afford verp solid ground for a quarrel as to whom the credit for so much is due. Secondly and principally, the credit for the inception and actual necessary preliminary work does not belong to any newspaper or any man or delegation belonging to the city of Los Angeles. Leaving out the fact that the plan of the undertaking was outlined and frequently advocated in the columns of THE INYO INDEPENDENT, an obscure country newspaper as it was and is, before either The Herald or Express had an existence, the entire work of drafting and engineering the original bill through the Legislature was done, not by the Los Angeles delegation, but by the Inyo Representative, Jas. E. Parker, then, though not now, one of the editors and proprietors of said paper. And to him above any other individual, was due the credit of working that bill through the Legislature and through the Governor's hands, in the face of the peculiar anti-railroad sentiment which threatened to fatally bar its way, and particularly, to give it a final resting place in the pocket of the specially anti-railroad Governor. During this time, however, and especially at the latter crisis, ex-Governor Downey and the Los Angeles delegation did some active and doubtless effective auxiliary work—that and nothing more. Besides this the aforesaid Inyo Representative spared neither labor nor his limited means in accomplishing that thing, and though the amount of the latter thus expended as it was in some incidental expenses, was not large, proportionately it was more than that of any other individual, anterior to the actual commencement of the work under the re organization, as it now exists, with not one cent of which has he been re-imbursed even by a thank'ee.

Since that time as well as before THE INDEPENDENT has never lost an opportunity to uphold the undertaking to the best of its means and ability, and that far at least is entitled to as much credit as either or any of the Los Angeles papers. But while saying this it does not assume to have effected as tangible, obvious results as did either The Expres or Herald, both of which, and particularly the former, have doubtless done much in giving the project the necessary status in the minds of the immediately interested public to induce at least the beginning. But that beginning, unsustained as it was by so many of the rich men of Los Angeles, would also have been the ending had it not been for the adventitious circumstances that a wealthy outsider, whose riches equalled his energies, fore sight and business necessities, irrespective of those of the city of Los Angeles, suddenly became possessed of property in Inyo county to which this identical road was clearly of great necessity. That adventitious circumstance gave the enterprise a life and being beyond that it could ever have hoped to reach through Los Angeles capitalists alone, each and all of whom with two or three noble exceptions, hanging on to their surplus cash with a tenacity that would have resisted the blandishments of the first railroad investment ever placed in a Pacific market. Against that tenancious grip the cogent reasoning of all the Los Angeles papers combined bid fair to prove utterly powerless, and in the face of that patent fact the less they have to say about wonderful results they have accomplished the better. But between the two here especially referred to we agree with The Outlook, that for persistent effort, and for results accomplished to a certain extent, The Express takes the first place. That is too say, it did as seen from our stand point some months ago, but since it came under its later and commendably more economical management, it has never graced our table, and may now be languishing even unto death for all we know, see or hear of it.

THE LOST STEAMER.

The gloom occasioned by the loss of the steamer Pacific is wide spread. It now seems certain every soul, save two, of the two hundred and seventy-five aboard the ill-fated steamer, perished miserably; and all, it would seem, by reason of the most inexcusable neglect of duty by some one. The second of the only two persons who survive the great disaster was the quartermaster, who was picked up by a steamer sent in search soon after Jelley, the first one recovered, had made known the main facts of the occurrence. He, like the other, had outlived a dozen others including one young woman and Captain Howell, all of whom clung to a piece of the upper deck for many hours only to be washed off at last, one after another. The statement of the two survivors that the Pacific was struck by a ship is confirmed by the Captain of the ship that did it, the Orpheus, Captain Sawyer. From his story neither vessel had a proper lookout or side lights, so that by lack of these differently colored side lights, neither vessel knew how to steer to avoid each other in the darkness and storm of that fearful night when their dangerous proximity was at last made out Captain Sawyer claims that the Pacific came into his ship's side bows on, and thinking his vessel in a sinking condition, immediately hailed the steamer to have her lie by him. He knew nothing of her fate till after his rescue from his own stranded ship, which, in the continued storm, two days after the collision went ashore and became a total wreck. Continued search has been kept up, and a few dead bodies sustained by life preservers have been found tossing about, and that, it is now conceded, is all that can ever be hoped to be seen of all that vast number of once living, hopeful people, or the vessel which carried them to death.

Latest from Stanley.

The New York Herald of Nov. 10, publishes a telegraph synopsis of letters received in London from Stanley. He says Livingston was wrong in reporting that the Victoria Nyanza consisted of five lakes. Speke correctly states that the Victoria Nyanza is but one lake, but Speke's two islands are peninsulars. The river Shemeyn is the principal feeder of the lake, and the extremest source of the Nile yet discovered. Stanley had several conflicts with the slave dealers on the lake. On one occasion he was attacked by 100 natives armed with spears, in 13 canoes, who were repulsed after a severe fight. Three natives were killed. He arrived at Utesa's hunting camp April 12th, where the King ordered extraordinary festivities and displays. One feature was a naval review on the lake of 84 canoes, and manned by 2,500 men. On the second day, in addition to naval manœuvres there were races in which 84 canoes were engaged, each propelled by thirty oarsmen. The King led the fleet in person in presence of a great crowd of onlookers, including 300 wives of the King. On the third day there was bird shooting and target practice by 3,000 troops. This King has 2,000,000 subjects, is a Mussulman, has great intelligence and his dominion affords the best augury for the possible civilization of Africa.

The Eastern Elections.

Six out of the nine States, holding elections on the 2d instant, have gone Republican. That party is consequently greatly elated at this rather unexpected result, while the Democrats are correspondingly depressed, and begin to think that their chances for the next President are disgustingly slim. The three exceptions to Republican success are Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia, the latter having gone "Conservative."

—The number of persons on the steamer Pacific when she went down was 275. Of these only two are known to be saved.

Moody and Sankey.

These noted revivalists are doing some effective work on the Brooklynites though the attendance at their later meetings, held in the great Rink, has fallen off somewhat. A New York dispatch of the 10th says:

The usual crowd attended the Brooklyn Rink this evening. The hymn, "The Great Physician now is Near" was sung by the whole congregation. After prayer Sankey sang "I will sing you a song of that beautiful land." After the announcements, and the singing of another hymn, Moody said he wanted to talk this evening about heaven. He then related an incident in which he once told a friend that he was going to talk about heaven that evening, when his friend said he had hoped he was going to talk about something practical. "I find a great many people who think that heaven is a myth. A man told me the other day that heaven was on this earth. Well, if this is heaven, it is a queer kind. Christ says, 'I go to prepare a mansion for you.' We can't hear too much about that subject. We are here for a short time only, to prepare for eternity. I suppose there is not one here to-night but expects to make heaven their home." He then made a pointed illustration of the preparation made by foreigners before leaving their native land for America to spend only a short time. He then impressed upon the congregation the necessity of making ample preparation for eternity in another world He said: "If there be a heaven and a hell it certainly is madness to rush on without taking a thought for the future. God, in person, has a home and throne just as real as any city in this republic, as any kingdom upon earth, and a good deal more so, for they crumble into pieces; but His throne is never moved. In Chronicle I., 6th chapter, 14th verse, God hears his people from heaven. Some people have been trying to find out how far it is away. I can't find out in scripture, but one thing I know is, that it is not so far but he can hear the prayers that come from this sin accursed earth, see every tear of repentance and hear every sigh that goes up from his children below." After the singing of a hymn and a prayer, the meeting was dismissed.

Scrip Locations on Government Lands.

From the Southern Californian.

We have, from time to time, given notice of the lands still remaining in the Kern River Valley open to pre-emption. A great many sections have been occupied, mostly by strangers, whose attention has been called to them though the newspapers, which have freely copied our notices. Many of them have been directed upon the land from this office, and we have spared no pains or expense render aid in affecting the settlements. Unfortunately the information so given has attracted capitalists, who have anticipated settlers by locating scrip on much of the territory. About 30,000 acres have been so absorbed within the past month. It was reported no more land would be secured in that way—that all lands which had not been offered prior to 1868 could only be disposed of in pre-emption or homestead tracts. The common opinion had grown into a common faith the end of the mere speculation in Government lands had come It has proved a false reliance. Nearly 100,000 acres have been taken by capitalists in Kern county within a few months, and the wonder is where it is to stop. No one questions the right to buy if one has the means to pay, but it seems very short-sighted policy for the Government to put the land out of the reach of settlers by law. It remains to be seen how the capitalists are to act with reference to the population hastening to the Pacific Coast.

The Fitzgerald Libel Case.

The complaint against Charles and Michael H. De Young, of publishing a libel upon O. P. Fitzgerald, was called for examination in the Police Court Tuesday, after repeated continuances. M. H. De Young attended by counsel, appeared to answer, but neither the complainant nor his attorney were in court. The Prosecuting Attorney stated that efforts had been made to find Mr. Fitzgerald, but without success He also issued a subpœna for complainant's counsel, Judge Quint, but he was absent in Inyo county. As the Prosecuting did not draw up the complaint, he was not disposed to act in the absence of Judge Quint. The Court intimated that this case would not be permitted to remain in abeyance much longer. Friday the 19th, was finally fixed upon as the final day for hearing, and if the prosecution is not then ready to proceed, it was understood that the complaint would be dismissed.—[S. F. Bulletin.

A Sad and Peculiar Drowning Accident.

A pair of twin brothers named Goodrich living in Worcester, New York married sisters, also twins, a short time since, both weddings taking place at the same time. November 4th, while on their bridal tour, visiting a sister of the brides at Unadilla on the Susquehanna, the party accompanied by their sister and her husband went out for a boat ride, during which the boat was capsized and all the party drowned except one of the newly married brothers and his bride with whom he succeeded in reaching the shore. The bodies of the drowned all except the other twin sister were soon after recovered, but not in time to be brought to life.

The New Mayor.

Dr. Joseph Hewston has been elected by the Board of San Francisco Aldermen, Mayor of that city for the unexpired term of the late Mayor Otis, deceased.

The Case of Pinney.

[From The Sacramento Record-Union.]

The preliminary inquiry in the case of Pinney, the defaulting Paymaster's Clerk, has been completed, and it is stated that the report will be forwarded to Washington, whence, in due time, will come the orders for its final disposition. At present there does not appear much probability that a public inquiry will be had, though there are abundant reasons why the public should insist upon it. At Washington the matter will come under the hands of politicians, and these will, too, probably treat it solely from a political standpoint—which involves the perhaps natural desire to screen several active partisans, understood to be gravely implicated. The fact that the arch-thief has escaped is suggested by a contemporary as reason sufficient for dropping the whole case. The other fact, that many smaller thieves remain, and that their exposure and punishment is necessary to the welfare of the community must outweigh any such consideration, however. So infamous a case of swindling, involving as it does laxity so disgraceful on the part of Government officers, and dishonesty so rank on the part of politicians, contractors and merchants, ought to be thoroughly investigated, beyond a doubt. That it will be investigated we do not think probable, unless some peculiar pressure is brought to bear. That peculiar pressure might perhaps be found to consist in concurrent resolutions passed by the State Legislature, and introduced to Congress by our Senators and Representatives; and neither the Democratic Legislature here, nor the Democratic House there, would be likely to miss the opportunity for making political capital thus afforded them. Of course it would be much more satisfactory if the inquiry was ordered without such stringent proceedings.

Register Botsford.

It is with feelings of regret that the many friends of Mr. G. A. Botsford will learn that he has vacated the position he has so long held as Register of the U. S. Land Office at Visalia. During the several years of his official service he has by his urbanity, honesty and integrity in the administration of affairs of the department won over to him an additional host of friends, who look upon his career with pride and admiration. The public will feel the loss of so good and well tried servant, and the Department at Washington will fail to find a better or a truer man to fill his place. And it is a matter of congratulation among his friends, that while his retirement has been effected by petty spite and malicious intrigue, the best wishes of this community will follow him in new fields of usefulness wherever he may go. Truly, The Southern Californian remarks: "The ways of the Department at Washington are mysterious and past finding out;" but this we do know, that the people of the whole country, comprising the Visalia Land District, will deplore the retirement of Mr. Botsford from the office, as a man—courteous to everyone, faithful to his trust, and with a character unimpeached for integrity and moral worth.—[Tulare Times, Nov. 18.

Refusing to be a Bookkeeper.

A young lady in a Western public school house refused to study bookkeeping, which was prescribed for her class, and her mother sustained her in this refusal, on the ground that she had already as many lessons as she could healthfully attend to The school board immediately decreed her expulsion from the school, and the teacher obeyed its order. Application was made for her readmission, but the school board interposed the condition that she must take up the study of bookkeeping Not disposed either to meet this condition or be deprived of her tuition, the young lady went into court. Twice the case was tried without reaching a decision On the third, however, the jury was instructed by the court to find a verdict for the plaintiff, which they have done to the amount of $130 damages.

A Street-Car Incident.

In a Boston street car the other afternoon—The Globe tells the story—the seats on one side were well filled; on the other seven ladies were seated, and they contrived to spread over the entire space. Presently a tired, pale and feeble looking woman entered, and the ladies, glancing at her, settled back and let her stand. The only gentleman in the car, one of Boston's best-known authors, moved by righteous indignation, rose and said: "Ladies, how can you expect any gentleman to give you seats in a car when you treat one of your own sex with such unfeeling cruelty?" Then turning to the poor woman he said: "Madam my seat is at your service."

What a Fright Did.

A late Virginia Chronicle says: Among the few who have reason to be thankful for the fire is a lady whose home was on North C street. She had been bedridden for months, having lost the use of her limbs. When the fire approached her dwelling she was carried out on a blanket, and was as feeble as an infant. Within half an hour, to the amazement of herself and family, she discovered that the use of her limbs had returned, and from that moment she has been a well woman. Her great fright worked a cure.

Generous to a Fault.

Honest John Bidwell, he that got warmed for the Governorship of California, kindly sent five hundred pounds of flour to the Virginia sufferers. Generous indeed.—[Carson Tribune.

Taken Suddenly Ill.

Vice President Wilson, while in the Capitol on the 10th was taken suddenly and alarmingly ill with a sort of an apoplectic fit, but has since so far recovered as to be considered out of danger.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Board of Supervisors.

The following embraces the business transacted by the Board of Supervisors, not previously reported. It should have appeared last week, but was unavoidably crowded out:

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 8.

Present—C. Meysan, D. B. Curtis, and J. L. Garretson, President.

Ordered that duplicate county warrants be drawn in favor of C. Dockweiler and T. C. Boland in lieu of originals certificates as lost.

Ordered that a certificates of the complete reclamation of Swamp Land Districts Nos. 243 and 244 be forwarded to the Surveyor-General, as provided by law.

FRIDAY, Nov. 9.

Present—D. B. Curtis and President Garretson.

Ordered that the petition from citizens of Panamint, asking for the creation of a new township embracing that place remain under advisement till the next regular term.

S. H. Palmer was appointed Road Overseer for Lone Pine District.

Resolved, That the Court House being the common property of the county, shall not be used only for the legitimate purposes for which it was built, County Fairs, Political Conventions and National Holidays wherein the whole county is materially interested.

Resolved, That the Chairman of this Board is hereby instructed to serve a copy of this order on the Sheriff of this county.

During the early part of the session the Board had Hospital matters under consideration, the point at issue being raised by a petition signed by numerous residents of Lone Pine, protesting against a further allowance of salary to the contractor because of his alleged failure to furnish such medical attendance as the law requires. The Board concluded that the cheapest and easiest way to settle the matter would be to allow the bill, on the ground that the previous Board had accepted Dr. Gelcich's, the contractor's, oath of having once been the possessor of a proper diploma, and further, that Hospital patients were well treated and cared for in every respect. Hospital matters have always been the occasion of considerable talk and annoyance, often times, as we are satisfied, for inadequate reasons. Judging from the tenor of this petition and also of a certificate on file in relation to Dr. Gelcich's diploma, it is doubtful if the full requirements of law are met at present, but if the management of the Hospital itself is proper and satisfactory, as we are told by some it is, we shall leave the remainder for the proper authorities to settle.

The Board adjourned for the term on Friday evening.

Darwin Items.

We condense these items from The Coso Mining News of the 13th instant: W. B. Daugherty, County Clerk elect, goes in as assistant editor on The News....Thomas Brannan, charged with an assault on Frank Maguire, after an examination before Justice Hanson was discharged....Lumber is arriving in large quantities, but is being gobbled up just as fast....A. C. Hanson has just closed a contract with P. P. Gerrish for the erection of another hotel....The sum of $607 has been subscribed for the erection of a calaboose....The mining outlook is unexceptionally flattering. The Defiance furnace will be ready to fire up by the 1st of November, by which time or soon after the Cuervo furnace will be ready....Miss Thompson's school is languishing for the want of funds; otherwise it is doing well in every respect.

Gone North.

The Perasich brothers took the stage north, Saturday morning last, going to Carson we believe, to see their brother Elia through his trial for the attempt to assassinate Ashim in the stage as mentioned heretofore. It was thought by some, after Ashim was acquitted last week, that the brothers or their friends would make another attempt to waylay Ashim before he got out of the county, but they seem to have foregone that intention, if it was really entertained—and we certainly think, will do well to continue to forego it for all time to come.

Civilized Johns.

Two Chinamen passed our office the other day, one driving a four-horse team, the other riding a fine American saddle horse. They were smoking American cigars—carried a bottle of American whisky, and frequently passed it out to "irrigate" after the most approved American style—like looking skyward through a single-barreled opera glass—and, judging from their earnest manner, they must have been discussing American politics.

Raffle.

The raffle for Tommy Kehoe's horse, saddle, bridle, etc. came off the other day at the Aldine—some sixty chances being taken and number forty-two winning. Our saw mill friend, J. W. Smith, was the lucky one as usual. For a bachelor hanging on the "ragged edge," Jim is too lucky altogether.

A Lunar Rainbow.

Saturday night, about 8 o'clock, we were treated to the unusual sight of a grand lunar rainbow, located off west toward the mountains. It was as perfectly defined half circle, if not quite so bright in colors, as ever old Sol hung up for a rainbow.

Somewhat Mysterious.

Tuesday night while the wind was howling and tearing things after the manner of a first class Washoe zephyr, a steady red light as of a burning house or small volcano was observed away off to the southward. It did not happen to be in the line of any building or anything else known to be capable of such combustion on this side of the lake, and therefore it was decided to be in the Coso mountains beyond. Notwithstanding the gale, it did not seem to increase or diminish from the time of the first observation to the close, full three hours or more. The conclusion is that some unfortunate coal burner for the Darwin furnaces had his coal pit blown by the high winds into an uncontrollable conflagration, over there all by himself in the Coso mountains.

They Turn Out.

The other day some one in the position to risk the responsibility, quietly and unknown to all but one or two fellow conspirators, took the hundred pound bell elsewhere mentioned, and after carefully hanging it for the occasion in an out the way place between two of the buildings at the Post, began ringing a most dreadful fire alarm! At least that was what some of the boys took it, to be through force of old city habits never thinking no fire-bell was ever heard here before, or could have been, so they began to yell "fire!" and to help get up an excitement which brought everybody, all sexes and conditions, to the rescue on the double quick and plenty of—amazement. It was a creditable turn out; pity there was no half-bursting hose to have dampened down the bell or its ringers.

New Register for this Land Office.

We observe that a Mr. R. M. Biggs has been appointed Register of this Land Office vice Geo. H. McCallum. We have no idea who Biggs is nor where he belongs except that he is not a sagebrusher—for which let us be thankful, as it would be a pity to put county citzens into a local office so well calculated to starve the holder to death or seduce him from the path of honesty. On this account we are glad those bright intellects at Washington decided to sacrifice imported talent. We think Mr. McCallum tendered his resignation, and that is the way this new appointment came to be made—otherwise the Administration would not have tried to better things.

Personals.

Judge Reed and lady, Receiver Tom May, Miss Josephine Hughes and Mr. N. Rhine all started Tuesday morning last for Caliente, thence to different destinations....P. Reddy and John Wilson left for Darwin on Saturday to look after their mining and other interests there... Gen. Clark for Carson, Judge Quint for San Francisco and Judge Murphy for Panamint, left the day previous, likewise a good many others who didn't claim to be Judges or Squires or anything of that sort.

The Weather.

This week has been continually showery or decidedly rainy at times, starting in with quite a heavy blow. Notwithstanding all this, though, it is not particularly wintery as regards the cold. The storm clouds hung close along the foot of the Sierras, seemingly as if just pushed over from the other side, but with not force or volume enough to reach across to the eastern side of the valley, so it has been sunshiny weather most of the time in the Inyo range.

For Bishop Creek.

Citizen J. B. (better known as Pete) Swearingen and family propose, next week, to take up their residence at Bishop Creek, with the view of running that hotel. However it may have been heretofore we'll bet there will be no grounds for complaint as to its accommodations after Mr. and Mrs. Swearingen get things fixed as they design. They have our very best wishes in their undertaking.

The Hymn.

People who are fond of the old hymn beginning, "This is the way I long have sought," or words to that effect, may stand a chance of being gratified with that or some other appropriate psalm if they will attend church to morrow evening. Leastways that's what we suspect, but don't know for certain.

Departed.

B. Ashim, his mother and sisters, accompanied by Mr. W. Welch and Mr. Levin started in a private conveyance on Thursday morning for Caliente. Mrs. Ashim was nearly if not quite broken down by the fearful, most trying ordeal of her son's trial and continued apprehensions for his safty.

Died.

News comes of the death of Medical Director Daniel Egbert, U. S. N., at his residence in Philadelphia, October 24th, aged 77 years. Deceased was the father of Major Egbert and Mrs. Capt. Dove, formerly stationed at this Post.

Received.

A fine hundred pound bell and an outfit of the best and latest style of desks and seats obtainable, came to hand this week for the new school house near the Post.

Nearly a Blow up.

A fire raging in the sage brush during the high winds last Monday came very near taking Harris & Rhine's powder house in its course, but was turned aside when within a few feet of it.

On Hands Again.

Jos. Harris, after rantafousing out at Panamint long enough, again makes his bow to his old customers at his old stand, the Inyo saloon.

Work Cattle for Sale.

Anyone desiring to purchase some good work oxen, on easy terms, can have the opportunity of doing so by calling on Mr. McKewin, at his place near the Post. See his ad.

Our Benton Letter.

BENTON, MONO CO., CAL., Nov. 12, 1875.

MESSRS. EDS:— Please accept my apology for not writing you the news summary of this place and vicinity for the past two months. During election times we were all too busy and much interested in our local affairs as well as State politics to attend to much else, and were using every endeavor to elect two certain officers from this place—and were successful. Since that time we have had considerable business at Bridgeport attending the several Courts, which were well attended this term. There were five cases in the District Court, while the County and Probate Courts were by no means slighted. W. P. George and P. W. Bennett, Esqs., were in attendance, and rendered good service to their clients.

THE WEATHER

is cold and dry; have had but one little shower since the 24th of July, and the roads in places are badly cut up with dusty chuck-holes. But in other respects we have had as pretty a fall season, with less wind, than we can hope to have again soon. But now the majestic White Mountain is preparing her winter toilet, and thereby a stepmother's cooling breath for us.

MILL AND MINING

matters are, if any difference, progressing. The mines of the Indian Queen Mill and Mining Company have gained a place in the front rank of mining property, and the company has already more than paid the original cost price out of the proceeds of this Summer's run. Mr. Mack's mill and mine (the Camanche) are scaling the barricade of debt, and bringing the proprietor out beyond the reach of Old Obligation to any man. A. B. Williams' mill and mine are just now under attachment and injunction for the non-payment of old security debts. But we still believe he will dissolve these injunctions, and yet produce many "Benton bits."

IMPROVEMENTS

go on nevertheless. Levy Samman's new butcher shop is now complete, in which Messrs. Samman & Summers, who have lately entered into copartnership, will carry on the butcher business There are various other buildings about completed, viz. B. B. Alverson and E. R. Miner, each a barn, W. C. Cummings a dwelling, also an opposition butcher shop and a fine large structure on the north side of Center street belonging to a person who can neither bear prosperity or a newspaper puff.

MARRIED

by Justice A. B. Williams, November 6, J. B. McLaughlin, of Dexters canpon, to Miss Katie Rodgers, of Keokuk, Iowa. We would naturally suppose Miss Katie to be the kind of a woman to have, for she came all the way from Iowa to fulfill her engagement, so we are told.

DIED.

W. H. Latham, after a brief illness, died at the boarding house of Mrs. Laird, October 4. His sickness was caused by heavy lifting. Mr. Latham was a member of the I. O. O. F., and leaves a wife and son somewhere in the Eastern States.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Miller, Superintendent of the General Thomas Mill and Mining Company, was in town last week purchasing lumber, etc. Mr. F. Ross, of Oakland, but formerly a resident of this place, is back, we believe with the view of locating some place in this vicinity. Dr. Griswold, member of Assembly elect, took leave for Sacramento on the 11th, so as to be there ahead of time, which is better than to be behind time. E. P. Robinson was shot at a few evenings ago. His assailant, thinking he had caught his man, skedaddled for "some lone and wooded dell, Some valley or some crag," and has not been seen or heard of since. AT-TORNEY.

Destruction by Fire and Wind.

We hear, without being able to ascertain any particulars, that the gale up the valley did a great deal of damage in the way of scattering fences, unroofing buildings and tearing things generally in Round Valley, Bishop Creek and around. It was the strongest gale they ever had there. During its height a dwelling house in Round Valley took fire, and was of course destroyed. Besides this a fire in the adjacent mountains raged and destroyed a vast amount of timber and wood.

Preaching.

Rev. L. Case will preach in Lone Pine aed this place to-morrow at the usual hours.

—The Virginia Enterprise says: "Wonderful progress is being made in rebuilding and in clearing away the ruins throughout the burnt district. Frame buildings are springing up everywhere like mushrooms, and the walls of a number of brick structures are being rapidly repaired and put in shape for roofing. In case we are favored with a month of good weather the town will have assumed almost wholly a new shape—a shape in which it will be hardly be recognized, even by old Virginians."

The Epizootic in San Francisco.

A good many of our San Francisco horses are on the sick list. The noble animals that serve the city so effectively in our fire department are particularly unfortunate in this respect, and the Chief Engineer has considerably shortened their routes, reducing their labors as far as possible. Many other horses may be seen being led about the vicinity of their stables, their heads drooping languidly, and their necks carefully swathed in cloths. We learn from our exchanges that the epizootic is reappearing in many localities on this coast, as well as in the Eastern States and the Canadas, though here, as elsewhere, it is in a less malignant form than on its former visit in 1873.—[Rural Press.

Young Redskins at School.

In Dakota some of the Indian children attend school, and at least one schoolma'am in that territory wishes from the bottom of her heart that they didn't. Of course, in the conduct of schools it would not do to make any distinction on account of race, and this preceptress has been compelled to restrain the copper-colored portion of her pupils in a degree far more irksome to them than the white children. For a time the Indian pupils submitted tolerably well to the discipline of the school-room, but recently an outburst came all at once. Looking upon the schoolma'am as one maliciously depriving them of their liberty, the Indian pupils made, one afternoon, a dash at the teacher, carried her out of doors to the creek and actually ducked her in the water. Fortunately the youthful braves did not quite drown the young lady in getting satisfaction for their injuries, and the school goes on as before, with the sole difference in its conduct that the teacher don't scold so much, being deterred by a painful hoarseness.

Domestic Life.

The banes of domestic life are littleness, falsity, vulgarity, harshness, scolding, vociferation and incessant issuing of superfluous prohibitions and orders, which are regarded as impertinent interference with the general liberty and repose; and are provocative of rankling or exploding resentments. The blessed antidotes that sweeten and enrich domestic life are refinement, high aims, great interest, soft tempers, forbearance from all unnecessary commands or dictation, and general allowance of mutual freedom. Love makes obedience lighter than liberty. Man wears a noble allegiance, not as a collar but as a garland. The graces are never so lovely as when seen waiting on the virtues; and where they thus dwell there you will find a heavenly home.

—A Vicksburg wife informed her husband the other morning that she was working herself into the grave for the want of a hired girl, and as he went out she leaned back and fell to weeping. The children were making a noise in the hall as he passed out, and he called out, "You want to stop this racket! Your mother won't live a week, and when you get a stepmother here next Spring she won't put up with any such fooling." When he came home to dinner his wife met him with a smile, and said, "Isn't ours a cosy home, Richard, with only our own little family to look after?"

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention,

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Fault-Finding.

Whole oceans of heart-aches, and passions as fierce as the fabled fires of perdition, if, indeed, oceans could be measured with a tin laddle, could be prevented every year in the parlor, the family room, at the breakfast table, the bank, the manufactory, if one single proper, practicable and rational rule could be observed all over the face of the globe for one single day. Never find fault with anybody, never blame anybody, never scold anybody, in the presence of a third person. If I can induce any considerable number of persons to put into practice this rule, from the instant, to be continued to the end of life, I will have lived to greater purpose than all the Alexanders and Cæsars and Napoleons of past ages. If one single human being—a father or a mother—should make and carry out such a resolutions, my life would not have been a useless one. I shall go to my bed every night, and down into my grave when all my nights are ended, the happier at the thought that some little child's feelings have not been hurt; some husband, some wife, some worthy servant, has been made happier than if I had never lived. If you must blame anybody, and you want to do it most efficiently, let it be when you two are alone. A nice, manly little youth of fourteen, committed suicide, the other day, in Brooklyn, because, having committed a fault, he feared to face his stern father, whose habit was, in order to make his criticisms more impressive, to have all the members of the family present. He left a little scrawl saying: "Johnny won't trouble you any more. Good-by!"—[Hall's Journal.

Indian Justice.

For some time past the Belmont Indians have been annoyed and threatened by an Indian desperado who, having already killed two or three of their number, boasted that his work was not yet finished, and that he had his victims spotted. Big Dick, as said desperado claimed to be called, has, it seems, been endeavoring to impress on all the other Indians that he was a big capitan—medicine man—and that he was not to be killed by ordinary means, and that he was all same Big Rock, until finally most of his tribe here became mortally afraid of him, and some of the boldest ones took into their heads that he was no good man, and so must get aid of him. Consequently, on Thursday, the 3d inst., they administered summary justice by splitting his head open with an ax. The Indians claim that if he had not been killed, Big Dick or Big Rock, would have made trouble with the whites, and get them all killed by and by. The Belmont Indians have always shown a disposition to do what is right by the whites, and have a very good idea of justice; and when they have a bad egg amongst them they cannot be blamed for administering justice to their own kind, however rude their method may be.—[Belmont Courier, Nov. 12.

A Florida Devil Fish that Almost Baffled Fifteen Men.

A monster devil fish was caught under the New York Steamship wharf on Monday afternoon. He in some way got under and was unable to find his way out from among the piling. Some men at work upon the wharf heard the splashing which he made and fired several shots at him, but as they seemed to have no effect, a harpoon was obtained and the capture effected, fifteen men being required to tow him ashore. The blood which escaped from him colored the water for about ten feet on either side. He was sixteen feet in width and fifteen in length. His fins were about four feet long, and his tail about the same length and not much larger than a person's finger. His mouth opened to the width of two feet and was eighteen inches in length, and projecting from each side of it was a feeler about one foot wide and two feet long, which he rolled up and unrolled at will. So far as could be ascertained, there has been but one of these singular fish caught in this region before this one. Previous to the war one larger than this one was captured near Center street wharf.—[Fernandina (Fla.) Observer.

A New Story About Charley Ross.

Said Charley Ross's father said to a reporter: "When I was up in Canada for the first time, six or seven months ago, working out a clue, one of my friends there told me that Cole's circus had been along not long before with a wax figure of Charley Ross, and that they had distributed circulars setting forth that the boy's parents had offered $5,000 reward for his recovery, that the ladies of Philadelphia would give $3,000 more, and that Cole himself would add $2,000. This circular created a great deal of excitement throughout the country, and hundreds of people flocked in from miles around to see the figure—people who ordinarily would not go near a circus, I tried to get my friend to send me one of the circulars (he said he had one in his house, he thought), but he hasn't done it, and I guess he has overlooked it. Well, at any rate I got another clue that required my presence in Canada, and a few weeks ago I went up again. I had a friend with me, and when we got to a little town in the interior where we were to change cars, we had two hours to wait for the next train. Almost the first thing we saw in the town was a fence posted over with circus bills. I won't tell you the name of the circus, for the owner is a very clever fellow, and I don't want to make him feel bad. On one of the bills was a huge cut of a boy labeled Charley Ross, and the small bills advertised wax figures of Charley Ross and the whole Ross family. Of course I was interested at once, and proposed that we should go down and see it, though I hadn't been inside a circus tent for eighteen years before. When we got to the circus, and bought our tickets, the first thing we saw in the menagerie tent was a big cage divided into two parts. In the first part, nearest the entrance, was a woebegone-looking family, labeled 'The Intemperance Family.' The other part was labeled 'The Ross Family.' A beautiful little boy, in wax, stood on the top of a small round table. He was about the size of Charley, but didn't look anything at all like him. His features were entirely too sharp, for Charley had a full round face. Mrs. Ross, who sat in the background, was gorgeously dressed in the very latest fashion; but she wore a bright green dress, and the real Mrs. Ross hasn't worn anything but black for a very long time. They had me standing there, just behind Charley, finely dressed but nothing like me at all. The figure had a large moustache and no beard, when you can see that I have no moustache at all, but a full beard. Besides these, they had a number of children seated on stools, and the only figure that looked anything like any of us was a little girl that really looked like my little girl. My friend and I looked at it a while very much amused, and then we agreed to listen to the comments that were made. So he stood at one end of the cage and I at the other, and we listened. But I am not going to tell you what we heard said. There was a crowd in front of the cage all the time—ten times as many persons as there were by any of the other cages. After we got tired of this, we started to find the agent of the circus. He was in a little tent alongside, and we went in. I asked him whether that was a good figure of Charley Ross he had there. 'Oh, yes,' he replied; 'it's taken from life.' I asked him a good many more questions about it; and while we were talking I happened to hear the proprietor's name mentioned behind me, so I turned around and asked him whether his figure was an exact representation of Charley Ross.

"Oh, yes," he answered, "I had that made under my own supervision, and I know that it's perfect."

"Where did you get the picture of the boy?" I asked him.

"Oh, I got it from his father myself," he replied, without any hesitation. "I'm very intimate with the Ross family—go to their house every time I visit Philadelphia. Those are exact likenesses of the whole family." And he gave me an excellent reason for having been at my house, which was very plausible, but then I knew he had never been there.

"I knew the family so well," he continued, "that I've offered $2,000 reward for the return of the boy on my own account, and I'll pay it, too, every cent of it."

"I talked with him for nearly half an hour," Mr. Ross went on, "asking him all sorts of questions, and he gave me very plausible answers to all of them. All the time I could hardly keep from laughing in his face; and after a while, in spite of the winks my friend gave me to keep quiet, I asked him whether he thought, I looked anything like the figure of Mr. Ross."

"Oh, no," said he, "you don't look anything like him at all. Why, have you ever been mistaken for him?"

"Yes," I told him; "I have been taken for him very often. I am Charley Ross's father."

"Well, sir,' Mr. Ross continued, laughing quietly, "he was the worst taken down man I ever saw in my life. He stood there for two or three minutes and couldn't say a word. After a while he put his hips, and said:'

"Good Lord, Mr. Ross—you don't say so!"

"Then, after a while, he took hold of both of my hands, and held on to them warmly. 'You don't tell me you're the father of that boy? Well, well, well. I'm glad to see you, and I mean it, every word of it, about that $2,000 reward, and nothing would please me better than to have a chance to pay it. But I really did meet you once, Mr. Ross. I was introduced to you in the Mayor's office in Philadelphia.' And I rather think he was," Mr. Ross added parenthetically.

"Well, for some time he was so confused he didn't know what to say. But, to relieve him, I asked him to tell me candidly, where he got that figure of Charley."

"Why, I sent my son down to your store in Philadelphia," he replied, "and he got it of you."

"I told him I guessed not, and he called his son up. The boy acknowledged that he had gone to the store and asked my brother for one of Charley's photographs, but that my brother had refused to give it, and he bought one outside. Then I asked him where he got the rest of the family."

"Well," said he, "as you're Mr. Ross, I won't mind telling you, but I wouldn't tell anybody else. You see, we used to have a temperate family and an intemperate family. So we let the intemperate family stand, and just changed the label of the other from 'The Temperance Family' to 'The Ross Family,' and put the figure of Charley in front. That's the way we fixed it."

"I was a little taken back myself at this, but the man evidently sympathized deeply with me, and at the same time he had an eye open to business; for, as I was leaving him, he said: 'Now, Mr. Ross, when that boy's found, I want you to let me have him to exhibit. He'll draw better than anything else that I can get, and I'll give you a thousand dollars a week for him for thirty weeks.'"

"I told him," said Mr. Ross, "that I would rather see the boy before I made any bargain, and that even then I guessed he wouldn't ever make an attraction in a circus."

What an Old Man Has Seen.

[From The Cheshire Republican.]

I have seen a young man sell a good farm, turn merchant and die in an insane sylum.

I have seen a farmer travel about so much that there was nothing at home worth looking after.

I have seen a man spend more money in folly than would support his family in comfort and independence.

I have seen a young girl marry a man of dissolute and idle habits and repent of it as long as she lived.

I have seen a man depart from truth where candor and veracity would have served him to much better purpose.

I have seen the extravagance and folly of children bring their parents to poverty and want, and themselves to disgrace.

I have seen a prudent and industrious wife retrieve the fortunes of a family when her husband pulled at the other end of the rope.

I have seen a young man who despised the counsels of the wise, and advice of the good, and his career end in poverty and wretchedness.

I have seen a young man refuse to do anything that came to hand, refuse honest work because hard, and loll about in idleness, eating the bread of honest industry, too lazy to work and too proud to ask for it. I have seen such a man come to want, cast off by friends who were industrious and who hated idleness, and be driven about as a ship without a rudder.

I have seen young men live with and upon their parents, who were old and had to work to maintain themselves, seen them laboring and toiling to maintain these idle children, and these seemed to take no note about the additional labor which they heaped upon the old people. I have seen such young men disgraced in the eyes of the public, and their future clouded by it. Let the young work and do what their hands find to do.

Other Vessels Wrecked on the Same Route.

The route between San Francisco and Victoria has been an ill-fated one. The Pacific makes the fifth steamer that has been wrecked while making the voyage between the two ports within the last fifteen years. Two of them—that of the Pacific Mail steamer Northerner, the first on the list, and the Brother Jonathan—were attended with almost as great a loss of life as the Pacific. But in each case the number of survivors to tell the harrowing details of the catastrophe were much greater than in the case of the vessel whose calamitous ending has so recently taken place. There is a singular sameness about the manner in which all of the vessels have been wrecked.

—A harder subject to deal with than even an old deck of cards is a man who won't advertise.

—A Virginia City man is as mad as a wolf because he paid a butcher bill of thirteen dollars the day before the big fire.

—A little boy in Springfield, after his customary evening prayer, a night or two ago, continued: "And bless mamma, and Jenny, and Uncle Benny," adding, after a moment's pause, the explanatory remarks, "his name is Hankins."

—Victor Hugo takes a drive every evening, on the top of an omnibus or a tramway. It is the habit of the poet, on fine summer evenings to visit the crowded portions of the city, and gaze upon the busy and lively throng whose cause he has so often upheld in the "Miserables," "Claude Guéux," and so many others of his works.

THE THIRD TERM MOVEMENT

The Washington Chronicle boldly announces its determination to support Grant for a third term; says the Republican party will be compelled to take him or suffer defeat. The school question and anti-Catholicism, to be touched up in the annual message, are foreshadowed as two of the most important issues in the Presidential race; are of such importance no true Republican or American citizen can afford to ignore them, and permit a Democrat to be elected, and thereby give those dangerous isms the status they hope for, and will thus be assured of. It says the Republican party are no longer affrighted at the absurd cry of Cæsarism, are looking to Grant as confidently as they have ever regarded him. It is said the plans outlined by The Chronicle are matured, and with the knowledge and consent of the President. Col. Moseby, of guerrilla fame, is at the head of the organization to carry the South in favor of the third term. Many leading Republicans, says a late Wasington despatch, say that Grant is the only man who can save the party, and that if the party is not saved ruin will stalk through the land.

Speaking as individuals, not as a newspaper, we are Repnblican, ever have been, expect ever to be, and cannot divest ourselves of the conviction that if the Republican party is not "saved" ruin, or something akin to it, "will stalk through the land." But notwithstanding all that, notwithstanding that we believe that Grant as President deserves well, very well, of his country, yet he does not deserve a third term as President of these United States. It is an innovation too dangerous to be countenanced, unless we wish to educate ourselves into the belief that a lifeterm, and an eventual absolute dictatorship, is the only chance for our great Republic. We do not believe that Grant is the only man to save either the party or the country.

Buried.

[From The Gold Hill News, Nov. 17.]

At last the disgraceful wrangle over the burial of Mons. Guibord, at Montreal, Canada, is ended. The trouble over the mortal remains of this man has been published throughout Christendom, and many who have been taught to believe that Christianity is a religion of love, not of hate, have marveled at that supreme exhibition of intolerance which refused interment in a spot of mother earth, to one of her children, when that spot had been purchased and is owned by his relatives. If the spirit of Christ rules churches, his teachings govern their actions, how shall the merciful and compassionate doctrines be preached be reconciled with the conduct of his assumed followers in this Guibord case? Are church regulations or church laws right, when they depart from justice and become instruments of oppression by denying the natural right of every human being to property legally acquired or decent burial in a spot owned by his kindred. But Guibord is at last buried, and this latest specimen of mediæval intolerance becomes part of history. Yesterday his remains, guarded by a heavy force of police and military, were taken from the vault, wherein they were temporarily laid, and carried to the burial place owned by his family. Here, still guarded, the ceremonies were performed, the body deposited in its grave, which was afterward filled with a mixture of clay and cement. To prevent disinterment by human hyenas, who would not let a dead man rest in his grave, a guard was stationed over it until the cement shall harden. What a commentary upon the civilization, the enlightenment, the humanity of this boasted nineteenth century! Even the Saviour of Mankind, reviled, persecuted and crucified by those who denied his mission and believed him an impostor, was properly entombed, and his followers permitted to watch over his sepulcher. Yet to bury a man in this age of thought and advancement, and to secure his remains from disentombment, a guard of police and military is required.

The Great Race.

The interest in the great pending horse race has never been equaled in this State, nor has an equal number of evenly matched high flyers ever been pitted against each other at one time before in the United States. The purse—$30,000—is no trifle of itself yet it will be but a drop in the bucket to the total of side bets that will be involved. Notwithstanding the generally depressed financial condition of the people, every one nearly, so the papers say on the other side, have money to bet on the race and time to go and see it. Thousands went to San Francisco for this purpose on the appointed day, last Saurday, but had to go home disappointed, as the weather was so bad the race had to be postponed. It is not yet certain when it will take place. It is quite possible the Sacramento or some other dry track will yet be selected.

FOR A CHANGE IN THE FENCE LAW.

A strong effort will be made in the Legislature this Winter, to induce a repeal of the present stock law and the re-enactment of the time law in force two years ago. That law, which gave stock free range for five months out of the twelve. and perfect protection to growing crops through the remaining seven, was in our opinion, the fairest and best for all interests that could possibly be devised. The present law which forbids a free range to stock the whole year through, is better doubtless for a few individuals who have pasture lands to let to stockmen, but for the mass of the farmers and for the whole tax paying interest, it is positively injurious. We believe obtainable statistics for the past year, which was the first under this law, will prove even this early that this county at large is materially loser in the loss of taxable property occasioned by this law, while on many individuals, particularly farmers who are likewise stock raisers to a limited extent, it has entailed considerable loss and hardship with nothing to compensate it, beyond what the previous law afforded. It has been frequently urged againt the time law, as we may call it, that the damage to fences and grounds inflicted by the herds of free running stock during the Winter, involved losses to farmers quite as great as if the stock had free range the year through, for then they would be compelled to prepare for such inroads. In individual and exceptionable cases such losses may be considerable, but as a total they cannot near equal the general loss entailed by driving out of the hands of small owners who cannot afford to herd, and finally from the county entirely, such a vast amount of stock in the aggregate. At the same time the sum total of loss occasioned by so much good feed going to waste, as it must in many places where stock cannot be permitted to range or be herded during the Winter, when such feed is of the greatest value will far out balance the possible damages to grounds and fences, which latter by the way, might as well not exist if they too, have to protected by law. The two interests—stock raising and crop raising—must always be in some degree antagonist, yet at the same time, the latter can never be a high success in a country like this except in judicious conjunction with the former. Save in the impracticable contingency of compelling the one interest to give way wholly to the other, which would be to drive all stock away. Mutual hardships must to some extent be entailed on both, but in cash value the advantages of the combined system of farming always has been and always will be great enough to altogether overshadow such little hardships; that is to say, when the crop interest is given its entire season to develop undisturbed, while the other has a similar though a less privilege as a whole during that season when no general crop can be exposed or damaged, the full fruits of the earth can be utilized greatly to the general advantage and but rarely to the material disadvantage of even individuals.

A Large Fund Recovered.

The Catholic Church of California has recently had decreed to it by Sir Edward Thorton, acting as umpire between it, represented by Bishops Amat and Alemany on one side and the Republic of Mexico on the other, the sum of $904,700 79, known as the "Pious Fund." This fund was the gift of various persons made a hundred years ago for the purpose of founding and maintaining Roman Catholic missionaries in California for the conversion of the heathen. In 1842 Santa Anna decreed that the fund should be incorporated into the National Treasury, the Government guaranteeing that interest on it at the rate of six per cent. per annum should be paid to the missions. This obligation has not been met, and the two bishops claiming to be the representatives of the former trustees have made the demand against Mexico for the origininal sum and interest up to the date of the acquisition of California by the United States. This has been in controversy for many years and was recently argued before Sir Edward Thornton, the British Minister at Washington, who acted as umpire, and he has decided in favor of the church as stated, allowing $904,700 79 in Mexican gold dollars, but without the interest. Ex-Senator Casserly argued the case for the Catholic Church.

General.

The late storm of wind and rain appears to have reached all parts of the State from San Diego northward. While no damage worthy of mention accrued from the high wiuds, the benefit from the copious rains in the way of starting winter feed for stock, and the plows for another crop is immense. It is "speed the plow" now everywhere in the lately parched valleys on the other side.

IMPORTANT NEWS.

Some rather startling news comes all at once regarding Mexico. It seems that the United States is to become the owner of a very large and valable part of that country. As we learn by a dispatch in The Chronicle of the 21st, "the United Statrs of America, represented by President Grant, agrees to assume the financial responsibilltes of Mexico to American citizens, and pay all the awards in full. In consideration of this obligatlon of the United States the Republic of Mexico, represented by President Don Sebastian Lerdo de Tejado, covenants and agrees to cede to the United States the whole of Lower California, the entire State of Sonora which includes the magnificent seaport of Guaymas, the whole State of Chihuahua and parts of the States of Sinaloa, Durango and Coahuila."

The trade has been fully arranged as regards details and consummated as a whole so far as the two Presidents and their respective Cabinets can do it. It yet remains to be ratified by the Senates of the two countries. No objection is anticipated from either of those bodies, but it is quite likely to produce a new revolution in Mexico, and possibly a war against the United States. It is quite sure there will be much indignation manifested by the Mexican people against the cession, but this is to be suppressed by force of arms if circumstances demand such violent measures. And in this we have an explanation of those warlike preparations on the part of our Government, which caused so much mystification a few weeks ago. That is why those iron clads at Vallejo were ordered rebuilt in such a hurry, and also why Commodore Rodgers was required at Washington; that is, to receive personal instructions about concentrating his fleet on the Mexican coast ready to suppress any hostile demonstration likely to occur when the time for taking possession of the new territory arrives.

The amount of the indebtedness of Mexico to citizens of the United States approximates $50,000,000, as determined by the Claims Commission, of which Sir Edward Thornton is the head. In the present depleted condition of the Mexican Treasury the only possible way of liquidating the debt was by this extensive sale of land, with which object in view negotiations have been quietly going on between the two Presidents for we do not know how long. It is thought the Mexican populace will take this wholesale dismemberment of their fair Republic so much to heart, notwithstanding their utter inability to control those turbulent, revolutionary States, they will depose if not murder Leredo, if in their power to do either. The Mexican Senate, if so disposed, will hardly dare refuse to ratify the trade, what with Leredo's bayonets at home, and United States iron clads at their ports ready to enforce the payment of this fearful bill.

As a matter of course some big jobs are all fixed ready to be sprung. At the head comes one by Cameron, Butler, Conkling and other insiders with claims bought up in anticipation at a few cents on the dollar, in the aggregate of perhaps $20,000,000. And now hordes of landsharks begin to wiggle out their lairs, ready to make those honest Mexican Governors and such, a present of a few dollars as a retiring fund, if they will only be kind enough to officially certify that these josiahs are the legal grantees of many leagues of lands. In fact hundreds of thousands of acres are already in the hands of the sharks ready for patenting the moment the enforced trade is ratified.

And what a Paradise will be opened for broken down politicians, what an elysium for Government appointees, "unfortunate" at home, but who yet have claims that cannot be ignored! Just imagine the destinies of our nationality placed, as it is, or is to be, in the hands of the intelligent, patriotic peon of Mexico, and the equally well informed black citizen of the South, these again subject to the will and purchase of the high toned class of politicians who love to court the favor of such patriotic voters—figure on this cheering prospect mixed with the present flattering outlook for Presidential life terms, and tell us how long it can be before the ponderous American Republic falls to pieces of its own weight—and corruption! This Centennial ought to be made much of for fear the mixture of so many incongruous elements may render the next impossible.

In this trade the United States are making a splendid bargain as regards the money value of the territory thus acquired. It will be of immense advantage in various ways to our State. It cannot possibly be a detriment to the newly acquired States themselves. But, on the whole, we believe it will prove a national misfortune in the end. Of all things, the United States stands the least in need of territory, particularly with such a population.

Hard Times East.

The news from the East indicates a great depression in trades and affairs in general. Many of the leading manufacteries have closed or are running on half time, and the price of domestic goods are ruinously low. Real estate has depreciated from 25 to 75 per cent during the last two years and is still declining. Numerous instances are related where, in the city of New York, business men have found themselves in an awful quandary. They had to choose between sacrificing their real estate or their business. Either the real estate had to be sold to sustain the business or the business must be sold that the real estate might be held. An observing Californian, who traveled all through the Northern, Middle and the Western States, and visited the principal cities, states that the people of this State have yet to learn what constitutes depression. He sees more prosperity here than any point he visited in his travels. The liviest city the other side of the Rocky Mountains, according to his idea, is St. Louis. Illustrative of the depression in New England is the following telegram:

FALL RIVER (Mass), November 16.—Owing to the falling off of the price of prints of nearly one per cent, per yard since September 5th, the manufacturers of this city have appointed a Commission to visit England to make arrangements for the export of Fall River fabrics to that country. At a meeting to-day, another reduction of ten per cent. in wages was voted for the first Monday in December, reaching all classes, from superintendents to operatives generally.—[Stock Report, Nov. 19.

"I'll Kill You" in Spanish.

The parties mentioned in this item from The Alta of the 20th were formerly residents of Panamint, later of Darwin:

James N. Rennie was arraigned before Judge Louderback, yesterday afternoon, on a proceeding instituted for the purpose of putting him under bonds to keep the peace. The complaining and principal witness is Lauretta Rennie, wife of the accused, and plaintiff in a divorce suit pending in one of our District Courts. She testified that her husband threatened her life last Thursday, saying he would have her heart, or cut away her nose, or disfigure her forever in some way, and drew a pistol on her, and that she is afraid of her life, and has been obliged to call an officer for protection. These people are quite young, and it appears to be a fine case of incompatibility. Georgiana Hurst, a cook, was called for the prosecution, and testified that she heard threats to kill in both Spanish and English.

"Ah!" said the defendant's attorney, "Can you tell us the meaning of 'I'll kill you,' in Spanish?"

"What, sir?" asked the witness.

"I mean, what is the Spanish word for the idea, 'I'll kill you?'"

The witness said she could recognize the word when she heard it, but could not pronounce it. After several attempts, and putting her lips in different positions, like a woman puckering for an effort to whistle, she burst out in a laugh, accompaned by the expletive "Tomatoes," as the nearest she could come to Spanish for "I'll kill you."

"Tomatoes is good," said the attorney.

"If cooked," added the witness, and the further hearing was continued until Thursday. The Judge had an unusual job, in the shape of reducing the testimony to writing, which is required by law in this class of cases.

That Libel Suit.

In the libel suit brought by the proprietors of The Bulletin against the proprietors of The Alta, Judge Morrison has decided that the attempt of the plaintiffs to introduce extraneous matter relating to the management of the Bank of California is inadmissible, and the case must be tried on its merits, as indicated by the nature of the libel complained of. Judge Morrison holds that The Alta's article was sufficiently libelous to suit the most exacting plaintiff, and that there can be no reason for bringing in outside testimony to prove it so. As the counsel for the plaintiffs has stated in Court that the action was brought in order to get this particular testimony before the public, it would seem that the main purpose of its origination had failed, and that very little could be gained by pressing the matter. The proposal to rake up the conduct of the Bank of California, and investigate its past history, under the pretense of defending the publishers of The Bulletin, was from the first such an one as very few persons can have thought defensible, though perhaps if the matter had been introduced less offensively, and had been intrusted to a respectable and capable lawyer, the plaintiffs might have succeeded in getting in evidence a good deal more than would have been agreeable in some quarters, without exposing themselves to a decided snub. Some day the history of the failure of the Bank of California will be written without respect of persons, however, and then the public will be somewhat surprised to find that the late William Ralston's most intimate enemies were not those who bore that reputation in the street, or whose names were most frequently coupled in mens' mouths with the story of his downfall.—[Sacramento Record Union.

Fire in the Coal Camps.

We are informed by parties from the principal coal camps in the Coso range, about ten miles southwest from town, that on last Saturday night, during the prevalence of the heavy nor'wester, two coal pits belonging to Rafael Rivas broke forth into a blaze, and in the absence of sufficient force to heap earth upon the numerous vent holes, the fire consumed about $1,000 worth of charcoal, and other property such as aparejos, and other property laying around the pits. The high wind carried the fire to the woods and rapidly spread over the divide to Morrison's camp, where it destroyed from $500 to $600 worth of wood and charcoal. The fire made a very bright light, that was plainly seen from town.—[Coso Mining News, Nov. 10.

Sharp Practice Frustrated.

[From The S. F. Bulletin, Nov. 17th.]

Crittenden Thornton, a young man of the legal profession, appeared in the Police Court to-day to answer charges of grand larceny and assault and battery on an officer of the law. These charges grew out of a very complicated litigation over stock in the Coso Mining Company, in which half a dozen persons and as many lawyers were involved. In the first instance two citizens named Gorman and Sevenoaks had been contesting the issue tenaciously without result. Sevenoaks, the defendant in the suit, then transfered his interest to one Hamilton, who enterred into negotiations with plaintiff and succeeded in obtaining terms of settlement. Hamilton agreed to hand over 1,000 shares of the Coso stock to Gorman for the final adjustment of the difficulty. Hamilton then got out an attachment on the stock, secured the assistance of John W. Holmes, a Deputy Sheriff, who attended him incognito, and when all was arranged for a capital piece of trickery, Thornton, acting as Gorman's attorney, was invited to Hamilton's office to exchange papers and receive the stock. Hamilton drew the scrip from his pocket and extended it toward Thornton, with the remark that this stock is to be handed over to Gorman as his property, in settlement of the litigation in question. Thornton replied that he understood such to be the design. Simultaneously with this admission Thornton and the Deputy Sheriff made a grab for the stock, but the former got the inside clutch, and after a rough-and-tumble scuffle with the officer he succeeded in holding possession, and subsequently conveyed the stock to the custody of Judge Garber. On this transaction were based the charges against Thornton which occupied the attention of the Police Court After hearing all the circumstances, Judge Louderback decided that Holmes had acted unwarrantably, not having made his official authority known, or exhibited any attachment when he attempted to seize the stock, and it therefore occurred to his mind that Thornton had acted in the case as any citizen had a right to act when beset by tricksters. The charges against Thornton were dismissed, and the next move in order will be a suit by that gentleman for false imprisonment.

The Storm.

To-day Columbus has been visited by the heaviest wind storm ever known to have passed over this section. It commenced blowing about noon, and the frequent gusts increased in violence until about 3 o'clock, when the full force of the gale was upon us. And now, at 7 A. M it is recovering its violence and the type cases shake like leaves. Among the disasters thus far the most prominent are: Eldred's blacksmith and wagon shop, a wooden building about 60x100 is blown toward the street at the top about three feet; the chimneys of both forges are destroyed, and the interior presents a sadly demoralized appearance. A portion of the front concrete wall of Brazzanovich's lodging house is blown down. The roof is blown off a portion of Spencer's grain warehouse. The sign and a portion of the adobe front of Scott's livery stable are gone. Out-buildings and well-houses roll about in splendid confusion, and disorder and confusion are supreme.—[Borax Miner, Nov. 13.

STATEMENT OF MRS. McGAN AGAINST JAMES MANNING.

I, MRS. McGAN, WENT TO PANAMINT TO see to our town lots, and make some money at washing. I saw Manning in Darwin, and he advised me to go with him in the express wagon, as the same would be cheaper to Panamint. He brought me to a house of ill fame, and introduced me to three women of bad character as decent women; I wanted him to show me my husband's cabin, but he would not. He said it was not fit to live in, but he wanted to make a bad woman out of me. He had stood god-father to my child, and I thought him my best friend. I told him to keep away from my place as I wanted to live a respectable woman, but he would not as he was a drunken loafer. He came to my house at 10 o'clock at night. I told him to go home as I was sick and felt bad, but he caught me and overcame me by main force. I thought he would trouble me no more, but he came to my house in my husband's absence, and caught me by the neck and choked me. He asked was my husband in? I told him it was a good thing for him he was not. And he asked me for a drink of water, and I gave him a pan of scalding water on the hoe, and the hot water had a good effect on him, for he run and left his hat. He cheated me out of five weeks board and $4 of loaned money. I give my curse and my childrens' curse on my knees, and the curse of God, on James Manning now and forever. He went on to his bended knees, and on a Catholic book, took his oath that he had never known me any more than the infant unborn. He wanted me to leave my husband, steal his horses and go with him to Arizona. BRIDGET McGAN.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The Broder-Moffatt Furnace.

Mr. Connelly, just over from Pine Mountain, informs us that the entire material connected with the Broder furnace is now on the grouad, at its new location at Log Springs, to which point ores from the Sylvania mines, two miles distant, are to be brought for reduction. The trouble at Pine Mountain was, not so much if at all, the lack of rich ores, but simply because it was found impossible to smelt them. It was thought a judicious mixture with the easily smelted ores from Sylvania would render it possible to make them "run," and with this object in view, quantities of the latter were hauled over and put through, but with very indifferent success as regards the reduction of the Pine Mountain ores. We have been told that when the furnace was running beautifully with the Sylvania ore a single shovel full of the other thrown in would have such a "stiffening" effect as to be plainly noticeable, while anything like a half charge would freeze the flow instantly. Notwithstanding all this though quite a quantity of bullion was produced, but not enough to justify further efforts, so as was anticipated some time ago, the only thing to do was to remove to Sylvania, which has been done, and where, we sincerely hope and expect, it will make a grand financial success for its plucky and truly energetic owners. For further particulars of this district we refer our readers to our Deep Spring letter in another column.

Ores Shipped.

Mr. Holt, who has been superintending prospecting work on the Consolidated Virginia mine on Kearsarge Mountain, has for the last month or two done a good deal in the same way on the Jimmy Sharp mines located on the north side, nearer the summit of the same mountain. From these mines he has shipped some twenty tons of high grade ore; and although he does not consider the mines at all developed, yet he has high hopes that next season, they will be the cause of pretty lively times in this vicinity. These mines are up ten or eleven thousand feet high, and being on the north side of the mountain, ice freezes every night the Summer through, while during the Fall and Winter months the snow drifts over most fearfully, and of course, presents a serious obstacle during these seasons, to surface work of every description. We have been told heretofore that these mines, though not of great width yield an abundance of ores of the very richest quality, and therefore we presume Mr. Holt has made quite a financial success in his prospecting, even though the ores have to be sent to San Francisco at so much expense for reduction.

The New Coso Company.

A short time since it was rumored, and we believe was a fact that the New Coso Mining Company at Darwin had stopped their furnace, and it was also stated, had suspended payment, notwithstanding that their mines, the Lucky Jim and Christmas Gift, were showing splendidly. It was said that some "skulduggery" was going on among the stock holders down at the Bay, and that that was the cause of the trouble. It will be seen there was some grounds for the latter belief after reading the extract from The Bulletin headed "Some Sharp Practice Frustrated," to be found in this issue, but the cause of the temporary stoppage of the furnace was not on account of these troubles nor for the lack of ore, but because the ore lately taken out of these mines, and now piled up to the amount of about 1,000 tons, is milling, not smelting ore proper, and has to be largely mixed with ores from other mines, not the property of this company. A change has taken place in the superintendency, if we are informed correctly, the furnace is again in full blast, and everything is lovely,

Suicide.

Last week it was rumored here that a terrible fight had takea place in Darwin in which one man was fatally shot and others wounded. We could get no straight story about it, therefore passed it without note. Now it turnes out as we learn from The Coso News, also from a private letter elsewhere given, that a man was shot and killed, but it was a clear case suicide, besides not one to excite a great deal of commiseration, since it was the act af a stout young man who thought it best to quit this world in that manner rather than to go to work to relieve a little pecuniary misfortune. His name was E. P. Ball, aged 28, a native of Canada. Having lately lost some $4,000, all the money he had, being the proceeds of a mining sale, he retired to a hay yard some time on Thursday of last week, and placing a pistol to his temple, effectually cured himself of all regrets about his ill luck.

From Darwin.

Jas. Wales, from Darwin, paid us a little visit the other day, and he says their town out there is growing at a wonderful rate. Of the mines in general, he says he has not heard of a single one upon which work is being prosecuted but is developing in decidedly the most encouraging manner. However, we will not undertake any specifications just now, except to say that it will be but a short time when two more furnaces, or four in all, will be in full blast, and the fine prospects of the place, now to some extent merely prospective, will then become obvious realities susceptible of a general coin value.

The Mails.

The late storms has interfered somewhat with travel and mails on the northern route, the snow being very deep on the "Race Track," or Esmeralda Mountain, but no inconvenience worth speaking about has ensued, that we are aware of. But we are thereby reminded that some of our subscribers at Darwin have complained to us that they do not receive their INDEPENDENT. We think it altogether likely the cause of that trouble is that parties who have no right to do so, take the paper from the Darwin office. The reason for this belief is that the total subscription for that place is put up in one solid package, so that if any reach it all must. Except when subscribers have postoffice boxes, their paper is left on the counter perhaps, so that each subscriber can look over the list for himself, and in that way it no doubt sometimes happens that a "friend" helps himself now and then. We do not know that that is the way of it at Darwin, but if so, it is nothing more than is usual at nearly all small or new offices not properly fitted up, and cannot well be helped. And this reminds us of another instance of the uncertainties of the mails—not females. We received yesterday a small package, plainly addressed, from San Francisco, which has been en route since the 16th of last October, say a month and a half which is remarkable good time for such a long route, though passengers, generally speaking, go over it in two days and a half without much inconvenience or hurry.

Epidemic.

Every portion of the earth has to have its epidemic visitations of some sort. Elsewhere in this State lately it has been storms, earthquakes, fires, epizooty, etc. Here, as the most noticeable and sweeping, considering the limited number of our population liable to such effects, it has been of the fever matrimonial, which has already carried off some of our goodest and best of both sexes, ages and conditions and, if rumor speaks true, the end is not yet. A great many people know how this disorder affects its victims, therefore a description is unnecessary, nor is it worth while to say that, no matter how mild the original attack, the sequences are too often appalling—"stormy" and "squally" to the last degree. No absolute protection against the inroads of this contagion (when it culminates at all, it always affects more than one, and is therefore clearly contagious) has ever been discovered and its cure is a work of years; innoculation is no guarantee against a second attack where the subject is in the least naturally so predisposed, or subjected to favorable exposure. So lamentations are useless, even from those who thought they had it, but didn't.

Inyo County Jockey Club.

This is the name decided upon by a number of our substatial as well as sporting citizens who have formed an association for the purpose of conducting legitimate horse racing in the county. It is their object to organize permanently with the view of indulging in something more than mere scrub racing now and then. We have undoubtedly as fine blood as can be found anywhere in the interior, and this will be an excellent opportunity for, and is worthy of the attention of horsemen and all lovers of the turf. H. C. Wright, mine host of the Taboose Station, is at work at that place with quite a force of helpers on a new track and will have it completed in a few days and open during the holidays, about which time a purse of $100 will be offered for the best saddle horse that has never actually engaged in a race before. Stable room will be furnished gratis for all horses entered. The entrance fee will probably be about $10. The club will insert their notice next week, concerning the rules etc. adopted.

Somewhat Local.

It has been frequently remarked that Inyo earthquakes, with one notable exception, are always quite limited in area, rarely extending but a few miles in either direction. The same is true in a degree to our wind storms. They had a fearful blow out at Darwin last week, while here it was hardly worthy of notice, and vice versa, it was quite calm there when old Boreas was tearing things at such a rate in Round Valley as described in our Round Valley letter. That same blow, here at an intermediate point, was not at all up to the standard of our best zephyrs which, at rare intervals came roaring down Kearsage canyon for the especial airing of the high morality in this particular place, leaving sinners elsewhere undisturbed.

Acknowledgment.

We are indebted to The Coast Review for a large prospective map in colors of Virginia City, showing the burnt district, location of all the prominent buildings and points in the entire city. Altogether it is the most correct and best map of that city we have yet seen. Mr. Coast Review will please accept our thanks.

Departures.

We regret to have to announce the departure of two families this week, from our midst, particularly as our town is not large enough to well spare any of that class of its inhabitants. These were J. B. Swearengen and M. S. Clark with their families, the former for Bishop and the latter for Darwin where they expect to respectively locate.

Emphasized Some.

A Mahala and a cow got to eyeing each other on the street the other day, but why they did so we don't know. The cow wouldn't stand it long though, so to relieve her feelings, made a dive at said Mahala—knocking her down and trampling upon her, but without serious damage save in the matter of the mixture of English and Indian cuss words she used when she got time to express herself.

Letter from Deep Springs.

DEEP SPRINGS, CAL., Nov. 9.

MESSRS. EDS:—Not a word is said of the country east of the Inyo range. We find Messrs. Broder & Moffat moving their smelting furnace to Log Spring two miles up the canyon from Pidgeon Springs, they having bought the Uncle Sam mine which, they seem to think prospects sufficiently well to warrant them in moving there—the fact is the mine looks well—it is about two miles from the mine to where the furnace will be built. They expect to have it running in thirty days. In all probability the bullion as it can be done for about $20 per ton less than via Owens Valley.

WILL BE SHIPPED NORTH

The Indians are somewhat boisterous about an Independence white man burning up all of their pine nuts that they had gathered for the Winter. It would seem that an investigation should be had either by the civil or military authorities, as it is not just that their Winter supplies should be destroyed. The Indians and, perhaps, several white men, and for the sake of the few living on this side of the mountain this should be attended to and the guilty party brought to justice.

WHERE PIPER'S RANCH IS.

County Surveyor Thompson, of Mono county, put in an appearance, and declared that Piper's Ranch is about two miles north of the line dividing Mono and Inyo counties.

Up at Lida air castleing is all the rage. There are two gentlemen from San Francisco, Messrs. Murray and Davis up there now. They are looking about and have seen all the mines. It is not known to a certainty what they mean to do or how long they will stay. They are interviewed everyday, but unfortunately for the interviewers, they will not divulge their business, but should they conclude to do anything by way of developing any of the mines of Lida, and Messrs. Broder & Moffat operate only twelve miles from there it and it seems reasonable taking the production of bullion at Lida in former years that all that is wanted is capital to develop the mines to a greater depth than former operators were able to do. There are also some mines on the Slate range and in Tule Canyon that have produced good ore once in considerable quantities, but the parties are not able to develop them.

WILL MAKE TIMES LIVELY,

The California part of Sylvania District is LOOKING FINE.

Kincaid has his furnace ready to start. The Marotte Brothers will soon have one up, and if the weather is not too severe will make bullion. It is reported that Silver Peak will be worked this Winter. Palmetto might have started up but some one stole the mill and there is nothing to start up. But the company have applied for a patent for the ground it stood on, also for two mines, the Silver Champion and Kentucky lodes. There is hardly a doubt but that Inyo and Mono counties, California, and Esmeralda county, Nevada, are the richest mineral counties in the two States, after excepting Storey county, Nevada; but nothing except railroad communications with the great metropolis will prove the extent of the mineral wealth of these counties.

NAX.

Darwin Letter.

A private letter from Darwin, dated on the 20th, among other things says: "Times here are extremely dull just now; everybody is looking for somebody in the hope that somebody will come and give everybody a show. There are plenty of men here out of work now, but that will not be so long. The New Coso furnace has started up again, but on the average that don't make much difference. The Defiance has so much ore on the dumps they can't pile up any more, and had to reduce their force. The Defiance and Bella Union furnaces progress slowly toward completion, on account of the non-arrival of the machinery. It is useless to fix a day when they will be ready to start; it will not be long though. The Cuervo Company is expecting somebody, too, and soon. Darwin as a mining district is certainly one of the very best prospects in California, but capitalists must not expect impossibilities. They must give time enough to get a hole in the ground. B. E. Ball (not Fidelio P.), a sort of a Lucky Jim kind of a man from Lookout district, killed himself day before yesterday—got tired of it. Some said "poor fellow;" others, "good enough," etc. I simply say that perhaps for the first time in his life he asserted his born right of "free will," to no man extended during life."

Fine Regalia.

Honor (Military) Lodge I. O. G. T. at the Post, received Thursday morning, direct from New York some three dozen regalias which, in point of beauty and richness is entirely ahead of anything in that line we have yet seen. The cost price in New York was $150. That Lodge has fitted up a fine lodge room in one of the Post buildings, and what with a charter on vellum, cut seal, fine regalia and determined purpose, will take rank with the leading lodges of the State. Though a military lodge, in name and fact, as regards principal membership, its doors are open to welcome citizen membership, and visiting brethern at all times.

Grangers Take Notice.

Patrons of Husbandry in this district are reminded by a call elsewhere in this issue, that the time for the Annual Election of officers is at hand, and are requested to attend the meeting appointed for December 4, in this place.

School to Commence.

Mr. M. Levin will open school for this place next Monday. We are told that Mr. Levin is well qualified to not only teach the usual studies but music also, both vocal and instrumental, and will make the rudements of vocal music a part of the regular school exercises.

The Wind Storm in Round Valley.

[COMMUNICATED.]

MESSRS. Eds:—Saturday morning (Nov. 13) the canyons roared terribly. Old settlers knew what it ment—wind terrific, of course, and such it was. After breakfast, the women were busily engaged gathering under shelter their pails, tin pans and other articles which might take a sudden aerial expedition. Consequently they didn't lose much, except, perhaps, a few castaway dish clothes. The men were not so fortunate, for hay stacks, sheds and fences could not be easily packed into dwelling houses, hence old Boreas had fun and frolic—played smash in general. Mr. Horton, we believe, is the earliest settler of Round Valley, and his opinion should be worth something. He declares this to be the most terrific and the longest winded wind-storm that he ever experienced in this part of the world. The storm lasted from Saturday morning until Monday afternoon. Tuesday, threatening clouds, only, flew, but toevening it puffed again.

THE RESULT.

Most all the hay stacks in the valley have suffered. More than half of some stacks are scattered, and scores of tons of good hay have been lost. Barns were unroofed, corn cribs blown over, sheds wrecked, out houses tossed and tumbled, corrals and fences dilapidated and a general disarrangement of things throughout the valley. Two houses were demo ished, one belonging to D. Olds, the other to Wm. Arcularius. Wind destroyed the former and fire the latter. Arcularius being absent this Summer, his house was occupied by Mr. Kinsey, school teacher. Mr. K. and wife went visiting Saturday morning, leaving a fire slowly burning on the premises. The hurricane soon found it, stirred up the embers which set fire to the building and in a few minutes everything was entirely consumed. Mrs. Shipley (Mr. S being absent), her mother and sisters deserve honorable mention for bravely fighting the fire fiend. The burning house was west of Shipley's, and as the wind was blowing directly from the west his buildings were in great danger. Sparks flew furiously setting fire to the grass, willows and few scattered sage brush. It was fortunate that the grass was sparse between the two houses or else it would have been useless fighting. Water being scarce, sand was the only substitute, which was swiftly shoveled by the women. Subsequently several men helped quench the fire. Had it reached Shipley's, where considerable lumber lies, also corrals, hay stacks and other combustibles, besides a very heavy crop of dry grass in the immediate vicinity, it would have been impossible in such a gale to have retarded its ravages until the flames had stretched to other farms, resulting in a general conflagration.

MORE DAMAGE.

Since penning the above, I learn that Mr. Rowan's and Mr. Sherwin's houses on the hill are demolished—the Sherwin family having moved out that morning. The few houses which were in Long Valley have disappeared and a great many pine trees are prostrated. To make matters worse, a steady rain has set in; rained already two nights and one day. A vast amount of hay and fodder will be spoiled. CROOKS.

Thanksgiving.

Thursday last pursuant to the President's Proclimation was to be a day of Thanksgiving. Though we have quite as much to be thanklul for here in this region as most people, and considerable more than some of them, yet but very few accorded the day any unusual observance, but at night pretty much everybody turned out and had a square dance at the Masonic Hall and supper at Levy's.

Scan. Mag.

A case of scandalum magnatum, or something of that kind, was brought before Justice Schalten, Thursday last, but for lack of definiteness or other defect in the complaint, was dismissed. Something of its character may be inferred by reading a certain advertisement in this issue.

Cheap Enough.

Judge Jos. Schalten, who has recently opened a saloon in the old Headquarters building, now offers those who must indulge an opportunity to do so at lower rates than common.

Grand Ball.

It will be seen that a very fine ball is to come off at Lone Pine next Tuesday evening. See what the "ad" says.

Particulars of the Chaves Raid.

[From The San Bernardino Times, Nov. 18th.]

To Mr. Mowray we are indebted for fuller particulrs of the Chaves robbery, to which we alluded in our last issue:

Mr. Mowray is running an express wagon between this place and Panamint, carrying freight and passengers. It appears from what Chaves said that a rumor had reached him that there was one passenger coming who had $15,000 in his posession, and it was with the design of getting this booty that he made the attack on Willow Springs station. It was on Friday, the 5th inst., that Chaves with his gang took the station. They bound the keeper, Mr. Riley, and laid in wait for Mowray. Mr. M. was delayed for some reason and did not make his usual time, and Chavis' gang kept posession of the station until Monday. In the meantime Mr. Ducrow came along with a four-horse team, and they forced him to lay over, to prevent intelligence reaching Mowray. Two foot travelers and an Indian also came along and were forced to lay over. From one of the foot travelers they took $60 and returned him $6, from the other they took $45 and returned $5, on the Indian they found $15 leaving him nothing. On Monday they left the station, taking Ducrow's horses, and shortly after met Mowray about ten miles south of the station, whom they commanded to stop and throw up his hands. He asked them what they wanted and they told him his money. They told him to get down from the wagon and went through him taking from his person $128 25. Mowray said it was rough on a man to take all he had to which Chavis replied that he was only borrowing it and would return it when he got flush. He returned him then $7 25 with the remark: "I guess I will have to take your team." Mowry said "don't take my horses, boys. They are so poor they'll do you no good." Chaves looked at the horses and said that was so and rode off in the direction of Ivanpah. When Mowray passed Willow Spring station he found it abandoned. Chaves is reported as having been very courteous to Mrs. Riley, paying her for cooking for his gang and treating her with great consideration.

War With Mexico.

Quite a sensation was created by the news that American troops had pursued Mexican marauders across the Rio Grande, had killed seven of them, and as a consequence war was to follow. It was all true enough except that the latest news is to the effect, that Mexico will not go to war but will help kill off the cattle thieves.

—The New York mail says recruits are being taken in that city by secret agents into the service of the Spanish Government, from the most indigent of our foreign population—Italians, Irish, Poles and other European nationalities—at the rate of $100 in gold and the promise of a land grant of fifty acres at the close of the war in Cuba, for the term of one year from the date of being mustered into the army.

—The Spanish officials in Madrid express the belief that peace between Spain and the United States will continue uninterupted.

—A Mr Freeman, of Los Angeles, has been presented with a Boyton suit of marine armor, and has laid a wager that he can swim from the pier of Santa Monica to Santa Catalina Island.

—The town of Gridley, Butte county, possesses a useful man. He is a barber, dentist, doctor, sign-painter and Justice of the Peace, and conducts his business to the satisfaction of every-body.

Disagreeable Habits.

Nearly all the disagreeable habits which people take up come at first from mere accident or want of thought. They might easily be dropped, but they are persisted in until they become second nature. Stop and think before you allow yourself to form them. There are disagreeable habits of body like scowling, winking, twisting the mouth, biting the nails, continual picking at something, twirling a key or fumbling at a chain, drumming with the fingers, screwing and twisting a chair, or whatever you lay your hands on. Don't do any of these things. Learn to sit quietly like a gentleman I was going to say, but I'm afraid even girls fall into such tricks sometimes. There are much worse habits than these, to be sure; but we are speaking only of those little things that are only annoying when persisted in. There are habits of speech also, such as beginning every speech with "you see," or "you know," "now-a," "I don't care," "tell ye what," "tell ye now;" indistinct utterances, sharp nasal tones; avoid them all. Stop and think what you are going to say, then let every word drop from your lips as perfect as a new coin. Take care about your way of sitting and standing and walking. Before you know it you will find that your habits have hardened into a coat of mail that you cannot get rid of without a terrible effort.—[Little Corporal.

Force and Stimulants.

The London Lancet remarks that at the present day our treatment has assumed a character too decidedly stimulant and not quite sufficiently nutritive. Stimulants ought to be regarded as auxiliaries to nutrition more than they are at present. Nutritive material, as milk, meat juice, eggs, and various forms of starch, ought to form a greater matter in the dietary of the sick than stimulants, whether nitrogenized or alcoholic; such materials, when assimilated, give supplies of force. Stimulants may assist in their assimilation, and do so; but in themselves stimulants only furnish limited supplies of force-bearing material. They are, however, a means by which the system may reach some of its physiological reserve fund. Such use may be advantageous or pernicious, according to circumstances; and an ill-regulated or excessive process of stimulants may give results as disastrous as a wise and intelligent resort to stimulants may be beneficial and preservative in its consequences.

For Scarlet Fever.

An eminent physician of Chicago says he cures ninety-nine out of every hundred cases by giving the patient warm lemonade with gum arabic dissolved in it. A cloth wrung out in hot water and laid upon the stomach, should be removed as rapidly as it becomes cold.

—Hops have become very cheap, and beer is going down.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete polume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention,

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

A Peep into the Locomotive Works.

[From The St. Nicholas for December.]

It is only about fifty years since the first locomotive puff'd along the first railway, dragging the first clumsy passenger car. During each of these fifty years more than two thousand miles of rails have been laid, and in England and the United States every day of these fifty years has seen the completion of one locomotive and two passenger cars. Immense workshops are kept busy building locomotives and cars. They are generally near the principal depots of the great railway lines, and I know of no more interesting place where one can spend a part of his day in the depot. Each and every part of a locomotive must be made with the greatest precision and delicacy, and great machines are employed for hammering and cutting and punching and planing the iron into shape. You will find in these railway works, as the English say, or "locomotive works," as they are called in America, immense machines, possessing almost resistless power, yet driving only a steel-pointed instrument not bigger than one's little finger. It seems almost a waste of power to use such a giant to drive so slight a tool. But this delicate chisel digs its way little by little through the hardest of cold iron or steel, and planes it as smooth as ever the carpenter's plane trims wood, and it produces too, shavings of iron as delicate as those of soft pine. Little shears, hardly bigger than a tailor's, cut through iron as easily as through paper; and delicate steel punches drive their way through iron plates. In most of these works you will see also the Nasmyth steam-hammer, a mighty giant in power, but as docile as a lamb under the touch of a master hand. It is an immense shaft of iron, sliding up and down in a great wooden frame, and regulated in its movements so that it can strike a hard or soft, a quick or slow blow, as the engineer who directs it may wish. A heated shaft of iron a foot thick can be crushed, or a tack may be driven, by its blows. About twenty years ago, the Prime Minister of England, Lord John Russell, visiting the railway works at Manchester, was invited to eat a boiled egg for luncheon. Before giving him the egg, the master of the works put it in a small wine glass and placed both under the great hammer. The engineer set the giant at work; down rushed the shaft with the rapidity of a lightning flash and struck the egg, but so perfectly was the hammer regulated that the blow merely clipped the shell, crushing neither glass nor egg.

More About the Fryer Process.

"During last Summer large works were commenced, and a week or so ago they were put into operation. These larger works performed as neatly and completely as did the smaller. In other words, the Fryer process reduced tons as easily, as quickly and as completely as it did pounds. The affair is no longer an experiment; it is an assured fact.

"The enlarged works have shown also that the process for reduction is a cheap one. It was at first estimated that the cost of reduction would be about $5 per ton. It is now known that ore can be reduced, by the Fryer process, at about $3 per ton, and probably for a less sum.

"The time required for working a charge of ore is about twelve hours. In four hours, however, after a charge has been started another can be made, the works in that respect being like a fruit dryer, using hours instead of minutes.

"The capacity of the works can be increased indefinitely, just as milling can be increased. Add more 'sections' when more work is wanted, just as an addition of stamps are made to a mill, is the way to get capacity.

"The advantages of this process are many and great. The ore is worked at once, saving nearly all the precious metal in it, concentrating sulphurets is done away with, and so is the subsequent chlorination; the use of great quantities of quicksilver is avoided; pans and the necessary power to run them will be no longer needed."—[Grass Valley Union.

National Expenditures.

[From The S. F. Bulletin, Nov. 25.]

The appropriations voted by the Forty-third Congress, first session, to carry on the Government of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, aggregated $183,741,112. This includes for 1873 and '74, amounting to $8,275,375. It does not cover any part of the interest on the public debt, but does cover $29,980,000 for pensions. The interest for that year may be stated at $103,000,000. This brings the total expenditure up to $286,741,112. Deducting the pension account from the figures first above written, we have for the ordinary current expenditures of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1875, the sum of $153,761,112. The reader will bear in mind this was in a year of profound peace at home and abroad, and that it is exclusive of interest on the National debt and of pensions.

It will be interesting to compare this bill of costs with the expenditures of the Government in the past years, when we had to run nearly the same machinery, and when the country's population ranged from 3,500,000 to 25,000,000 and upwards.

The administration of President Washington dates from March 4, 1789, to March 4, 1797. The average annual expenditures were $1,986 588.

John Adams' administration covered the next four years, ending March 4, 1801; the average yearly expenditures were $5,287,088.

Jefferson was President for the eight years ending March 4, 1809. Average expenditures $5,142,598—a reduction of $144,490 per year on the preceding administration.

Madison served the eight years ending March 4, 1817. Average expenditures $18,035,617. In this administration the country had a four-years' war with England, waged by land and sea; hence the great increase of average expenditures.

Monroe held office for the eight years ending March 4, 1825. Average annual expenditures (exclusive of payments on account of the war debt), $13,045,431.

John Quincy Adams was President from March 4, 1825, to March 4, 1829. Average expenditures (exclusive of payments on account of the debt), $12,625,478—a decrease of $419,843 per annum from the preceding eight years' average.

Jackson was President for the eight years ending March 4, 1837. Average per year $18,068,301. Indian wars in Florida beginning during this administration and the Black Hawk war in the West, raised the expenditures.

Van Buren was President during the next four years ending March 4, 1841. Average expenditures, $28,047,173. The Florida war still continued during this administration, and proved a very costly one. It was under Van Buren that one Samuel Swarwout distinguished himself as the first conspicuous plunderer and defaulter.

The administration of Harrison and Tyler covered the four years from March 4, 1841, to March 4, 1845. Average yearly expediture, $53,541,238—a decrease from the preceding four years of $4,506,505 per annum. The appropriations for the postal department alone for the year ending June 30, 1875, were $35,756,091, and for the same year the army (25,000 men) cost $27,788,500.

Polk's term ended March 4, 1849—about the time emigrants were preparing to come from the East to California. Average expenditure, $36,681,101. The sudden increase of over $13,000,000 a year was on account of the war with Mexico, waged during this administration.

The Taylor and Fillmore administration ended March 4, 1853. Average annual expenditure, $44,805,721. And this included the payments made on account of the Mexican war debt.

Pierce's administration closed March 4, 1857. Average expenditure, $55,872,028.

Since then twenty-two years have passed, and the increase in peace expenditures has been enormously out of proportion to the increase of population. The postal and army departments cost more last year than it cost yearly during Pierce's administration to run the entire government. It is clear that unless we soon reform the abuses which have crept into the administration, we shall have the most extravagant government and tax-ridden people in the world. It cost more last year to take care of less than 250,000 Indians than it cost in Jeffeson's time to govern the whole nation, then not less than 6,000,000. It costs now as much to run the postal service as it did twenty-six years ago, under Van Buren (with a severe Indian war on hand), to conduct the entire government; and the whisky ring alone has, in one year, defrauded the treasury out of as much as the average annual expenditures during the eight years of Washington's presidency.

Fine Writing.

How Grant Saved a Woman's Eyesight.

There is another lady I have met recently who says: "The President has saved my eyesight." She is the widow of a Confederate officer. Her husband was an old army officer and acquainted with General Grant before the war. The remembrance of the old bond of friendship was strong still, and secured for the widow a position in the patent office, several years ago. The fine tracing work upon which the ladies are employed in this office is extremely trying to young, strong eyes, but fatal to those that are weakened by tears of anguish. The best occulists warned Mrs. General S—— that total blindness would be the result of a continuance of her occupation. She tried in vain to impress those in authority over her of the impending danger. Not only her own support depended on the health of her eyes, but the care and education of a young son. Day after day, as she left the office she would go to her room, and with bandaged eyes lie on the bed and try to piece the future that seemed fraught with an old age of utter helplessness and dependence. When the President returned here, two weeks ago, she sought him and asked that he would interfere. A note from him procured a transfer to the library, where she is engaged in translating important works for the use of the Patent Office. —[Washington Correpondence Louisville Courier Journal.

Wouldn't it be Right?

As our readers are aware extraordinary efforts have been required to relieve the general suffering entailed on so many helpless people in Virginia City, originally caused by the great fire and a hundred times aggravated by subsequent storms, which literally tore the temporary apologies for houses from over their heads. Their appeals for help have been responded to most nobly wherever in Nevada or this State they were directly made known. No direct appeal has ever been made to the citizens of this county, nor likely will be, but nevertheless we believe Inyo would stand better in its own estimation if a little return was now made for the noble charities she herself was once the recipient of. Here is an excellent chance to show at least the desire to requite that obligation. That obligation is not limited to one locality nor but a few persons, but rests upon all Inyo county, for the response made by San Francisco, Sacramento and many residents of that now suffering Virginia City, to our appeal for help, was not to aid this person or the other, but presumably, all Inyo county, and all Inyo county owes a return if she would exemplify the golden rule of "doing unto others as ye would they should (have done) unto you."

What Secretary Chandler is Going to Do.

It is claimed authoritatively that Secretary Chandler will not recommend, in his annual report, the transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department, but will favor its retention as part of the Interior Department. He will, however, suggest that the purchasing of Indian supplies be made under the direction of the War Office, and that the Indian Bureau be relieved from all responsibility in regard to contracts for these supplies. He does not, so it is further said, intend to let the politicians have anything to say in the management of Indian affairs, but will see that the policy heretofore pursued of connecting the Indian service with the religious element, and of permitting the latter to have a controlling voice in the management on Indian questions, shall remain unchanged. The striking part in this programme is, how is the honorable Michigander going to manage to make the politicians keep their dirty fingers out of the Indian pie?

Capt. Howell Drunk.

A statement appears in the Portland Oregonian, of November 20, to the effect that, while the steamer Pacific on her last voyage lay at New Tacoma, (W. T.) Captain Howell, her commander, was so drunk he had to be led on board by two men, and that the ship had to be held for some ten hours till he woke up from his drunken slumbers. It is said the fact of his being in that condition at that time can be proved by at least fifty persons. Some believe that he and his officers were all more or less drunk when the steamer was struck, and that is why they could do nothing to save either themselves or those unfortunate passengers. The investigations being made go to show those 238 men, women and children were simply victims of murder, Perkins, Goodall, Nelson & Co., the owners, being the real responsible parties. Captain Sawyer, of the ship Orpheus; is also suffering by these investigations, his seamanship appearing in a very bad light.

Promising.

The Los Angeles Express says that prospects of an alliance between Tom. Scott and Senator Jones and his friends in Washington, this Winter, are very promising. The "Needles" will probably be selected as the converging point of a line from the Union Pacific, Thirty-fifth Parallel and Texas and Pacific Railways, there to unite with the Los Angeles Railway which will strike out across the Mohave to meet these roads.

The Next Congress.

The political complection of the next Congress, which convenes day-after-tomorrow, is said to be as follows: Senate--Republicans, 41; Democrats, 28; Independents, 3; vacancy, 1; not yet chosen, 1. House--Democrats, 181; Republicans, 97; Independent Republicans, 3; Independent Reformers, 4; Liberal Republicans, 6; to be elected, 1.

Valuable.

From the following it will be seen tha t Lila Duncan was a very valuable girl: "Agnes C. Duncan has sued the Central Pacific Railroad Company for $50,000 damages done her by the killing of her sister Lila, at Reno, in June last."

A REPUTED INYO COUNTY MINING SWINDLE.

The Sacramento Bee devotes considerable space to an account of a mining swindle perpetrated by one Alex. Wilson on numerous Kentucky friends, Inyo county being the place where the pertative mine was located. This Wilson had gone back to Hickman, Kentucky, having for some time previously written glowing letters concerning his big mine in Inyo county. There he threw money about recklessly, telling his former schoolmates and friends that his mine was rich enough for all and everybody; for a consideration, to be used in its development, he would give them all a chance with him. The old friends believed him to the extent of some $20,000 worth. They purchased one-fourth of the mine, which was called the "Raccoon Ledge," and appointed a Mr. Garrison as one of the Trustees. This Trustee came to San Francisco with Wilson. On their arrival Wilson introduced Garrison to a "gentleman," whose name is not given as the Superinteudent of the Raccoon Company's mine. The Superintendent had just come down from the mine in Inyo county, and was overjoyed to meet the gentlemen. The Raccoon was yielding magnificent ore, but unfortunately the water was coming in so very badly it would be imperatively necessary to put in a powerful pump at once. After due consultation Mr. Garrison consented to an assessment, which with the usual wry faces the stockholders back in Hickman finally paid. Wilson started East to buy the pump, the "Superintendent" came to Inyo to prepare for it, Mr. Garrison remained in charge of the Company's office and business in San Francisco. He waited three weeks; no news of either of the other gentlemen. He waited still longer and till hoped deferred made his heart quite sick and his private purse still sicker, for out of that he had to pay office rents, etc. He then came here to Independence, so the story goes, and inquired about the Raccoon mine and its people. He was horrified to learn that nothing of either, under that title a least, had ever been heard of in this section. He saw at a glance that no pump was needed. He and his friends had been pumped quite dry already by that old schoolmate, Wilson, so on the 10th instant he took a sorrowful departure for the "Bloody Land" to tell the stockholders in the Raccoon just how it was.

The story as above outlined, may all be true as regards the original swindle; many such have occurred, and there is no good reason why Inyo wouldn't be a good place to locate such a mine--but we cannot, after due inquiry, find out that any Mr. Garrison or any one like him, has ever been to this town of Independence or any other Inyo town, to make inquiries about the Raccoon ledge. The whole story is extremely fishy.

THAT ANNEXATION SCHEME.

It does not appear that that story concerning the big land trade or steal with Mexico has any official foundation. Some such thing has been proposed, but not officially. The explanation is that land grabbers and speculators in Mexican obligations, have sprung this story with the view of selling out their lands and claims while things were hot, and saleable at an advance. The Mexican authorities in a telegram to New York, authorize the absolute denial of the story in all respects. Yet, it is pretty certain, that during the French invasion Juarez made a promise of landed securities to the United States as security for money and arms he received from some source then not generally known, but now said to be our Government. This timely aid enabled him to drive the French out of the country. His own death following soon after no one remained in his Government who dared to take the responsibility of fulfilling the original agreement, and thus it is that nothing has been heretofore said about it. It is said that the arrangement with Juarez looked to a "nominal" war with the United States, the unsettled claims against Mexico being the alleged cause, the conditions of peace being the cession of territory and the assumption of these debts, substantially as lately set forth in the newspapers. However that may be, it seems that the Mexican Constitution as well as the sentiment of her people forbids the cession of territory upon any peaceable conditions, and, that therefore, if we become the owners of such territory it must be as a result of war, or rather a forcible steal.

Postponed.

The great horse race has, by order of the Jockey Club, been postponed, to take place not sooner than Christmas, if then. The bad weather required this, but in addition to that, several of the competing horses are afflicted with the epizooty. All pools have been declared off.

St. Nicholas for December.

This splendid monthly has for its frontispiece an entirely original and most charming portrait of "Hans Christian Andersen," surrounded by several of the representative creations of his fancy, which are set forth with almost as much delicacy as in his own word-pictures. Looking first and long at the noble, kindly face, one sees next the "Little Match Girl," and beneath it a sketch of good "Councillor Knapp;" while in one corner the "Ugly Little Duckling"--Anderson's emblem of himself--is lifting its great featherless head in so life-like a manner that you almost expect to hear its feeble "quack." "Little Tuk" is there too, and so are "The Brave Tin Soldier" and "The Elder-Tree Mother"--in short, this frontispiece is one of the most daintly conceived and beautifully executed wood engravings that we have ever seen. It is eminently fitting, therefore, that so perfect a picture should be made to illustrate an article as perfect; and that it does so in this case can hardly be denied. No writer in this country is better qualified to tell of Hans Christian Andersen than Mr. Boyesen, the Norwegian novelist, and the author of the article in the December number of St. Nicholas. This contribution, indeed, is a prominent, valuable and thoroughly fresh memorial of the children's poet, and is full of biographical anecdotes, given in the entertaining manner characteristic of the author of Gunnar.

Of the other contributions to the number, perhaps the most noticeable are H. H.'s poem of "The Legend of St. Nicholas," with its exquisite illustration; the article entitled "Something About Railroads," and giving the details of the history, construction and management of the railway; and the long contribution on "One Hundred Christmas Presents, and How to Make Them." This last is emphatically a useful article--indeed we know not where to find a more complete and concise guide to the construction of those innumerable adornments that can be so easily made--when one once knows how--out of mere household scraps.

As for other attractions, Mr. Brooks' serial, "The Boy Emigrants," grows in interest and power as we make our slow advance with the boys across the Western prairies; "Sandy, the Hunchback," gives us a change of air, and a pathetic picture of a maimed boy's life among the braes of Scotland; even farther still we go to witness the interesting and peculiar observance of "St. Nicholas' Day in Germany;" and on our return we stop just short of our native shores to meet Mr. Trowbridge's sporting characters, "Joe" and "Bonwig," and experience the delight of hunting ducks with them, upon a little island. "Frank and the Toad," a novel mock-trial, and the poems of a "Dead Doll," are sure to bring a laugh with them; and Mrs. Dodge has one of her charming rhymes, with a marvelously beautiful illustration by Miss Hallock.

Readers of the magazine have long known what keen excitement and inspiration to expect from the various departments, and in no single issue have they probably found more enjoyment than they will in this one, either from Jack-in-the-Pulpit, or from the Riddle-Box, which this month offers as a prize for the solution of its chief puzzle, a beautiful miniature schooner-yacht! To simply glance through the December number of St. Nicholas, is at least to confess that never before has literature for children reached so high a level.

More Help Needed.

Virginia City's appeal for help, since her terrible misfortunes from fire and storm, has received a most glorious response from many cities and towns of this State and Nevada, but, as will be seen from the subjoined, her people are still sorely pressed:

RELIEF COMMITTEE ROOMS,
VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., Nov. 18, 1875.

Geo. S Dodge, Treasurer V. C. R. C., San Francisco;—In answer to your telegram of the 16th instant, you will find enclosed a list of goods required, and large as the requisition may seem, we fear the possibility of our necessities exceeding even that estimate. It is for that reason that we have decided to appeal very strongly to your Committee, and beg that it may not yet close its labor. Great as was the distress immediately after our great fire, the sufferings of our people have been immensely increased by the fearful storms that have visited our city since Friday last; almost all building has been stopped, thus adding to the number of the destitute and many, who having lost their houses by the fire, had courageously built up at least temporary shelter for their families, have now been rendered homeless by the fearful winds that raged here for three days. In addition to those who heretofore depended on our Committee for the necessaries of life, we have a new class, and that the most deserving, who, through pride, have struggled to maintain themselves without charitable aid, but now conquered by the severity of the weather, are compelled to ask assistance. Indeed, it is the opinion of several members of our Committee that we have yet to learn the greatest of our destitution. In view of these facts and of many others that would present themselves to any member of your Committee were he here to realize the true conditions, we pray you most heartily not to close the fountain of your charity yet; we believe that your people know that when we ask for help we need it badly Therefore, with a hard Winter before us and a probability of increasing destitution, we can only say for your noble generosity up to the present that we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. We will do our best to get on with what we have, but we may need more, and if we do we want to appeal through the Committee who has done such good work already, and, after the stirring words spoken here by Mr. Lent as representative of your Committee, we feel that we shall not appeal in vain. Very respectfully,

R. V. DEY,
Sec. V. R. C. Committee.

PLAYS IT FINE.

Two weeks since we referred at some length to the claims set up by certain Los Angeles papers as to which was entitled to the credit of having originated and sustained the Los Angeles and Independence Railroad enterprise. In so doing we showed and can show that THE INDEPENDENT's efforts in that direction antedated those of either of the Los Angeles papers now endeavoring to make capital out of what they had done therein. In that article we gave due credit to The Express for what it had done. Now comes that paper with a careful extract of what we had said, being that part of our article to its own praise but not a line of, or reference to, the context. In effect, THE INDEPENDENT's claims in its own behalf and that of its then junior in contradistinction to those of certain Los Angeles individuals and everything of the kind, is completely ignored; just enough is shown to make it appear that the only intent of the article was to do honor to The Express, an acknowledgement from us of its superior right above that of THE INDEPENDENT and every one else. Now, it is a matter of the most perfect indifference to us what conclusion Los Angeles or its papers may arrive at concerning the small matter as to what person or paper is entitled to the credit of putting that enterprise originally in a living shape, or which of the latter did the most to sustain it after that was done. We are only grieved to think a newspaper that we have always heretofore deemed worthy of praise for an honorable effort and honest course should think it worth while to descend to such sharp practices as to garble an article from another for its own glory solely. Henceforth we would not trust The Express' sense of right a bit further than we could sling a three-year-old bovine by his narrative.

HENRY WILSON.

It is questionable if any man since the death of Abraham Lincoln has filled a greater place in the esteem of his countrymen than has Henry Wilson, whose death millions now most sincerely mourn, each as if it was for a near personal friend. To be ranked in the same category with that most remarkable of self-made men, Andrew Johnson, no public man, alive or dead, can point back to a more noble record of unselfish devotion to principle and unimpeachable integrity. Perhaps no better proof of the latter proposition could be offered, if any were needed, than the simple fact that Henry Wilson entered public life forty years ago a poor man, and from a shoemakers bench, and now as Vice President of the United States, he dies a poor man. He never made use of power and place for self aggrandizement. He rose from poverty and obscurity, not to wealth, but to the next highest position in the gift of the Nation, coupled with a meed of respect and confidence not accorded in higher degree to any other public man. And in future history, none will be oftener referred to as a shining example for emulation by the youth of the country than Henry Wilson.

Vice President.

It is a matter of discussion, who now becomes Vice President. Had Vice President Wilson died while Congress was in session no question as to his successor could arise, as under the Constitution, it would, 1st, devolve upon the President pro tem. of the Senate, and, 2d, in the event of a vacancy from any cause in that office, then upon the Speaker of the House. Senator Thos. W. Ferry, of Michigan, was elected President, pro tem. of the Senate at its extra session last March, and by virtue of that, some claim he becomes Vice President, while others claim that the psesent being a new Congress, Ferry is not its President pro tem. after reassembling, and therefore is not the Constitutional successor to the vacant Vice Presidency. The chances are, we think, that Ferry will be Vice President, nevertheless.

Soldiers of the Late War at the Centennial.

A movement is now on foot in Philadelphia to assemble a large number of soldiers of the late war at some time during the centennial year. It is proposed to have both Northern and Southern armies represented by leading generals and thousands of the rank and file from every State, the purpose being to show to the world the fact that the men who were in arms against each other a few years ago are now united in the celebration of the one hundredth birthday of the country, and are inspired by a spirit of patriotism and a feeling of common nationality.

Cash Lost.

The sum of $79,220 in treasure went down with the ill-fated steamer Pacific. The treasure was shipped by Wells, Fargo & Co., and insured, as is customary with them.

War Like.

A special dispatch from Washington to San Fransisco says: "The naval preparations continue, and several officers received orders to-day. Congressmen say that within two wseks they intend to know what it all means. There has been a strong effort on the part of several newly-arrived Congressmen to fathom the mystery hanging over Secretary Robeson's warlike preparations. The conclusion reached by some of them is that the President has decided to recommend to Congress the immediate recognition of Cuban belligerency. Cuban representatives here stoutly defend this course as a necessary party move, since, as they argue, if the President dosen't do this the Democrats of the House will immediately propose and pass resolutions of recognition. Whatever these preparations may mean, they still continue. In addition to the fitting out of sea-going vessels of the navy, all receiving ships are perfoming active duty. Certain army officers seem to feel convinced that the end of the present movement is to be interference in Cuba, and they are comparing views as to the time it will take to withdraw the cavalry and artillery forces from the frontier and replace them with volunteers, whom it would be necessary to enlist to take care of the Indians. From the temper of a number of prominent representatives now here, it is evident the Administration will meet with able, prolonged and bitter opposition in any attempt to involve the country in war on account of Cuba.

War in a Newspaper Office.

This week instead of the one broad sheet we received two small Visalia Delta's by different publishers, each claiming to be the simon pure original. There is much trouble in that office about the ownership of the paper. Ford, whose ownership has been ignored for some time past by Dewey, recently went into the office and then came war, but not exactly of a personal character as neither could eject the other. Dewey laid claim to certain portions of the material, including the big press, but only a part of which he could carry away, leaving Ford in posession of a pied office and without a press suitable to get out the full sheet. He, however, managed to get out a small one under the firm name of "Dewey & Ford," but mostly devoted to left handed compliments of the senior member, who in a still smaller sheet comes out to a similar effect, save as regards the joint names. From last accounts we learn that every thing is in the hands of the sheriff.

Chavez Killed.

A special despatch to The Chronicle from San Diego, dated November 26, is to this effect:

Chavez, the California outlaw, came to Baker's ranch, on Gila river, sixty miles above Yuma, two months ago and went to work for Baker breaking horses, without wages, apparently desirous of being considered a companion rather than as a servant. A herder named Raggio discovered who he was and reported to his employer, King Woolsey. Yesterday two of Woolsey's employees, named Calvig and Roberts, arrived at Baker's camp. Calvig covered Chavez with a double-barreled shotgun and ordered him to throw up his hands and surrender, instead of which Chavez started to run for arms, when Calvig gave him the contents of his gun in the back. He died without speaking a word. Roberts and the Raggio brothers started for Yuma with the body. Calvig returned here. The Raggio brothers are sure of their man, as they have known him in California for years.

The Cottage Hearth.

We are in receipt of a very fine monthly magazine bearing the above title, full of pictures, excellent reading, patterns and descriptions of numerous articles of dress calculated to please the ladies, recipes, etc. all at the very resonable price of $1 50 per annum. This number contains an excellent likeness and interesting biography of Ann Eliza, Brigham's divorced wife, who, by the way, is about to issue a 600-page book of Morman life and iniquities, which, we do not doubt, will create no little sensation. Milliken & Spencer, 347 Washington Street, Boston, are the publishers of The Cottage Hearth.

Kern County Items.

The trial of Ramon Arras and Mariano Barreros for the murder of Gray is in progress as we go to press, and excites considerable interest among citizens.

On Wednesday last, while the Los Angeles stage was making its downward trip to Caliente, the stage upset and one passenger was severely injured. The passengers and driver injured by another recent accident on the same line have fully recovered.

The work on the Southern Pacific Railroad is being pushed vigorously. An additional No. 7 has been recently established which extends the work and operations of the line some sixteen miles from Caliente.—[Gazette, November 27.

Seeks Another Defendant.

Parson Fitzgerald, in the matter of that $3,000 transaction charged against him while School Superintendent, has withdrawn his libel suit against The Chronicle and began one against Klose his former partner, on the same count, fixing his damages at $20,000.

Pretty Heavy.

The Virginia Chronicle estimates the total loss by the Virginia fire at ten millions on which the total insurance is $1,500,000.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Kearsarge Matters.

Mr. L. C. Gray, of the Kearsarge Company, arrived here this week. He comes with the view of inaugurating active work on the mine at once, or immediately after the arrival from San Francisco, of another member of the company, expected daily. The plan is to keep a small force at work taking out ore during the Winter, and to start the mill and put on a full crew as soon as practicable in the Spring. Since Mr. Gray's last visit here he has devoted time and money to systematic tests of the Kearsarge ores, to determine what process holds out the best inducements. We are not able to state the final conclusion on this point further than to say that it is found that the ordinary process, such as has been adopted in the Kearsarge mill heretofore, will give no more than thirty-five per cent. from the rich ores taken from the deeper workings, say below two hundred feet. As every one here knows or believes, these ores are very rich, but by the usual process cannot be worked at a profit. It is also well known that the mill during the Summer of 1872 yielded most handsomely, while the succeeding year it was a failure, $7 per ton being about the maximum return. It is shown by the later tests that not less thann 65 per cent. of the metal was wasted during the season's profitable run, and even more than that during the one following. It never was nor is not now a question as to the richness of the ore nor its lack of quantity, but simply how to extract a fair proportion of its precious metals. No question is now entertained but all of the surface ores down perhaps to two hundred feet, can be worked to a profit by the plan deduced from these experiments, and on that assurance the mill is to be started up as before stated. But it should not be understood that the deep ores are to be ignored in the intended operations; they will be worked too, but by a separate process, we suppose.

Indian Cure for Rheumatism.

As the winter months are nearing and the time has come when the atmosphere is laden with moisture and water feels very wet, rheumatism is apt to become the prevailing disease and an antidote that will insure a cure for this most troublesome complaint will certainly be appreciated. We therefore most cheerfully append an Indian remedy as told us by the famous Indian doctor, Dr. Phurt of Black Rocks, who says in substance: "Remove the clothing entirely, from the affected parts and all, and seat yourself on a big ant's nest; keep as quiet as you can." He added, "by-um-by heap holler—pretty good." Old forty-nine bachelors who are liable to exposure or saturation from dish-water would do well to cut this out and preserve it for future reference.

The Eclipse Mill.

Mr. Willett, of the Eclipse Mining Company, arrived here from England a week or two ago, since which time, we understand Capt. Eudey has started up a portion of the batteries and machinery, more to get them in running order than to reduce ores as yet. It is expected, however, that he will start up for a long run on ore now very soon. The tramway has been completed and is in the best possible working condition clear to the dump of the mine, some three miles distant, where there is already a large quantity of ore ready for shipment, while contracts have been let for the extraction of several hundred tons more. In due time we look for good reports from the Eclipse workings.

Troublous Times.

A person old enough to know better, especially that she was a female politically, got drunk the other day, at a place not a great ways from Big Pine, and went on the war path in a very promiscuous and disagreeable manner. After knocking people about and making herself very uncomfortable in trying to find words elegant enough to express her true sentiments regarding her neighbors, she was finally suppressed with a club in the hands of a young man, since which this female warrior looks at things in a different light. Her excuse for being so ugly was that the man made a mistake and gave her arsenicated whiskey intended to medicate corn for crows.

Emigrants.

During the past several weeks we noticed scores of emigrans passing, some headed northward, but by far the most going south, Some of them have the appearance of bona fide emigrants or pilgrims, others again appearing to be simply "movers." We suppose a wide-awake newspaper ought to be able to tell, either as a fact or fair preumption, where these people severally come from, where they are going, and what they expect to find when they get there. We however, are content to surmise that those going South are bound to Los Angeles or Santa Barbara after "climate" about which so much has been said in the local papers, while those going north left those places because they found too much climate.

The New Register.

As some curiosity is manifested to know who the new appointee to the Land Office Registership here is, we can say that he is the senior Briggs of The Amador Ledger, formerly, we think, of The Visalia Delta. Being a newspaper man he won't steal. Anyway, notwithstanding his connection with the press, we are told he is a firstrate man in all respects. We do not know when he is expected here to relieve Mr. McCallum.

Remedy for the Epizooty.

We commend the following to the attention of stock men:

MESSRS. EDS:—As the epizootic has made its way into this neighborhood, and seems to be gaining in force, I have the honor to communicate the following recipe, which may be of value to your readers, viz: "Chlorate of Potash." A solution of one teaspoonful in a pail of water, one-fourth of this quantity to be given twice a day to each horse.

I would state that this recipe has been found the most effective with the animals in the army, and has been published in form of circulars for the guidance of the officers of the Quartermaster Department in this Division.

Very Respectfully,
W. W. WOTHERSPOON,
2nd Lieut. 12th Infantry.

Taxes.

Sheriff Moore has been assiduously at work in the endeavor to collect the taxes now due and payable, but we are sorry to say with poorer results than has followed similar efforts for the last four years. It is to be regretted tax payers were not circumstanced so as to enable them to take advantage of the Collector's presence, pursuant to appointment, in their respective neighborhoods and thereby have saved considerable additional expense in having finally to travel to the Captain's office to settle. But it seems that times are a little harder this year than common, and that is why only about one-ninth of the $45,000 on the assessment roll has so far been paid in. Tax payers in arrears, among whom we have the honor to rank ourselves, are reminded that taxes become delinquent on the first Monday in next month—then comes the "ironworks" in the shape of not only the five per cent on the sum total, but also fifty cents added to every separate parcel or article assessed, no matter whether it is a sheep, horse, land or what not so that it is returned as a distinct parcel. It is proposed, this Legislature, to change the law so as to permit the payment of taxes in four instalments instead all at once or not at all, as now required. We believe that will be an excellent change. We shall have something to say, one of these days, in regard to that, and some special legislation required for this county, provided to some extent, any member of said Legislature feels enough interest in Inyo affairs to become a subscriber, however brief the period, to this very excellent country journal, since it is published right in the midst of a few people, the views of some of whom it sometimes represents.

Crazy and Paralyzed.

A man named John Crowley was brought in from Darwin this week and is now confined in jail as a lunatic. He is also suffering fram paralysis so that it is thought he cannot long survive. The cause of the affliction, we are told, was a blow on the head two or three years ago while he was resident of Pioche from which place he came about four months ago to Darwin. Subsequent "hard times," and ill usage of himself, superadded to the effects of the blow have now brought the unfortunate man to his present hopeless and helpless condition.

Off for Arizona.

The newly married folks, at least one pair of them, J. L. Darrah and wife, nee Miss L. Wayland, took the stage south Wednesday on their way via San Francisco to the southern portion of Arizona. It is perhaps fair enough under the Statutes for a man to come to a country blasted with such a scarcity of marriageble girls as this is and take one of them away off to such an outlandish country as Arizona, but under the young men's local code as they would like to have it, such conduct borders on the mean. But it is not their fault that things were always thus.

Beautifully Executed.

County Treasurer H. M. Isaacs a short time since sent some ordinary photographs, taken in this place by Addis, to a friend in New York. He was agreeably surprised a few days since to receive in return from his friend a fac simile of the pictures, large size, beautifully toned and elegantly mounted. They are equal in every respect to the finest steel engravings. Executed by Fredricks of New York, we believe by the new process called the sand blast.

For the Holidays.

L. Wood has received and is still receiving invoices of all sorts of toys, confectioney, fruits etc., in fact everything likely to please the little folks and the big ones too for that matter. He has apples fresh from Oregon. They are rolled separately in paper and in this way keep much better than California fruit shipped in bulk.

Unfortunate.

Fred Grothey, a former resident of this place, lately of Lone Pine, was stricken with paralysis the other day, his right side being affected. He was sent to the somewhat celebrated Paso Robles Hot Springs for treatment. His numerous friends in the valley purpose to see that he is well cared for.

Fire.

A fire occured near Camp Independence, last Tuesday, in which Wm. Noter's house was destroyed including household effects, etc. "Uncle Billy" and wife were both absent at the time. The cause of the fire is supposed to be the work of drunken Indians. "Vengence is sweet" saith ye noble red.

Mill for Lee District

This district, about which but little is generally known, lies some fifteen miles north of Darwin toward Cerro Gordo. It is said a mine there of great promise has been so far developed as to justify the erection of a mill, and that Mr. Lynch, one of the owners, has the machinery now on the way to put one up.

At Darwin.

We learn Mr. Beaudry is now at Darwin on his return from Canada, also that Mr. Reddy has returned from the Bay.

The Northern Stage Line.

Some of our Nevada contemporaries are giving the "Cluggage outfit," particular fits on various accounts, particularly because of poor time, poor stock and poor vehicles. Now, while we do not claim to be in a position to assert that complaints have no foundation in fact as regards some of the routes of this company, we can testify from personal knowledge that during this Summer their stock on the line between here and Carson was quite up to the average, the time between stations something better than average, while for wagons we have never traveled in better at any time or place, except when first-class Concord coaches were in use. In fact, the coaches in use all the way through were Concord coaches, but of a smaller size than those generally known by that name. Except here quite recently, since deep snows have caused a slight derangement, the northern mails have always arrived here inside of schedule time, however it may have been on other routes.

Holiday Observance.

The question among the litte ones is, "are we going to have a Christmas tree, or anything?" All we know about it is that there are plenty who would like to join in making the juveniles happy, but all that we know of are waiting for some one to lead out and the thing will go; likewise a ball. Wont some one make the start?

Important if True.

It is reported, and we are disposed to believe the report true, that a settlement of the San Felipe-Union mining suit has been effected, and that in consequence, prosperous times will again smile on Cerro Gordo, and this part of the country generally. It is useless to say more until we know more about it.

The Epizooty.

As mentioned elsewhere the epizooty has again made its appearance here, but so far, it is in a much milder form than on the previous occasion.

Taken up.

A bovine quadruped of the male persuasion is waiting an owner. Said owner is referred to estray notice.

Why was Boynton's Book Written?

Precisely why this book should have been written by its author, and why he should have been afforded such special opportunities for knowing more about General Sherman's campaign than General Sherman knows himself, may not appear clear to the average reader. It is very certain that the work found no open suggestion or encouragement from the President himself, for General Grant has always been characteristically careless about matters affecting himself and other participants in the war As much cannot be said for his friends. The Cincinnati Gazette is one of the four Republican papers that are more anxious for the President's re-election than he probably is himself, and that desire, next to a third term, the election of some such howling warrior as General Logan. A soldier is necessary for the purpose, and they are desirous of killing off the soldier who, next to Grant is popularly identified with the success of the Union cause. General Sherman has been frequently mentioned as the possible successor of President Grant. Hence the necessity for arousing against him, while there is yet time to do so, all the prejudice that may be awakened, and for impairing, in so far as is possible, his character for veracity, loyalty and ability.—[N. Y. World.

Death of General Page.

General Addison L. Page died in San Francisco, on Thursday last, after a lingering illness. Deceased was for some time a resident of Austin, during a part of which he was Superintendent and afterwards owner of the Keystone Mill, which was destroyed by fire in 1867. Subsequently he engaged largely in mining operations in White Pine, from which he emassed a competence. His later ventures in mining were in Lida Valley and Gold Mountain, which, we believe, did not prove successful. Something over a year ago he was attacked with softening of the brain which left him in an enfeebled condition up to the time of his death.—[Reese River Reveille, Nov. 22.

Released.

Brigham Young, who was placed under arrest for contempt of Court in disobeying the order to pay to Ann Eliza a stipulated sum as alimony, has been released by Chief Justice White, and it is said that the ruling of the Chief Justice meets the approval of the authorities at Washington. This victory of the Prophet over the Gentile persecution is not likely to lower the old sinner much in the estimation of his benighted followers.

Personal.

Mrs. Ashim, son and two daughters returned Sunday night from Inyo county, Cal. The readers of The Sentinel are already familar with the object and results of their visit to that section of the country. They were warmly welcomed on their return by a large circle of friends, and we but express the sentiments of nearly the entire community in congratulating them on the successful termination of their mission to Inyo and safe arrival at home.—[Eureka Sentinel, Nov. 23.

The Center of the Earthquake.

The center of the earthquake disturbance, last Monday, appears to have been in Arizona; and the waves were from East to West, diminishing in force as they came along. While the oscillations here were not at all severe, they were quite otherwise in the neighboring Territory, along the stage route. At Gardener's Wells, 159 miles from San Diego, part of the station building was thrown down. At New River, 138 miles from San Diego, a part of the station building was thrown down. At Indian Wells, 122 miles from San Diego, the adobe stable and the adobe corrall were both thrown down. The first shock was at 2:30 P. M. on Monday, and this was the heaviest. But there were other shocks nearly every hour until nine o'clock the next morning, when the letter was written from which we gather the above particulars.—[San Diego Union, Nov. 20th.

Stonewall Jackson.

A writer in The Richmond Whig gives interesting reminiscences of Stonewall Jackson while at West Point. The following will illustrate the inflexible determination of the man: He had a right rough time in the Academy at first, for his want of previous training placed him at a disadvantage, and it was all he could do to pass his first examination. We were studying algebra, and maybe analytical geometry, that Winter, and Jackson was very low in his class standing. All lights were put out at "the taps;" but just before that signal he would pile his grate up with anthracite coal, and lying prone before it on the floor would work away at his lessons by the glare of the fire, which scorched his very brain, till a late hour in the night.

The Discovery of the Source of the Nile.

The New York Times calls attention to the fact that Mr. Stanley can lay claim to having won the great prize of African exploration—the right to be recognized as the discoverer of the true source of the Nile. Says the editor: Stanley's fame is safe. He has found the true fountain of the Nile in the river Shimeeyn. Livingstone never saw a drop of water that belonged to the Nile, and the discoveries of Speke and of Baker, important as they were, have been interpreted and completed by the bold American who has finally grasped the prize which has cost so many prescious lives, which has eluded so many gallant and persevering efforts.

A Good Story.

A story is told of a little miss of five or six summers, who unconsciously perpetrated one of the best jokes of the season. Wine was passed around, and she was invited to take some, but declined. "Why do you not take wine with your dinner, Minnie?" asked a gentleman who sat near her. "Tause I doesn't like it." "But take a little, then, my child, for your stomach's sake," he urged. "I ain't dot no tommick's ache!" indignatly responded the little miss in the most emphatic manner. As both question and answer were distinctly heard by all those around, every one burst into laughter, which so frightened the little maid that she cried.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete polume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union.

Los Angeles & Independence Railroad.

[From The Santa Monica Outlook, Nov. 24.]

By the time this article reaches the eyes of the reader, the last spike will have been driven on the road giving Los Angeles another rail outlet to the sea. * * * The line will at no distant day be extended to San Bernardino, giving that rich valley a competing route to the ocean at Santa Monica. Thence the road will be continued, through Cajon Pass, tapping a rich mineral region, which will become a near market for the products of Los Angeles and San Bernardino valleys, and finally terminate at Independence.

Another project is also probable. At the Point of Rocks, 28 miles beyond Cajon Pass, is the proposed point where the extension of the Utah Central will intersect the Los Angeles & Independence Road. The distance from the present terminus of the Utah Central to the Point of Rocks is 370 miles, and from the latter place to Los Angeles, 130 miles—making a gap of 500 miles to be completed to give a through connection across the continent from Santa Monica by way of the Los Angeles & Independence, Utah Central and Union Pacific roads to Omaha, where the great railway system of the East will be tapped. It is only necessary for the Union Pacific to get control of the Utah Central and build about 370 miles to the Point of Rocks, where the L. A. & I. R. R. Company will form a junction. And when we consider the past operations of great railroad lines, it does not seem at all improbable that this short gap will be speedily closed.

There is also a possibility that the Texas Pacific may form a connection with this road in the vicinity of San Bernardino and make the terminus at Santa Monica. The people of a large area of the United States are demanding a southern route across the continent, and there is but little ground to doubt that the enterprise will be speedily inaugurated. In this event, the road will probably be run through San Gorgonia Pass, and then, to form a junction with the Los Angeles & Independence railway will save the building of about a hundred miles of road, over a costly grade to San Diego. But, however this project may terminate, the general prospects of Santa Monica as a terminus for extended railroad connections are most encouraging.

Cure for Love of Liquors.

At a festival at a reformatory institution, recently, a gentleman said, of the cure of the use of intoxicating drinks: "I overcame the appetite by a recipe given to me by old Dr. Hatfield, one of those good physicians who do not have a percentage from a neighboring druggist. The prescription is simply an orange every morning a half hour before breakfast. 'Take that,' said the doctor, 'and you will neither want liquor nor medicine.' I have done so regularly, and find that the orange is in the saliva of my tongue, and it would be as well to mix water and oil as rum with my taste."—[Herald of Health.

Mixed.

The royal family of England has in it more religions, perhaps, than any other family extant. The Queen dislikes the ritualists and delights in a simple form of worship. The Prince of Wales, on the contrary, enjoys the forms of church whenever he attends, which is seldom. His eldest sister is a Lutheran. Lord Lorne is a Presbyterian. The duchess of Edinburg is a Greek Catholic, and her husband is a Low Church Presbyterian.

A Hundred Years Hence.

Has any editor lost anything? The Eureka Sentinel of the 28th ultimo, and The Humboldt Register of the 29th contain editorials under the above heading, worded exactly alike. Since it would be impossible for The Sentinel to reach The Register office the next day after publication, it is evident that both editors conceived the idea of stealing the article about the same time. But who is the loser? Will not one of those editors be kind enough to inform us. Give the man credit, you old thieves. —[Carson Tribune.

Report of Major General Schofield.

The late report of Major General Schofield, commanding Department of the Pacific, after referring to improvements, transfer of troops, etc., at several posts, reccommends that Camp Halleck, Nevada, be gradually enlarged and improved as the funds may justify until it is capable of accommodating three companies under a field officer. He says: "It is with much reluctance that I have been forced to believe that a transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department is a necessity of the pub ic service. The events of the past few years demonstrate the utter inability of the civil department of the Government to keep necessary control over wild Indians. The effort to control them through civil agents while at peace on reservations, and turn them over to the army when they leave them or commit acts of hostility has proved, as might have been expected, a most efficient mode of producing war. The officers of the army are compelled to stand idly by, powerless for good, while their promises to the Indians made at the end of previous hostilities are being violated, and the dictates of wisdom, justice and common honesty disregarded in the daily treatment of the helpless savages who have no possible means of redress but to escape from the reservations. It is an entire mistake to suppose that the proposed transfer necessarily means a departure from the peace policy—which is the dictate alike of wisdom, humanity and justice—which has been adopted by the present Executive, and is not likely to be abandoned by any of his successors unless under the influence of new surroundings. Military management means more economy and a just, uniform and consistent execution of the Executive will. It means permanence in the mode of dealing with the Indians through the agency of life-tenure officers, who have spent most of their active lives among the Indians; who know their character and wants, and who have every possible motive for dealing with them wisely and justly. It means to do away with the constant fluctuations of policy, continued disturbance of pre-existing arrangements and frequent disregard of treaties or promises which have led the Indians to total disbelief in the faith of the Government. Military management means peace and security, giving even greater opportunity for the labors of Christians to civilize and instruct the Indians."

Picking the Ears.

Picking the ears is a most mischievous practice; in attempting this with hard substances an unlucky motion has many a time pierced the drum and made it as useless as a pierced India-rubber life preserver; nothing sharper or harder than the end of the little finger, with the nail paired, ought ever to be introduced into the ear, unless by a physician. Persons are often seen endeavoring to remove the wax of the ear with the head of a pin; this ought never to be done; first, because it not only endangers the rupture of the ear by being pushed too far in, but if not so far, it may grate against the drum, excite inflammation and an ulcer which will finally eat away all the parts, especially of a scrofulous constitution; second, hard substances have often slipped in, and caused the necessity of painful, dangerous and expensive operations to fish or cut out; third, the wax is manufactured by nature to guard the entrance from dust, insects and unmodified cold air, and when it has subserved its purpose, it becomes dry, scaly and light, and in this condition is easily pushed outside by new formations of wax within.

Takes the Right View of It.

An exchange seems to grasp the situation perfectly when it says these things upon the public duty of a citizen:

The way to make a town is to help as much as possible every industry in your midst. Judiciously aid every enterprise that promises to add strength and characher to the place. If your neighbor builds a house help him to pay for it. If you are a property-holder every house will strengthen you, and it is right to reciprocate. Don't hide a dollar with a penny. Consider what is best for you in the long run. If you can draw advantage from an enterprise forwarded by an enemy, support it, if it does enrich him. Support your local paper—do unto the publishers as you would have them do unto you—trade with you. Should a man start a legitimate business in an obscure part of the town, say a good word for him whenever an occasion presents itself, and it will cost you nothing and may do him incalculable good; always remember that "bread cast upon the water will return after many days."

Scalping Practiced in India.

It seems that the practice of scalping is not peculiar to the North American Indian. An inquiry put forth in Nature draws out the following information on the subject: Herodotus mentions that it was one of the most characteristic practices of the ancient Scythians. It is said that the custom still prevails among the wild tribes of the frontier in the northern district of Bengal. The Friend of India remarks: "The Naga tribes use the scalping knife with a ferocity that is only equaled by the North American Indians, and the scalps are carefully preserved as evidences of their prowness and vengeance over their enemies. On the death of the chief, all the scalps taken by him during his warlike career are burned with the remains.

Important Mining Decision.

Copp's Western Land Owner for November reports a decision of the Commissioner General of the Land Office establishing the following important principles in mining: "An incorporated association of citizens owning separate and distinct interests in a placer mine may unite their means and expend the $500 required by law and thereafter secure a patent from the United States. Locators of mining claims have the exclusive right of possession to the surface embraced in their claims and the timber growing thereon in compliance with the United States and local laws.

Exciting Rumors.

It is reported that the Government used the cable wires for some hours this forenoon in the transmission of dispatches between Secretary Fish and Mr. Cushing at Madrid. Rumor adds that Spain has remonstrated against the United States permitting the sale of Cuban bonds in this country, claiming that their issue here is in violation of treaty obligations.

—The way they resign in "Ole Virginny:" "Whar can we find a first rate new minister?" inquired a deacon of a colored church in Virginia of a brother darkey the other day. "Why, I thought you had one," replied the friend. "So we has," continued the inky deacon, "but we's jus' sent him in his resignation."

—An imaginative Irishman gave utterance to this lamentation: "I returned to the halls of my fathers by night, and found them in ruins! I cried out aloud, 'My fathers where are they?' And echo responded, 'Is that you, Patrick McCarthy?'"

—Ex-Senator Nye has so far recovered his reason and health that his friends have removed him from the insane asylum. Strong hopes are entertained of his complete recovery.

—Mr. Toothacre has been elected to the Kansas Legislature in the hope, perhaps, that he may tie up his jaw.

Captain Waddell.

The finest steamship belonging to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, arrived in San Francisco last week. Captain Waddell is or was her commander. Captain Waddell has a history that is causing him and others much trouble. It was he who commanded the rebel steamer Shenandoah which, during the last year of the rebellion and after it had closed, played such sad havoc with our Artic whalers. This fact was not a good letter of introduction to the San Francisco merchants and sea captains many of whom were sufferers, but that is not the whole trouble. During one of her latest dashes at the whalers the Shenandoah destroyed among other vessels, the bark Harvest, owned by the subjects of the Hawaiian Kingdom. Secretary Seward denounced Waddell as a pirate, and on his return to England with the Shenandoah he was tried by a British court and exonerated on the ground that the Harvest hoisted the American colors instead of her proper flag. As Captain Waddell would be undoubtedly detained on his arrival at Honolulu, another officer, Captain Lachlan, took his place until arrangements can be perfected to insure Waddell freedom from molestation by the Hawaiian authorities. So the steamer sailed without Captain Waddell, but with the first officer who came out with him who, it is said, is one of the worst, most murderous bullies sailing the high seas. His name is Dominick Lynch. Altogether this fine steamship seems to be unfortunate in respect to her officers.

The President's Message.

A Washington dispatch of the 3d says:

At a special cabinet meeting held last evening the full text of the President's message, as completed, was received and discussed in detail. The message received no opposition to any part of it from any member present. After the message was disposed of, the case of General Babcock was considered, and the sentiment prevailed that the General should be afforded a speedy opportunity of explaining his alleged connection with the whisky ring. In regard to the premature publication of his annual report, the Postmaster General stated that he gave a copy of his report to a representative of the New York Associated Press under a solemn pledge that it was to be sent by mail to the press of San Francisco, and that under no circumstances was a word of the report to be published. Mr. Jewell took occasion to express in unmeasured terms his indignation against the party whom he alluded to, for having so cruelly deceived him. Very little sympathy is felt for Mr. Jewell from the fact that out of a score of press correspondents who applied to him for a like favor, he selected only one on whom to bestow it; and further, from the fact that the course pursued by Mr Jewell was so radically different from that pursued by other members of the Cabinet when dealing with representatives of the press.

The Amenities.

This, from The Santa Monica Outlook accords with our feelings exactly so far as it goes:

Great enthusiasm was manifested in the railroad convention, at St. Louis, the other day, when Gen. Wm. T. Sherman and Gen. Jos. E. Johnson met on the rostrum and indulged in a cordial shaking of hands. No doubt every right-thinking man and woman in the nation would have joined in the applause, had they been present. These are two great chieftains who had contended on many hard contested fields. But the war is over, and now they show themselves equally great as civilians. We are sorry, however, that the same magnanimous feeling was not exhibited throughout the convention, when Jefferson Davis was invited to a seat on the platform. It is true that there were but a few objections offered, and perhaps as few as could have been expected in so large an assemblage. There are more or less "black sheep" in every flock. We venture the assertion that every one of those who voted "no" upon the motion inviting Mr. Davis to a seat on the platform, had either escaped the draft, or "fought, bled and died" through the medium of a substitute.

Tweed Goes Clear.

News comes that Boss Tweed who has been sorely beset all because he amassed a fortune in the city of New York, has made his escape from the myrmidoms of the law, and is gone from their astonished gaze. The soft hearted deputy who had him in charge, allowed him to go home to put on a clean shirt, and after waiting some hours at his door, felt grieved to find his prisoner, shirt and all gone, so he raised an immense excitement about the escape. But they have not caught Mr. Tweed up to the latest dates.

Chaves.

The Los Angeles Herald says Chaves was not killed. Perhaps it was some one who resembled the bandit; that would be pretty good.

THE ASHIM-PERASICH CASE.

We were in hopes that we were done with this case, but it seems it is not yet ended. Originating with The Carson Appeal, a score of other papers—the whole pack, Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart—have taken up the blood stained track, and are yelping for more blood. They are not satisfied to morally murder the young man only, whose unfortunate act has given rise to this howl, but go further, and are doing their best to assassinate everything and everybody—lawyers, officers, jurymen, and such newspapers as have had the audacity, as they view it, to say anything whatever, no matter how true or impartial in favor of the helpless defendant.

Taken as a whole, admitting just enough of truth for the text, we have rarely, if ever seen as many falsehoods, either direct or inferential, embraced in so few words as we find in the article just published to the world by The Carson Appeal. The whole circumstances attending this publication are fully in keeping with the repeated efforts made to assassinate the defendant himself while yet in the hands of the law. For fear that it might fail of its object, appearing in that paper alone, it is presented to The San Francisco Chronicle, and probably others, in which it appears as a paid advertisement—d4-t1. It should have had a similar mark in The Appeal.

This quotation is from The Gold Hill News:

> After the late trial came off at Independence, there was publicly asserted and published in the local paper, an absurd rumor that the whole Perasich family, together with the attorneys for the prosecution, were lying in ambush, guarding the passes outward from Independence, for the avowed purpose of murdering young Ashim. This, like all the other stories, was a lie manufactured expressly to bias public opinion in favor of a cowardly assassin.

Assuming THE INDEPENDENT to be the local paper here referred to, we answer that not a syllable of the "absurd rumor" ever appeared in our columns, from any source or for any purpose whatever. But notwithstanding that from first to last we have heretofore refrained from giving any statements, with one exception, as to all the well known acts of the Perasich brothers, tending to produce a positive conviction in the minds of all in this country that they would assassinate the slayer of their brother whenever and wherever they could get the opportunity—notwithstanding all that we will now undertake to say that that "he manufactured to bias public opinion in favor of a cowardly assassin," was literally true, so far as a well founded belief could make it true. But, before offering our proofs on that point we add this quotation from The News:

> It looks as though the Perasichs (brothers of the murdered man) had been most foully wronged by certain journalists as well as individuals.

To a material extent the Perasich brothers have had our own and the general sympathy in their legitimate efforts to bring to justice the man whom they undoubtedly believed had foully murdered their brother. Had they rested satisfied to do all they could in that direction in a legitimate, civilized manner, they would have retained that sympathy to the end. But from the very beginning down to this effort at newspaper murder, they have shown a blood thirstiness in the pursuit of the alleged murderer, so bold and open as to lead many disinterested persons to seriously question whether or not they were not carrying out some peculiar national, religious or family teaching, compelling them at whatever cost to themselves, to become the avengers in kind of their slain kinsman. This actual theoretical fact, as before hinted, was based on their repeated, well known efforts to take the law in their own hands and kill the youth while yet in the hands of the law, awaiting its cool judgment for his alleged murder of their brother. But to the facts: On the night of the 2d of April last a mob of some twenty odd persons including at least one of the Perasich brothers, and his partner—the party being incited to action by them and their friends—came in the night time to this town of Independence for the purpose of lynching Ashim, then in the county jail. It was further proposed by some member of that party to burn up the property of, and hang, P. Reddy, Ashim's counsel. Reddy's offense at that time was chiefly that he had appeared as the prisoner's attorney, and his acknowledged abilities as a lawyer, and general successes as such, through which it was feared another murderer would be turned loose. In addition to that "crime" on his part, he stood secretly charged with the intent of the very blackest crime known—that of trying to hire the assassination of the Judge of the District!—and a fouler libel was never promulgated against any man. It is enough now to say that that attempt at murder was frustrated. Next we find Pete Perasich and another to us unknown, intercepting the stage at an isolated station below Darwin at 9 o'clock one night toward the latter part of June, clearly with the intention of taking vengeance on Ashim supposed to be in that stage. His bail bond not then being fixed he was not in that stage, as was expected, and doubtless owed his life to the fact. Some three weeks later the same party armed with a shot gun, did precisely a similar thing in the open streets of the town of Darwin, crowded with people, gathered to meet the incoming stage in which Ashim, then admitted to bail, was supposed to be, and would have been but for a sheer accident. Next, while on his return here to stand his trial, the fourth open attempt was made by the Perasich brothers to assassinate him, and others if it should so happen, in which attempt a number of shots were actually fired, almost directly under the nose of this same Carson Appeal. Passing a number of dark and significant demonstrations occurring right here in this town during the trial and prior thereto, we come down to the particular "lie manufactured" etc., referred to by The News. The best proof that any such ambush was in contemplation was on the undoubted statement that five persons, including two of the Perasich brothers, were seen two or three days after the close of the trial, carrying guns through the town of Lone Pine, sixteen miles south of this place on the stage route, leading to the belief that they were preparing to waylay the stage. In the face of these facts, saying nothing of what the Perasich's had openly threatened, and certainly in accord with the universal belief here of danger to be apprehended, some one probably a member of the Ashim family, wrote to Eureka, and on that authority The Sentinel made the statement The News credits to us and pronounces a lie. It was a simple truth so far as a perfectly natural and well founded belief could make it the truth. But, a day or two later we find the Perasich brothers en route for Carson, and later, as a sequence, this attempt to assassin the late defendant through the newspapers. If it had stopped at that we might think it best to pass it all without notice, leaving others to fight their own battles, but these papers do not confine themselves to the record but drag in extraneous matters in the most uncalled for manner, showing that they have taken their cue from an interested party. We quote now from The Appeal:

> It will be borne in mind that we have taken for our guide in ascertaining these facts THE INYO INDEPENDENT, a paper which, in commenting upon the upshot of the trial, has the deliberate hardihood to say it believes this atrocious verdict of acquittal was the right one. The brief statement of a few facts regarding the circumstances surrounding this farcical trial will remove all astonishment over the verdict. Judge Reed, the Judge of the District Court before which this trial was held, says, with shame and sorrow, that there have been in that District (which includes Panamint) not less than seventy-five or eighty homicides, and never one conviction in the courts. Pat Reddy, the attorney for the defense, is a king among the desperadoes in that country—his own brother being one of the number. This man Pat Reddy manipulated this case. The jury was selected on a special venire, by a Deputy Sheriff, who is a very intimate friend of Mr. Ashim. During the trial this jury, instead of being kept together and apart from all outside influences, were, as soon as the Court took a recess or adjourned for the day (the trial lasted five or six days), set at liberty to go where they pleased. That they were dined and wined and openly flattered and tampered with as no jury, not even in a civil case ever should be, are notorious matters of fact. It is also a fact, that all the ruffians whom Ashim's money and influence, and the money and influence of his friends could bring together to intimidate witnesses, bully the Court and bar, and corrupt the jury, were congregated at Independence during this trial. And yet, in the face of these shameless facts, and adding a monstrous lie to the still more monstrous mockery of justice, Ashim and his helpers had the effrontery to declare his life to be in danger from the surviving members of the Perasich family! We present the facts of record, as they are given to the world by a newspaper whose opinions are in suspicious harmony with Pat Reddy's and his client's, and we leave them to speak for themselves; and if the conclusion be not reached that poor Nick Perasich paid the penalty of his irascible temper by being assassinated in cold blood by a deliberate murderer, backed by two hired accomplices, then we are greatly mistaken.

While it is true numerous murders have been perpetrated in this county, some of which, no doubt, ought to have been punished with the rope, there is scarce a word of truth in the impression conveyed in the above reference to it. But three were ever submitted to a jury, one of which rendered a verdict of murder in the first degree, and Judge Reed, who tried them all, pronounced the sentence of death. The subsequent escape of the prisoner, who perished most miserably before he saw a friend or got thirty miles away, but which was not known for two months after, was what did the most to cause the Vigilante demonstration against Ashim and his counsel, Reddy. Scarce a thing beyond the fact that he was accused of murder, and that he was a Jew who had formerly been a Vigilante, was known to but few about Ashim or his deed to excite such unusual demonstrations against him personally. Nor was it because trial juries had turned seventy or eighty or any other number of murderers loose, for, prior to that time but two of the three murder trials had taken place, the last one being a conviction. It was because Grand Juries and Justices of the Peace had been too tender; it was because one convicted murderer was then supposed to be at large, and in some way, it was never definitely explained how, through the agency of this same P. Reddy. (He had positively refused to defend the murderer because of the aggravated character of his deed.) That this accusation was utterly untrue is now beyond question. It was because, in short, that the Vigilante mind had reached a culminating point, and required relief in some way, and because there happened to be interested parties ready to lead it into action as against this particular prisoner and, if need be, his counsel as well, for the assumed reason already stated, and to the end that neither this or any future manslayer should through his legal assistance get through the meshes of the law. These circumstances, true at least in the main, afford the real explanation for some of the later peculiar circumstances attending this case as applying to Reddy and his friends, but we cannot now spare the space to show their connection in full.

The venire was served by two officers, one an entire stranger to all the parties in interest, the other an appointed officer for months previous, enjoying as high a degree of public confidence as any officer the county has ever had, so far as we know or believe.

We are positive that the statement that "the jury were wined, dined and openly flattered and tampered with" is an unqualified falsehood. It is not a fact that a single "ruffian" or person of any kind or description, procured by Ashim's money or anybody else's, was present to intimidate any witness, bully the Court, or corrupt the jury. On the latter point, we say, that in all the ordinary relations of life the jury as a body were just as good and honest men as this county affords. Admitting it possible some of its members were corruptible, the best possible proof that none were, is, that every ballot from the first showed an absolute unanimity, save one blank twice. It is an absurdity to assume that every man on that jury had been corrupted, and if not, how came the unanimous vote, the blank excepted?

The ground for the charge preceding the last was this: Mr. Reddy, believing as so many others believed, that his client would be shot down unless protected, saw that he was accompanied to and from the court room by an officer and two or three reliable friends, who, in no word or deed or manner, buntered or were disposed to banter or molest any person whomsoever. Whether this precaution was called for or not we leave others to judge, but we have never heard it questioned by any person in this community.

Here we will take occasion to remark in conclusion of that part for the present that nothing in our report of this trial, or opinions at any time expressed concerning it, can be pointed out to justify The Appeal's lying inuendo that we were "in suspicious harmony with Pat. Reddy and his client." But we would like the world to know, if it is of the least comfort to it, that, as a general thing regarding both public and private issues in which he as a lawyer and citizen has taken a representative part as he often has, we have not been in "suspicious" but direct harmony with Pat Reddy's views, in most of which time has proved him right, while, in no instance that we now recall, has the contrary been established as regards anything that we have publicly or privately endorsed. We have never known a man in any prominent position of life who has been more foully and wrongly aspersed than has he, and especially in just such mean inferences as are intended in this general and particular cut throat attack above quoted.

The charge is also made that the trial was "farcical and a monstrous mockery of justice." This we undertake to deny in every particular. In doing so we will say that we are glad that the prosecutors secured prominent legal assistance from abroad to guard their peculiar interests and share in the honor of permitting a mock trial, since it is claimed that it was such. Now we have or ought to have the testimony of a competent outside lawyer to the contrary; otherwise he will have to admit that both he and the Court were but puppets in the hands of counsel on the other side—which no one can allow. The case was ably represented and watched on both sides, fairly adjudged throughout as the records prove, and was not one whit more of a farcical trial than every such trial is conducted under strict rules of law instead of in accordance with the impulses of the respective parties, which would hang an innocent man to-day, and turn a guilty one loose to-morrow—this last the very kind these howlers seem to demand.

The prosecution would have made a better showing in some respects, we think, had they employed one of our home lawyers instead of a stranger to all the surroundings, however great his knowledge of law. But all that could have been expected different in that event would have been one of two things—an exhausted venire or a hung jury—there was scarce a possibility of a verdict of murder, as we understand the law and the facts, and as those newspapers might understand them if they would not jump at conclusions at the first glance.

The verdict was in accordance with the law and the facts—first, that no conspiracy was shown between Ashim and Carroll (Montgomery took no part in the shooting, his pistol being found full charged, with dust lined chambers, so soon after the affray it could not possibly have been so reloaded). Second, that, though it is in proof that defendant fired the first two shots, whether to save his own life or to do murder is immaterial in this point, but neither of those were fatal. Third, it was not shown by any witness that he fired the third shot, while it is conclusive that deceased could not have received the fatal shot through the head earlier than the third shot, possibly later. Fourth, it is in proof that at that period Carroll was firing directly toward deceased, and was in the exact position to have inflicted that wound. We offer no opinion as to which did or did not do it; only the facts to show that so far as the world or that jury knows, or possibly ever can know, that fatal shot more likely came from Carroll than Ashim. It would seem that he himself thought so, for he disappeared at once and has never been seen since. As the State made effort to prove a conspiracy between, and pretty surely could not have done so, and as it did not prove beyond a "reasonable doubt," or even within the bounds of fair probability, that Ashim himself did the actual killing, that jury under their oath and instructions of law had no right to send this man to death for what was, with equal chance, another's crime. This defense, perfectly good as we understand it to be as a mere legal proposition, may be wholly insufficient to at all times satisfy the demands of justice, for under it, it looks as though the blackest murder might, under certain circumstances, be done with impunity. It was doubtless in acknowledgment of the correctness of the above facts and proposition that Gen. Clark, counsel with the District Attorney, himself admitted to a friend of ours that "that jury could not, under their oath, have brought in a verdict of guilty."

It was adduced on the trial that the conditions of this case in the above view were precisely like those in that of the People vs. Woody, conviction of murder. On appeal, the Supreme Court remanded the case back for new trial, because no conspiracy was shown between defendant and another man, between whom a murder was committed, but it was not certainly shown by which. We believe the report is in the 44th Cal. Had this case of Ashim's ended in a verdict of guilty it would have gone to the Supreme Court, where it would have stood no longer than was necessary to examine the bill of exceptions.

In conclusion of this interminable case we say that if we did not truly believe that young Ashim had a better defense, in a moral point of view, for his part in this lamentable tragedy than the purely technical one to which he was indebted for his escape, we would most surely acknowledge the justice of all the terrible things that have been said about him, though, as in accordance with law and evidence, we would still vindicate the verdict. There is unquestionably such an additional defense, but it is beyond our power now to name its points.

New Counties.

[From The Bakersfield Gazette, Nov. 27.]

It is already apparent that an attempt will be made to have several new counties created by the next Legislature. There may be extraordinary cases in which the people may be benefitted by the creation of new counties, but in nine cases out of ten it is unnecessary. It should be remembered that an increase of counties means an increase of the burdens of government. It means more public buildings, more office-holders, more expense in every way; and all this means more taxes and more hardships for the toiling masses. The movement is prompted, in nearly every instance, by men who are hunting for office and not by those who pay the taxes; and the Legislature should view with suspicion all movements of this character. It should never dismember old counties to create new ones, until it has ascertained that the movement proceeds from the people, is desired by those who bear the burdens of the government, and is for the public good. It should also keep steadily in view the fact that the people of the old counties concerned have interests at stake and should be consulted as well as those in the territory which it is proposed to segregate and erect into new counties. There is a wise provision in the Constitution of the United States which forbids Congress from depriving a State of any of its territory without its consent. It should be so in regard to counties also. The reduction of the territory of a county means a reduction of the amount of assessable property within its limits, and an increase in its rate of taxation; and it is manifestly unjust to compel a people to submit to this without their consent. The Legislature should never create new counties without consulting the interests and desires of all the parties concerned, for all have interests to be protected and rights which should be sacredly respected.

As we said in the beginning these new county movements in a large majority of instances originate with, and are organized by place-hunters whose claims are not recognized in the old counties and whose only hope of getting fat offices lies in having more created. They do not care a straw about the disastrous effect upon taxpayers, for as a general rule, they pay very little. They do not concern themselves about the hardships saddled upon others. They want office and will sacrifice anything and anybody to obtain it.

The time has arrived, as an exchange suggests, when it would be better to reduce the number of counties rather than increase it. In early days, when there were no railroads and comparatively few good roads of any kind, it was often a difficult undertaking to reach county seats from the extremities of the counties, but now railroads are pushing themselves in every direction and good wagon roads are found everywhere. The facilities for travel are greater than ever before, and the means of communication easier. The people are burdened with taxes almost to the extreme limit of endurance, and the country is languishing under hard times. It is a very unpropitious time for people to think of saddling more expense and more taxes upon themselves. They cannot endure it. The watchword should be economy and reform. The policy should be to do with as few county governments as possible, and reduce the expenses of the necessary ones to the lowest point practicable.

Another Bonanza Found.

Intelligence was brought from Treasure Hill on Wednesday morning last that another rich bonanza had been struck in one of the Eberhardt & Aurora company's workings. Of course this was welcome and joyful news to the citizens of Hamilton, as this company at the present time is our main support, and everything that is beneficial to them is also a god send to our people. It is stated that the find did not so much astonish those connected with the mine as it did the outsiders, for a 200 foot drift was being run to strike the ledge that was found. The ore just discovered is at a depth of 280 feet, or about eighty feet lower than any body of ore was ever found in the workings, and is pitching eastward, or into the hill, which is a contrary direction to all other bodies of ore heretofore found. At this writing no idea of the extent of the find can be approximated, but Foreman Maxwell has seen enough to warrant him in giving the workmen a "blow out" down in the mine. The character of the ore is very similar to that found in the Eberhardt in early times, and should it prove to be a large body, as is confidently expected, the company have indeed found a very rich bonanza. We hope to be able in our next issue to give all particulars in regard to this new discovery.—[White Pine News, Dec. 4.

The dread harvester has since last Saturday noon gathered in from this district, says The Eureka Sentinel of the 30th ultimo, five victims, three of them by accidents and two from natural causes. A little over a week ago there were four deaths here within twenty-four hours.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Another Petition.

As was to be expected a square issue is to be made by petitioo on the fence law, those who want the law to remain as it is now, having taken the field in the search of signers to their petition. It is popularly supposed "the longest pole will knock the persummons," but it is doubtful if that will hold good in this issue as a large proportion of the legislators take but little interest in the matter and will be very apt to determine the question in accordance with the weight of lobby influence or arguments presented, with but little regard to the number of names affixed to the respective petitions. But, nevertheless, it is the duty of every citizen to make his sentiments known by his signature one way or the other whether he has a direct or but an indirect interest in the issue. This fence question is one that concerns every interest in the country to a greater or lesser extent, it holding the same relation to county affairs, that the high or low tariff does to national. It is a question not of individual interests or hardships but as to what policy will do the greatest good to the greatest number. We have always inclined to the belief that the compromise or time law first adopted was the best in that respect, and still think so, but it did not nor cannot give perfect satisfaction all around, and of course, its re-adoption will be strongly opposed. Figures won't lie be much as a rule. The two different laws have had each but a limited trial, yet perhaps long enough to afford data sufficient to give a tolerable idea by figures as to which did the best. Somebody will do well to go to figuring if they want to make a case before the Legislature.

Cerro Gordo.

It is reported that Belshaw and Beaudry, (we are not certain that both of these gentlemen are interested) design to put a heavy force to work on the Buena Vista, a large mine but partially developed, and the objective point of the Potosi tunnel, lying to the eastward of the Union. It is also considered settled work generally is soon to start up in the town as in the days of yore, the settlement of the big mining suit removing the only cause that has prevented it before this. No doubt is entertained but the suit is settled but so far as we know, no positive information has come to hand here yet confirming it, as we learn from Mr. Bennett one of the counsel and parties in the original suit.

Personals.

J. S. Rothschild arrived here last week....Receiver Tom May returned this week from his visit to San Francisco....W. L. Hunter of Cerro Gordo, dropped down from the Hill on a brief business visit....J. H. Holt, boss of the Inyo Potosi mines on Kearsarge Mountain, has gone below for a short time. Among other arrivals we note that of Guy Earl from Oakland.... Friend E. R. Miner, Wells, Fargo & Co's Agent at Benton paid us a visit Saturday last, and if he don't forget it, which is not likely, we will receive a statement of the express bullion shipments for Mono county for the past year

Ubehebe.

Among other important enterprises likely soon to add to the fame and wealth of Inyo county, is the proposed workings of the immense copper ledge in Ubehebe district, to which we have frequently alluded heretofore. This ledge is a monster; its ores being carbonates no difficulty is apprehended as to their profitable reduction by a furnace similar to that used for silver-lead Mr. Belshaw, who has purchased the property from Messrs. Hunter and Porter, intends to locate his furnace in the edge of Salina Valley, some twenty miles east of Cerro Gordo, and within easy reach of the mines, this work to be undertaken on or before early Spring.

Weather.

For some time past we have been blest with the most magnificent weather imaginable. Any man who would find fault with it, would deem a visit from his mother-in-law a suitable and safe subject to growl at. Should it keep up—this fine weather we mean—long enough we propose to steal a few Santa Barbara climate editorials, and run them for our own county.

B-a-k-e-r, Baker.

It is proposed to hold weekly or less frequent meetings at the school house in the orthographical interest, which, reduced to more becoming English, means public spelling schools, sweepstakes, free to all ages, weights and occupations. It would prove funny and profitable both without doubt, and as there is but little or no chance for any other kind of public amusements here this Winter it is to be hoped the thing will go.

Birth Day Party.

Wednesday night, James, better known as "Sonny," Wallace collected all the little ones in town pretty much, to help him celebrate his birth day. We learn from the extreme junior reporter of this establishmet that they had a splendid time with goodies of all sorts, ocervatim, al gustum, if Noah Webster has not misstated the facts.

Holiday Goods and All Sorts.

L Wood has received and is receiving a splended variety of tops, holiday, and in fact, goods of various descriptions, the which he proposes to sell just as cheap as any other establishment in the county. Send in your orders if you can't come yourself, and depend on it they will be filled satisfactorally.

Indian Sweat-house.

Most of our readers have seen or heard of the Indian sweat-house, but few have ever witnessed the interesting treatment the Indian receives when he is in anyways indisposed—when he begins to feel the effects of the filth that has accumulated on his person for months he forthwith takes a sweat bath in order to get up internal force enough to shed the old scales on the outside. The sweat-house is built of a sort of a wicker work covered with sod and dirt; a hole is left for the smoke to escape and a fire kindled at the entrance—the patient strips and lays down inside; in a few minutes he commences to steam, perspire and smell so sweet that the oriental custom of steaming falls into insignificence compared to this primitive method. This is kept up until the patient is lightened of his outside crust then he rushes out and plunges head first into a stream of icy cold mountain water. This part of the programme, however, was omitted the other day at Fish Springs by Big-Mouth-Jack and Fish Spring Jim who, while enjoying this luxury, found their sweat-house on fire and the way they hustled out was a credit to their lazy natures. They experienced no damage, however, except to change the copper color of their backs into a beautiful pinto.

Races.

Under the head of new advertisements will be found a call for a meeting of the Inyo County Jockey Club for the purpose of electing officers, fixing the days for the races and making every arrangement for the comfort of all who attend. Quite a number will be on hand from Darwin, Cerro Gordo, Lone Pine and Bishop Creek and for the convenience of these parties from a distance the club is anxious to fix the purses and publish the races as early as possible. The track at Taboose Station will be in splendid condition, the Judges' stand etc. erected next week. We understand that the race for the $100 purse, or thereabouts, open for all saddle horses that have never actually engaged in a race for money, will be a half mile instead of a mile as heretofore mentioned. The meeting may conclude to arrange for two races of this sort and make up two purses. The club will be governed by the rules and regulations which have been adopted and are in force at the Bay District Association at San Francisco.

Died.

John Crowley, the insane young man brought here last week by Under Sheriff Moore, from the County Hospital at Lone Pine to await an inquiry that he might be sent to the State Insane Asylum, breathed his last about 6 o'clock Tuesday morning. Coroner Wayland, assisted by Rev. L. Case, and citizens, gave the body respectful burial in the cemetery south of town Deceased, as we learn by letter to the Sheriff from Dr. Gelcich, was admitted to the County Hospital at Lone Pine, November 13th, being afflicted with acute cerebites. With good attention this disorder was fairly relieved, but his mind was greatly affected, and apparently incurable, hence he was sent here for the purpose stated. He could give no account of himself after his arrival here, his mind being in utter darkness for several days prior to his death.

A Chance.

Times are extremely unpropitious just at this crisis for extra charitable displays, but nevertheles, we notice that a few of our citizens are responding to the call for aid to the Virginia City sufferers, there being an appeal for signatures and money open at Harris & Rhine's. It is said by the Chairman of the Relief Committee that at least $100,000 more will be required to carry the unfortunates of the great fire through without the keenest suffering till Spring. This is an immense sum and will require the mites obtainable from every town on the coast, pretty nearly, to produce it. Let Inyoites do a little something; a four bit piece from each able to donate it will help wonderfully, and not be much of a hardship either.

Fifes vs Climate.

Were we favored with the everlasting "orange" it would be policy to ring in a cold deck of "climate" and not exhaust ourselves in the use of so many unnecessary expletives concerning the renewed energy of the house flies and wasps. The remarkable perseverance in which the flies describe a half a dozen circles around the compositor's eyes—runs down the whole length of and deposits a dew drop on the point of his nose, and the advantage the "yellow-jacket" takes when its commercial end is meddled with, is enough to make one wish that the wind would blow, the rain rain, the frost frost sufficient to destroy insects, climate and all.

The Eclipse.

We learn that twenty stamps are in operation at the Eclipse Mill, and will be kept running till about the end of the month before a general clean up is made. Should that turn out as well as there is good reason to anticipate, the mill, with probably ten or fifteen more stamps will be started up again for permanent work.

Started up.

We learn through Mr. V. G. Thompson that the Defiance furnace at Darwin fired up last Monday, and in four hours' run turned out 36 bars, and was running successfully up to the time of his departure, Wednesday morning. Mr. Reddy, who was wrongly reported to be at Darwin last week, is expected to arrive there from San Francisco, probably to-day.

Petty Larceny Case.

One Wm. Collins was arrested at Darwin on the charge of stealing some blankets from Hanson's Hotel, the blankets belonging to Hanson, before whom, he being a Justice of the Peace, Collins had his trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to one hundred and fifty days in the county jail. Kit Johnson, special officer, brought the prisoner in a day or two since, who at once employed Judge Conklin to take his case and see what could be done by habeas corpus, based on the ground of the non competency of the Justice to sit in the case, Justice Hanson being the owner of the stolen property. The case came up before County Judge Hannah, yesterday, who, after due consideration refused to issue the writ, the commitment being all right. Judge Conklin, however, intends to demand a new trial, before some other Justice, we suppose. Meantime Collins will find blankets and accommodations at the Hotel de Dad Moore, until his case is disposed of some way.

Officers Elected.

The following is a list of officers elected December 4th, for the ensuing year by Independence Grange, No. 210, Patrons of Husbandry: Master, John W. Symmes; Overseer, John Shephard; Lecturer, John W. Martin; Steward, John Baxter; Assistant Steward, Wm. Boyd; Chaplain, A. Wayland; Treasurer, Jacob Vagt; Secretary, W. A. Cassidy; Gate Keeper, Fredrick Shabbel; Ceres, Mrs. Harriet Vagt; Pomona, Mrs. Emily Graves; Flora, Mrs. Janney B. Symmes; Stewardess, Mrs. S. E. Martin.

Another Insane Man.

Mr. V. G. Thompson, specially deputized for the purpose, brought in from Darwin on the 9th, a man named Frank Joseph, a Portugese, to be examined as to his fitness to be consingned to the Stockton Insane Asylum. This morning, Dr. White, U. S. A., and Dr Blair made the examination and found that he was truly insane.

Arrangements are being made to treat the little ones to a Christmas Tree festival, so all who wish to take part can prepare accordingly. It is not fully decided whether it will be in the Masonic Hall, the school house, or elsewhere, but will be soon.

Well Done, Mr. Bristow.

There is a healthy ring about Secretary Bristow's letter upon the charges made against him by the St. Louis whisky thieves. They have been trying to implicate him in the ownership of a distillery, no doubt partly in revenge, and partly in hope that finding his own reputation assailed he might relax his energy in the prosecution. But it is clear that he is not the kind of officer they have been accustomed to deal with, for he not only does not "weaken," but on the contrary, declares that he will now see to it that all the reports about himself shall have a full ventilation, and that the prosecutions will be pushed with, if possible, additional vigor, until the last thief is cornered, convicted and punished. We like the conclusion of the letter, especially, "I have read this to President Grant, who repeats his injunction, 'Let no guilty man escape.'" So the whisky thieves are in a more doleful plight than ever. They began by attempting to fasten suspicion on Babcock and Orville Grant, and that failed. Then they tried their hand on the Secretary himself, and with no better success. And unless some miracle occurs to save them, it looks very much as though they were booked for the penitentiary. Decidedly Bristow is a candidate for the kind of popularity which attends the performance of duty. Whether he is a candidate for the Presidency is an altogether different question.—[Union-Record.

Reliable from Panamint.

Mr. E. H. Boyd returned from his trip to Panamint and Darwin to-day. Mr. Boyd informs us that that region is coming out grandly. Mr. Messick, the Superintendent of Jones's Surprise Valley Mill and Water Company's interests, is working his mills up to capacity on hundred dollar ore. As to Darwin, the place is simply taking prodigious strides ahead. The opinion prevails now among well informed miners that Inyo county is the biggest thing in the way of mining on the Continent to-day. There is no limit to its development. This fact will undoubtedly give a powerful impetus to the immediate building of the Los Angeles and Independence Railway. Senator Jones is being at last remunerated for his large investments in that section, and for his patience in waiting for their outcome.—[Los Angeles Express, Nov. 23.

Denies It.

Henry F. Jelly, the sole surviving passenger of the Pacific, contradicts the assertion that Captain Howell took command of his ship in an intoxicated condition. He says the Captain was on the bridge when the mooring lines were cast off; that he afterward went into the pilot house, and he himself steered the steamer out of Victoria harbor.

—If England has purchased the Suez Canal, she kills two birds with one stone—aids her commerce, and keeps in her own control the near cut to India.

The Stock Law.

[COMMUNICATED.]

INDEPENDENCE, December 1.

MESSRS. EDS:—In your issue of November 27th, I notice an article entitled "For a Change in the Fence Law," saying that a strong effort would be made in the Legislature this Winter, to repeal the present stock law. In my opinion, as long as justice prevails, it can not be done, for the reason that the law now in force, is right to everybody. The Honorable Legislature will see plain that no improvements can be made by making the change. That is if the farmer has a right to ask protection in that honorable body from the ruin again threatened by re-imposing the heavy burden farmers at large have heretofore borne so long. You say that two years ago, that law gave the stock five months—it was only four in the twelve. That, in your opinion, "That law gave perfect protection to the growing crops," which is actually not so, for the reason the Fall crops are generally in the ground during that period beginning right now and all fixed for irrigation. The grain is sprouting and ready to grow, and I do not believe it to be a benefit to have a large band of stock pawing and fighting on it, after they have already take their fill from what little the farmer has saved for his own stock, a part of his hard earnings of the season. I for one need all I have got for my own stock, that is, if I do not want to depend on my neighbors; and if everybody provides for his own, this law will be just and right to every one.

On the other hand we do not keep the stockowners from herding their stock where there is a lot of feed going to waste. I believe that if the stockowners herd their stock away so it can do no damage and the farmer tills the soil, both parties can do a profitable business, but if the farmer shall stand guard night and day, and herd other people's stock for them, he certainly must neglect his own business; neither party does—one can't and the other won't. I think that the stockmen ought to be well satisfied in having all the public domain to herd on, and keep them away from the farmer to do it for them. And so far as the taxes is concerned, I believe we take now all the taxes out of the stock we can possibly ever get for the reason, that this valley can not feed any more stock then there is in it at the present time; that is if they do not depend upon the farmers, the stock would starve on the feed that is left on the public domain, and if the farmer or a few of them have pastures to rent, they certainly have worked hard to get them and have a right to rent them if they can. As a general thing if anybody puts up any fence, he does it for his own benefit to keep his own stock in and not to keep others out, for it is natural that everybody should fence in his own. Therefore the only change that can be made, is for the settlers or neighbors to see one another and make such arrangements as they see fit from time to time, which in my opinion will give satisfaction to both parties.

JACOB VAGT.

An Army of Builders at Work.

The grand army of builders again occupied the burnt district yesterday and the whole region resounded with the sound of their labors. Not only were swarms of workmen seen along the lines of the principal thoroughfares, but also far down on the slope of the mountain, wherever the flames had swept through the town. While the morning stars are still shining the builders and laborers of all kind flock to their work, and until a late hour at night the sound of hammers and saws are still to be heard in many a half-finished structure. The progress made is astonishing, even to those who are daily observers of the work that is being done, as every man labors as though for a wager, and, as we may say, with an eye upon the heavens. It is felt that every minute of fair weather is valuable, and the best possible use is made of it by all. A grand struggle is everywhere being made to get the new buildings inclosed and roofed, as once they are thus far advanced they can be completed, however stormy the weather may prove. Many structures have already reached this point of security, but the majority are not so far advanced and bad weather is therefore much to be dreaded.—[Virginia Enterprise, Nov. 27th.

Will you go, Will you go?

Won't somebody go to Santa Barbara? It must be terribly lonesome over there about now, to judge by a half a column in The Index of the most frantic appeals to "Come to Santa Barbara." But if no one will go there The Index wants a chance to get out itself, and cries out in another half column of distressing repetition to some one to "Open the gates of the Happy Valley;" and if that cannot be it wants to be "Crowned a new Winter King," whatever that may be. We should suggest a penny rattle and a sedative draught to divert its mind and compose its nerves, for if that is not a case of hysterics or jimjams it is not for the lack of symtoms.—[Bakersfield Courier.

Got a Daughter.

Senator John P. Jones has received a thanksgiving present in the shape of a bran new daughter, and the report is that both mother and babe are doing well. We beg leave to offer our congratulations to the happy parents and express the hope that the young lady, ushered into the world with a golden spoon in her mouth, may grow up an honor and comfort to her parents, or, in other works, that "she may live long and proper, and her families."—[Carson Tribune.

—Henry Ward Beecher has referred the case of Mrs. Moulton to a Congregation Council of Plymouth Church. More paroxysmal emotions may be expected.

A Prayer that Created an Unpleasantness Among the Sisters.

They came near having a row in a colored prayer meeting at Keytesville a few nights ago. One of the sisters, who had a grievance, prayed:

"O, Lord! look down 'pon Dy resembled children hyar dis ebenin', an' moob 'em with Dy grace. Tetch dyar harts wid de spirit ob all 'bounded lub. Build up dar faith so strong dat de debbil can't budge it, an' 'specially would we ax, if it am possible wid de Redeemer, dat Dou put a leetle mo sense into de objecticated pnte ob de yullaw wench what am a-giglin' on de bench preopposite Dy belubbed sarvant."

"What's dat you'se sayin' to de Lord 'bout me?" asked the wench, rising to a point of order.

Not seeming to notice the interruption, the supplicator continued:

"Gib our fool an' errin' sister more disgumption, oh Lord! to see de differumence atwixt right an' wrong, an' larn de huzzy to behave herself in Dy holy sankchooary, 'stead of wrigglum 'rounk like she was swallowed a corkscrew, an' 'taminetin' dese sacred precincts wid unholy winkin's at de male an' maskeline proportion ob dis assembled gatherin'. An' oh—"

"It's a lie! good Lord, it's a lie! an' Dou in Dy inflammated wisdom knows I nebber done it!" shouted the traduced member, who had now become nearly wild with rage. "Dar's not one particle of truf in it. It's a lie, an' I kin mash de lieress!"

With these words she threw herself over the bench on to the back of the kneeling sister, plunged her hands into the bustle of that devout but indiscreet person and lifted her up bodily.

Confusion reigned and dire dismay was in many faces that but a moment before were bright with the hope of heaven. But a stalwart deacon separated the females, reduced the unnaturally elevated bustle of the one, calmed the excited feelings of the other, and, addressing the relieved audience in an impressive tone, said:

"Brethern, it am better dat we dwell togeder in impunity. Less peal to de frone of grace dat dar be no moah such graceful disruption in our midst. Will Brudder Johnson make de 'peal in one ob his powerful prahrs?"

And the appeal was well and timely made.

General Pope's Report.

The report of General John Pope, commanding the Department of the Missouri, after a review of some length of the campaigns against the hostile Indians during the past year, says: "All the bands of Indians in the Southwest—the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Kiowas and Commanches—now at their respective agencies, were brought there by military force after a campaign of eight months of almost unprecedented hardship and exposure and after heavy expense to the Government. They are brought there, too, entirely subdued and in such condition and under such circumstances that there is no danger of further trouble with them if they are treated with common humanity and ordinary honesty, but unless they are properly fed they must suffer the pangs of hunger or starve to death. To see that they are so cared for, as well as the Government and humanity demands, and as the usual appropriations of Congress provide for, is the duty devolving upon another department of the Government. If honestly performed in the future, as I am sorry to believe it has not been in the past, further trouble with these Indians may be considered at an end." Referring to the feelings of the Indians, he says: "It is presumed that the appropriations made by Congress will be sufficient for this purpose, and I cannot, in view of the peace of this frontier, and the honor and good faith of the Government, too strongly urge that this subject be closely looked after, and measures more vigorous and efficient than hitherto be adopted and enforced without delay. The military have done all they had the power to do, and ought not to be held in any manner accountable for any further hostilities with these Indians, due to bad treatment and want of food at the agencies to which they have been forced to return and where they now are. It is with painful reluctance that the military forces take the field against Indians who only leave their reservations because they are starved there, and who must hunt food for themselves and their families or see them perish with hunger. It is revolting to see such things done and for the military to be a inactive party to commit violence on the forlorn Indians. I desire to say with all emphasis, and what every army officer on the frontier will corroborate, that there is no class of men who are so disinclined to war with the Indians as those of the army. The army has nothing to gain by a war with the Indians; on the contrary, it has everything to lose in such a war. It suffers all the hardship and privitations, and exposed as it is to the charge of assassination if the Indians are killed, and to the charge of inefficiency if they are not; to misrepresentation by agents who fatten on plunder of Indians, and misunderstood by worthy people at a distance, who are deceived by the agents. The following of a soldier has but little to expect from public feeling." He expresses the opinion that the maintenance of small posts is inexpedient. He says they are not necessary for defense or the aggressions required of the troops, and that they greatly increase the expense and are a positive injury to the discipline and efficiency of the troops themselves.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is an unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete polume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the readers of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure and animal subjects sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

Premium for 1875.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcomed in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member, and entitled to all the privileges of

The Aldine Art Union.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

Terms.

Jeremiah Jones Colbath.

[From The Eureka Sentinel.]

The above was the full and proper name of the late Henry Wilson up to the seventeenth year of his age. It was at that time that he conceived the idea of having his name changed by an Act of the Legislature. Various reasons have been assigned for his course in this connection, at least one of which is not very creditable to either his head or his heart. The Colbaths were very poor, so poor indeed that the family often suffered for the ordinary necessaries of life. There were seven children in the family, none of whom ever amounted to much except "Jeremiah Jones," and he not until he had received authority to assume the name of Henry Wilson. It has been often asserted that the young man was induced to change his name through humility at his humble origin, and for very shame for the poverty of his family. If true, this forms a very unworthy pretext and one which should detract no little from the esteem in which he was in after years. We hardly believe, however, that he was prompted by any such motive. It was customary in those days for lists of names to be sent to the Legislature for alteration, and it is more than probable that young Colbath forwarded his through a freak of vanity, or merely for the oddity of the thing and the local notoriety which it would give him. Another version of the affair is this: General Jackson had some time before paid a visit to New Hampshire—the Colbaths resided at Farmington, New Hampshire—and a man named Wilson had entertained him. The honor was considered great and Wilson's name immediately became so popular that young Colbath adopted it. From this time he has been known as Henry Wilson. But whatever the real cause, it must be admitted that it was a lucky stroke for the young statesman. There is a great deal in the name. Who would ever think of nominating Patsey Boliver or Timothy Tugmutton for the Presidency, notwithstanding both might be the most profound in the land in the science of Government. "Jeremiah Jones Colbath" is nearly as bad, and handicapped with such a name, we doubt if the late Vice President would ever have scored on the scroll of fame higher than a membership in some State Legislature. As we view it, the greatest achievement in the life of the late lamented was the swapping of his original name, Jeremiah Jones, etc., for the plain Henry Wilson, by which he was known during the whole of his distinguished public career.

The Way the Robbery was Managed.

Our friend Tom Stackpole gave us the details of the first robbery of the stage near Caliente. It was done by one man. He stepped out from behind a tree into the middle of the roadway and presented a gun, ordering the driver to stop. Having pulled up the stage, the coachman asked the brigand what he wanted. The reply was that Wells, Fargo & Co's box was what he wanted. Mr. Roberts, the agent of Wells, Fargo & Co., was in the stage, and the driver asked him whether he should deliver it up or not. Mr. Roberts ordered him to hand it out. The driver was a little slow about it, and peremptory brigand emitted one single word, "hurry up." The driver asked him where he should put the box. The answer was, "drop it on the road." Which was done, the whole incident occupying fully ten minutes. The coach was stopped on the up grade. About a mile from the scene of the robbery three men were discovered on the roadway, who called to the stage to stop. Mr. Roberts told the driver to put strings to the horses; and being on the down grade, the coach dashed rapidly past the pedestrians. Whether they contemplated a second robbery or only wanted a lift on the coach is one of those mysteries which, like that of the Iron Mask, will probably forever remain unsolved.—[Los Angeles Express, Dec. 8.

Holds the Balance.

The "one man power" bids fair to have some kind of an exemplification in the Colorado Legislature, which is composed of nineteen Republicans, nineteen Democrats and one Independent, who, of course, holds the balance of power on political questions.

Dan DeQuillism.

Shakespeare once asked, "What's in a name?" In some names there is much more than would appear at first sight. Under some circumstances names that ordinarily attract no attention "come out strong" and strike us forcibly. In Gold Hill, for instance, is a Mr. Kline, whose initials are I. D. Mr. Kline was a witness in a case that was up in the Justice's Court the other day. As he was not in the Court Room when wanted the Constable went to the door and proceeded to call him after the loud and measured manner usual in such cases. "I. D. Kline! I. D. Kline! I. D. Kline!" shouted the Constable.

"The devil you do!" cried an old fellow standing by. "If you don't want to take a drink can't you decline without coming out here and yelling so that the whole town can hear you?"

In this city some time since a Constable, under similar circumstances, made his appearance in front of a Justice's Court and in stentorian tones cried: "U. R. Smith!"

"I am, sir," said an old gentleman who was driving along the street, nodding his head and pulling up his team.

"U. R. Smith!"

"Yes, sir, that is my name," said the old fellow, considerably elevating his voice.

"U. R. Smith!" shouted the Constable for the third and last time.

"I am Smith and I don't care who knows it," yelled the old man growing red in the face. "Who in blazes are you?"

A thing of the same kind occurred over in Washoe county a year or two ago, when a Constable had to call a witness named Beers—I. C. Beers.

Mr. Constable stepped forth and vociferated: "I. C. Beers! I. C. Beers! I. C. Beers.

The first call aroused an old bum who was struggling to sit erect on the edge of the sidewalk. Rubbing his eyes and gazing in fuddled amazement at the Canstable, the old fellow waited until he had concluded his call, then approvingly said:

"Th-a that's right, old fellow! Keep yer eye o-on the blame s scamp!"

A Cheering Prospect.

Major C. H. Hempstead, of Salt Lake City, is in Los Angeles. He says that both Jay Gould and Sidney Dillon are determined to have a connection between the Los Angeles and Independence and Union Pacific Railways, through the instrumentality of the Southern Utah Railway, which is now finished to a point at least 115 miles below Salt Lake City. Major Hempstead is enthusiastic for the road, and is thoroughly familiar with the country to be traversed by it, including Callville and the Colorado river. Mr. E. J. Baldwin regards the extension of the Los Angeles and Independence Railway to a junction with the Union Pacific, at Ogden, as a geographical and business necessity of this section. The probability is that in a few weeks we shall have the Messrs. J. P. Jones, Wm. Sharon and E. J. Baldwin, down in Los Angeles, putting their heads together to discover ways and means to make the project a success. We understand, also, that Mr. Baldwin proposes to take a large amount of stock in a steamship line to ply between Santa Monica and San Francisco.—[Los Angeles Express.

Big Churches.

We think we have some big churches here in America, but very few have a seating capacity of over 1,500. The following table, showing the size of some of the big churches in Europe, will be apt to astonish some persons:

—It is the mind's wealth that makes the lover's body rich. Two bosoms with a single thought discharged themselves of that thought as follows: "Araminta, pet!" "What, Charles, dear?" "What dreadful cows, lovely!" "Eh, sweetie?" "I say 'what dreadful cows!' darling!" "Oh, did you, my own?" "Yes, duckey!"

—A man who was looking at a house some time ago said he could not afford to pay so much rent. "Well, consider the neighbors," replied the woman in charge. "You can borrow flat-irons next door, coffee and tea across the street, sugar and flour on the corner, and there's a large pile of wood belonging to the school house across the alley."

—An elderly woman in Chicago has been left five shares of stock in the West Division Railway Company. She now passes all her time in riding on the cars, paying her fare every trip. When asked the reason for this apparent extravagance she replied that she wanted to increase the revenues of the company. "It'll all come back to me in dividends," she said, "so that the more I expend the better off I am, don't you see."

A Boot-Black's Story.

[From The Detroit Free Press.]

When a dozen newsboys and boot-blacks had collected on the Custom House stairs yesterday, and when each one had grown tired of jaw-breakers and pop-corn balls, "Little English" remarked:

"Sposen Jim Cocoanut tells us a story."

"Sposen," remarked all the others.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked Jim, after a few digs at his head, "I will tell a true story about a girl. Her name was Marier, and she had yaller hair, blue eyes, small feet, and she was worth a million dollars."

"In stamps?" asked Cross-eyed Dick.

"In clean cash, right in the savings' bank," answered Jim. "This was an orphan, with no one to boss her around, and if she wanted to be out till 11 o'clock at night she could. There were piles of fellers after her to marry her, but stuck up her nose at the hull caboodle."

"What fur?" anxiously inquired Fire-cracker Tom.

"What fur? Why, she knew they loved her money instead of herself. She wanted some one to love her earnestly and like gosh. Well, one day when she was going down to the Postoffice to see if there was ary mail, a runaway horse came along. Marier fainted away and sat down in the road, and she'd have been broke all to pieces if it hadn't been for a boot-black 'bout my size. He pulled her into a shooting gallery, brought her to, and then hired a hull omnibus and took her home."

"And they fell in love and were finally married," remarked Suspender Johnson.

"No, my fellow countrymen," sadly replied Jim—"she gin him ten cents!"

"And is that all?" exclaimed three or four voices.

"All she gave him, and that turned out to be counterfeit!"

There was a long period of silence, and then Cocoanut Jim continued:

"Which is a lesson to us never to marry a girl worth a million dollars."

"And we never shall!" they solemnly replied.

Mayor Bryant's Inaugural.

Bryant, the new Mayor of San Francisco, delivered his inaugural address to the Board of Supervisors on the 7th instant. He denounced special legislation at Sacramento for San Francisco, believing that the Board of Supervisors should be vested with legislative powers. He recommended a revision of the consolidation act diminishing the number of officers, especially in the collection of taxes and licenses. He held that the Supervisors should have full power to regulate water, gas, and street railroad fares, and to condemn public and private property in furtherance of the public necessities in these respects; advocated the erection of a building for the exclusive confinement of Chinese offenders, male and female. He considered the police force ample, if well managed, and recommended the abolishment of the special system. He recommended a stringent license law regulating drinking saloons, and advocated reform in the management of the street department, and the exclusion of any material but stone from the pavements. He recommended the improvement by the city of land in Mission bay; the completion of the City Hall, and the erection of other public buildings required. He touched upon the water supply for fire purposes, recommending larger mains; advocated reform in the management of the Industrial schools, making provision for the separation of those confined for crime and those sent there for support.

A Touching Scene.

As soon as the funeral service at the new made grave of Colonel Thomas Jefferson Randolph was concluded, and before the grave was filled up, a veteran negro stepped forward and asked if there was any objection to a service by his people. He was told that such a tribute would be acceptable to the family, and then a scene that should go down to history was enacted. Quietly Mr. Randolph's former slaves assembled around him, and then swelled up from a hundred negro voices that most pathetic of hymns:

"Am I a soldier of the Cross
A follower of the Lamb."

A gentleman who was present says that in his whole life, extending over seventy years, he never witnessed anything so touching. When the last notes died away amid the oaks of Monticello, there was not a dry eye in the vast assemblage.—[Richmond Enquirer.

—A Saginaw lady sang out to her husband as he made his exit through the doorway: "Go to Bard's and get some No. 50 black thread, three cord." "K-ris-to-fer K-lumbo," mutter-d the head of the family, as he started after the wood-inspector to cord it up, "why didn't she order a car-load lot, and be done with it. Must be she is going to have the sewing society this week."

—Valuable birds — Gold eagles. When to look for the music of a hat—When the band buckles to it. When a sea captain is not a captain—When he's aboard. Lying in wait—False scales. "Circumstances (b)alter cases"—As Pomeroy may find. The man who stand almost anything but sitting down, is now lying off. A pair of cuffs—Two darkeys.

—Anything Midas touched turned to gold. In these days touch a man with gold and he'll turn into anything.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

No doubt President Grant will, by some, be accused of demagogueism for his stand on the school question, as set forth in his Message, on the ground that our school system is not threatened to such degree as to justify him in this attempt to make it a political issue at this crisis. If it is not in danger—if all are willing to acknowledge its vital importance to free government—and there are but few indeed, who will not—then President Grant is right in saying now is the time to place it beyond the reach of possible future dangers, now when it can be done without exciting the most dangerous, the most to be dreaded, of all political or religious issues. If there is no opposition to it, then both he and his party will fail in making any material capital through its advocacy. Doing violence to no feeling, threatening no possible danger to party or national freedom or principles of right, it ought to become a part of our fundamental law while it can, if for no other reason, because as a precautionary measure it takes it out of the possible range of politics for all time to come.

The Chavez Band.

A party of six Mexicans belonging to the Chavez band, attacked a store at Campo, San Diego county, December 4. They met with unexpected resistance, and only one of their number escaped with a whole skin. Mr. L. H Gaskill, who was in charge of the store handled a double barrel shot gun with the most deadly effect, though wounded by a pistol shot through the breast. S. E. Gaskill killed one of the robbers after being wounded in the shoulder. It is thought that the fugitives will all be captured. One or two wounded have already been captured. The occupants of the station had been expecting an attack for two weeks, up to the time of Chavez's death, but had slackened their vigilance for a few days before the assault when they were taken almost unawares. A mob soon after the arrest or the two robbers took them from the Sheriff and hung them.

Safe.

The very greatest anxiety has been felt in San Francisco and elsewhere for the long missing steamer, Los Angeles. But, to the immense relief of the friends of the numerous passengers aboard the old unseaworthy hulk, she is telegraphed as having been towed into Victoria by the British gunboat Rocket having been eight days under sail, he engines having broken down entirely. Her owners had dispatched three steamers to look her up.

Ross Browne Dead.

This popular writer died, after a short illness, at his residence in Oakland on the 9th instant. He was born in Ireland in 1817, but came to this country when a boy, and was among the pioneers of our State. Though Mr. Browne has held a numbrr of important places of trust, he is better known through his books, some of which will take rank among the most interesting and best written of the day.

Death of B. P. Avery.

The telegraph announces the death at Peking of Benjamin P. Avery, United States Minister to China. Before his appointment to this important position he was connected with the press of this State, latterly acting as editor of The San Francisco Bulletin and just previous to his appointment, managing the editorial affairs of The Overland Monthly.

Pertinent.

The San Francisco Post is evidently clear-headed on the following proposition: "Guibord being buried, the Catholic Bishop of Montreal has declared the place where he rests unconsecrated, and now we suppose there will be no effort to dig him up. But if the Bishop had only thought of this at first he might of saved all the trouble."

Libel.

In the suit of Representative Kasson, of Iowa, against The State Register, for libel, the Court, in instructing the jury, held that the publication being by a newspaper in the Congressional district concerning a candidate, was privileged; that an elector had a right to acquaint his fellow electors with anything which he knew, or had reason to believe, to be true concerning a candidate unfit for the position he sought.

Congress.

M. C. Kerr, of Indiana, was elected speaker of the House of Representatives by a vote of 173 to 106 for Blaine. All the other officers were elected as arranged by the Democratic caucus, and Congressional work has already made a fair start.

IN NEW HANDS.

The government of the State of California, from the Governorship down to the muncipal courts of San Francisco, has passed into entirely new hands, personally and politically, for the first time in many years. The Democrats now take the whole responsibility. Their majority is so large in both houses of the Legislature they can pass any measure they see fit. It lies in the power of this Legislature to "make or break" the party as regards future elections in this State. Should they carry out the pernicious doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils" to the extreme as some of them are very desirous of doing, we prophecy that the next Legislature and State government will not be Democratic, even though their general legislation this term should be quite up to the average in point of satisfaction given. Close communion in parties has had its day, and won't do. Should they, as some of them propose, decide upon a sweeping removal of Republicans and particularly of free thinking Democrats, from all subordinate places in the gift of Commissioners of the State Prison, State Asylums and numerous other places on the pretense of strengthening the party for the Presidential contest or for any other motive, they will certainly commit a fatal error. Yet it is going to be nearly impossible for them to withstand the importunities of the thousand and one hungry office seekers who demand a return for the work they have severally done for the party. We suspect the free thinking Democratic and Republican subordinate officers, and Boards subject to Legislative appointment, might all just as well commence to pack up for removal at once.

The work of organizing the Legislature was definently settled in the Democratic caucus. For form sake the Republicans made nominations for all the principal offices. The votes averaged about 63 Democratic to 12 Republican. In the Senate, Hon. B. F. Fuller, of Sonoma, was elected President, pro tem. and J. J. Shackleford for Secretary We notice the appointment of E. Gallager as one of the copying clerks, who, we think is an Inyo man, and the only one in either House.

Hon. G. S. Carpenter, of Eldorado, who stands high both as a man and parliamentarian, was elected speaker of the House on the first ballot. J. A. Murphy, of Del Norte, was elected speaker, pro tem. Robert Ferral, of San Francisco, was elected clerk. On the 8th both the retiring and incoming Governors delivered their Messages, that of Governor Pacheco being quite lengthy and somewhat peculiar. Governor Irwin's is pronounced quite an able document, and he himself makes a very favorable impression.

THE FIRST.

The very first bill to go to the Governor for his signature was one to put a hundred thousand dollars, more or less, into the hands of Wilson, Hinkle & Co., school book publishers of Cincinnati, the same who tried to bribe Parson Fitzgerald $3,000 worth to retain their Readers in the public schools of this State. We more than half sus this bill to make dummies—mere things—out of our State Board of Education—intelligent men who probably know more in one day about their duties and school requirements than nine-tenths of these legislative gentlemen combined could learn in six months' steady application—we half suspect this bill was rushed through in such haste to make some amends to that firm and the Parson on this baneful alleged bribery business, which did so much to defeat the Parson. It is not of the least consequence, touching this legislative act only, whether a change in Readers was advisable or was not advisable; the point is, certain powers were delegated to certain men selected because of their presumed especial fitness for, and knowledge of, their peculiar duties, but, at the very first moment when they propose, after months of consideration, to exercise one of those unquestioned powers, and that only in a partial degree, they are ruthlessly snubbed by a whole State Legislature without scarce a moment's consideration, and are practically told they are dishonest and are not to be trusted! If this was a matter of such vital importance there was a way to have held it in abeyance long enough to have given it that consideration its importance demanded, and if it was of but little importance of itself, why such haste to insult an important branch of our State Government? We hope Governor Irwin will veto the bill.

—Private Secretary Babcock has been indicted for complicity in the St. Louis whisky frauds.

—The late Treasurer of Saratoga county N. Y., has been arrested for a defalcation of $120,000.

—Chas. O'Conor is reported slowly sinking, with no hopes of his life. At last accounts his death was momentarily expected.

PRESIDENT GRANT'S MESSAGE.

President Grant's last message—and the last he will present to Congress during his term of office—is highly commended as a whole on all sides. That he has well studied all its bearings is quite evident. It disappoints expectations somewhat in its mildness with reference to Cuban and Spanish affairs showing nothing of the warlike tone anticipated. That may be accounted for for the reason set forth in a lengthy dispatch touching upon it given elsewhere, but, be that as it may, his reasoning on the subject is certainly sound and plausible.

The great length of the document precludes even a synopsis of its many points and we shall notice but a few. First, he refers to the necessity of keeping inviolate our free schools and recommends that Congress amend the Constitution making it a duty of States to establish and maintain public schools for the benefit of all children, irrespective of sex, color, birth-place or religion; forbidding the teaching in said schools of any religion, atheistic or pagan books or the appropriation of school funds to any other purpose. Second—He recommends that all church property be taxed, omitting only the edifices intended for divine worship and the resting places of the dead. He states what has been done in the Mexican troubles, but does not suggest as much cannon and sword in its adjustment as was expected from his character as a soldier. His message states that Venezuela is willing to pay the debt she owes us; and after treating upon the condition of the Alabama claims, the different treaties, and their relation to our commerce, the ocean cables, and the need of the revision of our naturalization laws, he comes to the important subject of finance. He believes the greatest possible prosperity will attend our country when we return to specie payment. In speaking of the Army and Navy, he deems them both in excellent condition, particularly the latter; and although suggesting improvements in both, reveals nothing as to the cause of the unusual movements of the latter. The policy heretofore pursued regarding the Indian question will not be altered; and urges that some steps be taken in the Mormon question and the importation of Chinese women. Other matters of lesser interest are treated upon, and all in a strong, clear, common-sense view. The message is well worth the careful perusal of all lovers of our republican institutions, and we believe will engender a greater love for our country, and cannot well fail to inspire a higher respect for its chief magistrate. In the future history of our country—when the time is passed to view this message as a possible electioneering document—we believe it will be accorded the very first place among all its predecessors for its statesmanlike, terse and comprehensive views of national policy. Following is the concluding portion:

As this will be the last annual message which I shall have the honor of transmitting to Congress before my successor is chosen, I will repeat or rascapitulate the questions which I deem of vital importance, and which should be legislated upon and settled at this session:

First—That the States shall be required to afford the opportunity of a good common school education to every child within their limits.

Second—No sectarian tenets shall ever be taught in any schools supported in whole or in part by the State, nation, or by the proceeds of any tax levied upon any community. Make education compulsory so far as to deprive all persons who cannot read and write from becoming voters after the year 1890, disfranchising none, however, on the ground of illiteracy who may be voters at the time this amendment takes place.

Third—Declare church and State forever separate and distinct, but each free within their proper spheres, and that all church property shall bear its own proportion of taxation.

Fourth—Drive out licensed immorality, such as polygamy and the importation of women for illegitimate purposes. To recur again to the Centennial year, it would seem as though now, as we are about to begin the second century of our great existence, would be thought a most fitting time for these reforms.

Fifth—Enact such laws as will insure a speedy return to a sound currency, such as will command the respect of the world.

Believing that these views will commend themselves to the great majority of the right-thinking and patriotic citizens of the United States, I submit the rest to Congress.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT.

Executive Mansion, Dec. 7, 1875.

Grant's Message—Change of Grant on the Cuban Question.

A Washington special says: The country not less than the House is taken by surprise at the moderation of the President's Message in relation to the Cuban question. It was known beyond a doubt that General Grant had been slowly maturing the purpose of bringing the Spanish campaign in Cuba to a crisis. His sympathies were openly expressed, and to some extent an assurance was given to the friends of Cuban independence that an energetic protest should be addressed preparatory to a formal recognition of belligerency on the part of the rebels. Gen. Grant never apprehended war as the result of this recognition. It is alleged hence that on beginning the message he had clearly made up his mind to lay the case plainly before the country, avowing his sympathy with the insurgents. A singular piece of inside history has been made known at the eleventh hour. The Fish policy, as it may be called, prevailed; and that portion of the message which had already been written in accordance with the President's strong inclination, beginning at the seventh paragraph of that section pertaining to our relations with Cuba was obliterated, and the present utterances substituted. The Republicans are naturally unwilling to discuss the matter, but it is understood by those familiar with the political changes going on within the party that the interests of the Republican future demand an end of entangling or outside alliances, and that any policy involving war or rumors of war tends to distract the country, and shake confidence in the party in power. It is known that the changes referred to in the message were only brought about after the election of Kerr, which not only alarmed the ring and subsidy people, but warned the Republican leaders that the Democratic party is, for the time being at least, resolved upon a policy of wisdom and conservatism. Had Randall been elected there can be no doubt, from the evidences present, that General Grant would have been urged by this virtual caucus of Republican leaders to forego his intentions of a Cæsarian policy in settling the Cuban trouble. While the Democrats are chagrinned at ths escape of the Administration from the dilemma in which pronounced action would have placed them, there is wrath beyond expression in the ranks of those credulous believers in Cuban freedom who have invested in insurgent bonds and Havana corner lots. This class is by no means a limited one. There is and has been for the last four years a Cuban Ring which has possessed itself of many of the important papers of the country to plead the cause of a dwindling rebellion which calls itself the Cuban Government. Whatever General Grant's interest in Cuban freedom may be, beyond his sympathy with struggling armies, it is probable that the same motives which urged him to the San Domingo acquisition were not altogether ignored in his new venture.

Encouraged by the election of Kerr and the tractable spirit of the Southern members, the National Democratic Executive Committee, now in session, has arranged a plan of action for the guidance of Congress and the future of the party. It has been resolved that Congress shall grant no subsidies this Winter, and shall vigorously diminish appropriations and current government expenses; that investigation into all forms of government expenditures shall at once be set on foot, and, as far as practicable, economy shall be adopted.

Circulars Issued.

The State Board of Equalization has issued circulars as follows, for the information of County Treasurers:

"DEAR SIR:—Your attention is called to the last paragraph of Section 3,816 of the Political Code (new section added in March, 1874), which is in these words: 'Whenever the State shall receive from the Tax Collector any grant of property so sold for taxes, the same shall be recorded, at the request of the County Treasurer, free of charge by the County Recorder, and shall be immediately reported by the County Treasurer to the Board of Equalization.' The sales here referred to are those mentioned in Section 3,773 (as amended), in which the State may have become the purchaser, and which may not have been redeemed. You are requested to call upon the Tax Collector for such deeds as the State may be entitled to under the laws referred to, and report the same as early as possible to this Board. Your report should contain the name of the delinquent taxpayer, the amount for which the property was sold, the date of the sale, the date of the deed, and a description of the property."

In this county there are a very large number of deeds of the above kind waiting record but as no provisions is made for the fees, County Auditor Hammarstrand, has, we believe, refused to place them on record, and in the nature of the case we don't see but he is perfectly right in so doing. He is not a salaried officer and neither the State Board of Equalization nor the Legislature itself has any right to impose work upon such an officer without compensation, any more than a private citizen has to demand the recording of a deed or other document without paying the fee.

—Said a distinguished politician to his son: "Look at me! I began as an alderman, and here I am at the top of the tree; and what is my reward? Why, when I die, my son will be the greatest rascal in the city." To this the young hopeful replied: "Yes, dad, when you die—but not till then."

—Ex-Senator Nye, of Nevada, has so far recovered that his friends have removed him from the retreat for the insane.

—Rev. Mr. Talmadge preached a violent sermon December 5, in Brooklyn, insisting upon the Bible in schools.

Legislative.

On the 8th in the Senate, Edgerton introduced a bill for the amendment of section 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to the place of meeting of the Supreme Court. Mr. Edgerton stated that under the present law two terms of the Court—the April and October terms—were held in Sacramento, and two—January and July terms—in San Francisco. The amendment proposed that the January term in addition should be held in Sacramento, leaving only the July term in San Francisco. He was informed that the bill met with the approbution of the Judges of the Supreme Court. Read first and second times and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Haymond introduced a bill calling a State Constitutional Convention. Read first and second times and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Laine introduced a bill for the extension of the time for the payment of delinquent taxes for the current fiscal year. The bill allows until the first Monday in May, subject to 10 per cent. interest from the 1st of January. Read first and second times and referred to the Judiciary Committee, and ordered printed.

Hendricks intsoduced a bill providing for the collection of taxes, to make them delinquent semi-annually. Read first and second times and referred to the Judiciary Committee

Pierson introduced a bill for calling a State Constitutional Convention. Read first and second times, ordered printed, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Laine introduced a bill amending the political Code concerning the redemption of property sold for delinquent taxes. Read first and second times and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Tuttle introduced a bill prohibiting unnecessary changes in text books. The first clause of the bill provides that books in use in 1873-4 shall be continued in use until otherwise ordered by the Legislature, notwithstanding any action of the State Board of Education. Read first and second times, rules suspended and ordered for final passage. A discussion arose on the desirability of its immediate passage, which was advocated by Tuttle and Lewis, and oppsed by Bush, Evans and Laine.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Went Away.

Collins, the blanket stealer, habeas corpussed himself, Wednesday evening, and is now very scarce in these parts--this place was too dull for him altogether. As the Sheriff did not feel that he had sufficient authority, under the peculiar conditions of the commitment, to keep Mr. Collins (this was not the mysterious Tom) in close confinement until his case was decided, as it was to have been on the following day, he was allowed the liberty of the court house except at night when he wus furnished safe lodgings in the sweat-box. On the evening in question Under Sheriff W. L. Moore went to lock him up as usual but just before doing so Joseph, the crazy man, got to carrying on so furiously as to require immediate attention. While the Under Sheriff was having a by no means easy or pleasant struggle with the crazed Portuguese, Collins nimbly and very foolishly stepped out, and no doubt had to pass the night without any blankets or other comforts. The worst of it is he spoiled a trial on habeas corpus, the points being of considerable interest to committing magistrates, while at the same time they would pretty surely have permitted Mr. Collins to have gone forth a legally free man without all that disagreeable hurry he imposed on himself. But Judge Hannah has become so decidedly averse to turning prisoners, manifestly guilty, loose on mere technicalities he will not do it unless legally and clearly compelled, and it is possible a knowledge of that fact may have troubled Collins. Our account of some points connected with this case, given last week, was somewhat mixed up. We got it second handed and thought it was very peculiar, but in what particular is not necessary now to specify.

Catches One.

Those gentlemen who drive such a profitable business selling tarantula juice to poor Lo and his wife have heretofore had a pretty safe thing, and in general, will probably continue to have. But Frank Dabeeny, down at Lone Pine, it seems, got rather careless, and in consequence comes to grief to the extent of a $300 fine or as many days in the county jail. He liked the latter alternative the best, we suppose, since he come up to begin his term Thursday last. It may be, though, his choice was due to the fact that he don't think that the Code will allow Justice Peterson, before whom he was tried, or any other Justice to dab it to any criminal to exceed six months' durance, and that therefore he hopes to escape that and the fine, too, on that ground, as it is to be feared he will. District Attorney Snelling prosecuted the case. We know nothing as to the character of the testimony adduced, but presume it was neither Indian or merely circumstantial.

Darwin Matters.

Parties just in from Darwin tell us hard cash is a little scarce out there as yet, but that,otherwise, everything is as prosperous and encouraging as could be desired. George Gill, who has been out there for a week or two, says the display of vast bodies of rich ores in the Defiance is truly astonishing—tons of it in sight, which he was assured, would average over a thousand dollars a ton, working process. Though he did not look into but one or two other mines, one being the Independence, the prospects of that and several others, he had reason to believe, were, in certain proportions, quite as flattering and satisfactory as the Defiance. He also saw specimens of ore, said to be found in quantities, from a mine in Lee district, fourteen miles to the northward, that actually appeared to be from from thirty to forty per cent. silver. Mr. Lynch, one of the owners of this mine, is, as we have before stated, now below after the machinery for a mill for it.

Real Estate Transfer.

P. P. Gerrish recently purchased of Judge Hanson the Chaquette ranch, adjoining and partly included in the Camp Independence Reservation. It contains 320 acres, and with the improvements, is well worth the price at which it is valued, viz., $8,000. Mr. Gerrish's family have just taken up their residence on the place, making another draft on that class of our town population we can least afford to spare. Mr. Gerrish himself, however, does not yet propose to become an active Granger, having rented the place to Messrs. Wilson & Boyd, who "sabe" the business.

Big Hotel.

Judge Hanson is going to have a large addition (two stories, 25x60 feet) to his Darwin hotel, which will then, we believe, be the largest in the county. Mr. Gerrish, now here on a brief visit, and brother have the contract for its construction, and can put it through in as short a time and in as good shape as anybody.

Leaked.

Mr. Gerrish informs that after the Defiance furnace had run three days it was found to leak in the bottom, as is often the case with new furnaces, so much it was deemed best to cool down and repair, which will cause a detention of not more than a week. Otherwise this splendid furnace is a perfect success.

New Postoffice.

We observe that a Postoffice has been established at George's Creek, Charles Keppler, mine host of the Half Way House, being the appointed Postmaster. This is "better as goot."

Still Rages.

It will be observed by reference to "Married," that the matrimonial epidemic is spreading northward, having reached Bishop where it made an unusually heavy draft on one family. The sufferers have our sympathies, and at the same time this office owes them warm thanks for their generous remembrrnce of ye miserable printers. We learn that a large number of invited guests were present to commiserate the double taking off in one ceremony, and also to enjoy a munificent dinner and general good time. Munching cake our satanic devil says: "By the Powers of mud, I hope the happy quartette may have a quadruple share of happiness and daughters in their respective Holmes, whether they are blessed with Arri-son or a dozen!" To which we add, may their troubles be little ones.

Earthquake.

Quite a severe earthquake shook up the country north from Big Pine, perhaps to Benton, between 10 and 11 o'clock a week ago last night. In Round and Pleasant Valleys, and in the mountains west of Bishop Creek it was the severest felt since the big one of '72. One chimney in Pleasant Valley, we believe, was shaken down and people generally hunted for places of safety. On the following Monday there was another slight one. It is singular, but true, say 50 miles south of the center, it was not remarked at all by any person, so far as we have heard.

Cerro Gordo.

Mr. John Belshaw, of Cerro Gordo, dropped in on us, the other evening, and from him we learn that the Belshaw furnace is kept running steadily, but on ores from other mines than the Union. He is working the Buena Vista, and is also running considerable of the Belmont silver ores, mostly from the Whittikind and Belmont mines. Beaudry's furnace is yet idle, but Mr. Belshaw is confident a different state of affairs will obtain up on the Hill in about a month. This is contingent materially on the settlement of that big mining suit, which, so far as he is advised, has not finally been consummated as yet.

Still Another.

If families continue to depart from our midst as they have been doing recently our town will soon relapse into bachelor barbarism—unless a continuance of the matrimonial epidemic, which looked so threatening a short time ago, should continue long enough to compensate the loss, but which, by reason of the time required, it would hardly be able to do. Among the later removals is that of Register McCallum's family, who started Monday for a few week's sojourn in Sacramento, but intend to return to this county, probably Darwin, in the Spring.

Races and Fun Generally.

The Jockey Club are making preparations for two days' racing on the splendid track at Harry Wright's, beginning on Thursday, December 30, for particulars of which see advertisement in another column. Besides the set and numerous match and scrub races on the tapis, there will also be a firstrate show for all who can shoot or raffle to win turkeys, as Harry has a large lot on hands for that express purpose. Take along your rifles.

Another Mining Operator.

Mr. John Eva, Superintendent of the San Carlos Exploring and Mining Company, arrived here this week, and has fitted out with necessaries to go to work at once on the old San Carlos property across the river, east of this place. We do not know to what extent this work is to be carried out.

To Whom it May Concern.

Teamsters and others interested will do well to read what Mr. Nadeau, Superintendent Cerro Gordo Freighting Company, has to say in two certain advertisements in this issue, and then stop stealing if they can as well as not.

Ball at Big Pine.

We are requested to extend a general invitation to everybody to attend a fine ball, to be given at Mr. J. W. McMurry's, Big Pine, on Christmas Eve. Now here's a chance for all, so inclined, to go and have an enjoyable time.

Christmas Tree.

It is arranged that we are to have a public Christmas Tree at the Masonic Hall on Christmas (Saturday) night. It is understood that old Kris himself will be there in all his smiling ugliness, and if anybody wants to give anybody anything he will deliver it with pleasure. Doors open Saturday morning.

For Stockton.

Register McCallum started below on Thursday morning, expecting to be gone some thirty days. As special deputy he had in charge Frank Joseph, the crazy man committed to Stockton. Joseph's case is considered nearly hopeless, both in regard to his mind and bodily health.

Gift Books.

We observe that Postmaster Rowley has lately received a fine assortment of the most beautiful books for children and all sorts of people, just the thing to hang on a Christmas Tree to make the recipient proud as long as the leaves hold together.

Organized.

The Inyo County Jockey Club completed their organization Wednesday last by the election of the following officers: H. C. Wright, President; P. W. Bennett, Vice President; H. L. Childs, Secretary, and H. M. Isaacs, Treasurer.

Some Swine.

Friend J. A. Lank killed a porker the other day the net weight of which was 478 pounds; it tasted very good, though, notwithstanding his bigness and youth, being but a yearling.

A New Stock on the Board.

A short time since the stock of the Defiance (Coso) Company was put on the San Francisco Stock Board. At first, prior to the settlement of the threatened litigation, it hung fire at $2 per share; as soon as the settlement was made known, all on the market sold readily at $5, so we learn through Mr. Rhine. We think there is scarce a doubt this stock will go much higher than that when the true merits of the property becomes demonstrated, as it will be in a few weeks.

Government Mules.

A band of some seventy or eighty newly purchased Government mules, under "command" of Lieut. Greenough, Fourth Artillery, arrived here from the lower country Monday. They are to be wintered here for use in the Spring in a continuance of the Wheeler explorations. We have seen finer looking animals, but they probably have the requsite amount of cheek to make them good Government mules.

Personals.

Mr. Rhine, of Harris & Rhine, got home from San Francisco, a day or since, having been detained somewhat longer than he anticipated. Superintendent P. Reddy also got back as far as Darwin about the same time. Mr. Briggs, of our Land Office, was to have started for this place on the 14th, and, if he did so, should be here to-day.

The Last Day.

Mine owners should bear in mind that, under the law of Congress, all assessment work on mining claims for 1875, must be completed by the 31st instant; in default the claims become jumpable.

Preaching.

Rev. L. Case will preach in Lone Pine at 11 A. M., and in this place at 7 P M., to-morrow.

Sunlight at Last.

[From The Detroit Free Press.]

Why did this woman live? Had life one charm for her? Perhaps she asked herself these questions as she sat with her face in her hands and looked out upon the cold, cheerless day. There were no tears in her great black eyes--only such a look of woe and despair, that the world should have been there to see it and to have it painted on their hearts.

"Mother!"

A little wasted form on the wretched bed--a bony hand on the ragged quilt--a voice which told of hunger and pain and weary waiting.

She bent over him, and for a moment a mother's love shone in her eyes, and her wrinkled hand rested on his pale face with such tenderness as only a mother has.

"Lift me up and let me see the sunshine," he whispered, trying to put his arms around her neck.

"There is no sunshine," she whispered in reply, a sob in her throat.

"Kiss me, mother, and call me when the sunlight comes again," he said.

She knew that he had been dying for a week--sinking slow and surely into eternity, but she had no friends to call in--she could only weep over him and pray God that she might soon follow. With a gasp and a sob she pressed her lips to his forehead, than turned away to struggle with her despair and her great sorrow.

The cloudy, cheerless day faded into dusk. She roused herself for a moment and peered through the gloom to see if her boy still slept, and then she whispered with her thoughts again. And such thoughts!

When the darkness covered the bare floor as with a mantle, and when she could no longer see her own poverty, the boy suddenly cried out:

"Mother! mother! The sunlight has come!"

"Not yet, dear Ned--not yet! It is night now."

"But I see the sun--it lights all the room—it blazes into my face!" he called.

"There is no sun--it is cold and dark!" she sobbed.

"And it grows brighter! and I hear such sweet music! and I see little Tommy!" he whispered while through the darkness she saw his white face grow radiant.

"You are dreaming!" she sobbed.

"It was such a bright sun! The music is so sweet!" he whispered, clasping her hand.

"It is dark--it is night!" she gasped, but he did not hear.

The sunlight had truly come, but it was the sunlight--the golden rays reflected from the gates of heaven--and not the sunlight of earth. The mysterious curtain hiding the valley of death had lifted for his spirit to pass under, and woe had been left behind.

And of her? Ask the shadow of night--ask the river. When they found his little dead body she was not there. They cannot find her. If she is dead God did not judge her harshly.

The Boss.

A New York dispatch of the 6th says: "There are no tidings of Tweed yet. It is asserted that Tweed's nephew purchased the bark Lord Clarendon several weeks ago. The vessel was cleared and all preparations completed Tweed was taken aboard on Saturday evening, and is now on his way to South America. Others assert that he has gone to Canada, where it is reported that Tom Fields and Harry Genet are living."

The University.

The regents of California University estimate the annual income at $95,000 and the expenses, for the fiscal year ending May 31st 1876, at $158,000 leaving a deficit of $33,000 to be furnished by the Legislature.

Our Cerro Gordo Letter.

CERRO GORDO, Dec. 15.

MESSRS. EDS:—When I look at the date of this communnication I can't help but be astonished, it being so near the middle of Winter and the weather yet so remarkably fine! It is certainly a matter of regret, though, with us that the season hitherto has been so dry, as the Cerro Gordo crops are apt to suffer from the drought. (I believe it will be better for you to label all my attempts at a joke, on account of their "plain" obscurity).

I have but just returned from a visit to Darwin, whither I had been on a visit. The comparison between the atmosphere of that camp and this is a study, both for men of science and stockholders (joke). Here all is smoky, dust fills the air and settles over everything; in fact, the table-cloths in the hotels, restaurants, etc., are sprinkled with particles, which, although like pepper in appearance, are far more deadly to taste. There, in Darwin, health and cleanliness prevails; no smoke, no vile fumes or soot disturb the breath enhaled, together with their whisky, by the inhabitants thereof (joke). There, unlike this, no follower of Esculapius is required to restore the lead-poisoned stomachs of the Darwinites to health and vigor, for they have no such stomachs—unless produced by a pistol ball.

Regarding the settlement of the law suit between the San Felipe and Messrs. Belshaw and Beaudry, nothing can be learned of any importance, though the probabilities undoubtedly are that the mine will be opened before long, to the very great benefit of all Inyo. The success of our mining camps is of such vital interest to ranchers I should think they would generally feel that their personal fortunes were very much involved in the settlement of this particular suit—and I suppose a good many of them do. C. G.

Babcock.

A St. Louis special says that Gen. Babcock, President Grant's private secretary, has been indicted for complicity in the whisky frauds. His prompt trial and conviction, so says one of our Democratic exchanges, if guilty, will please Republican politicians immensely, for he was the power behind the throne, greater at times than the throne itself.

A Good Man Gone.

It is with feelings of unfeigned sorrow that we announce the sudden death of a brother journalist and a warm and cherished friend. Yesterday afternoon at half-past one o'clock, in the city of Austin, Andrew Casamayou, in the 52d year of his age, after a few days illness, breathed his last. Deceased was born in the south of France, at the base of the Pyreonnes, and within a few miles of the Spanish frontier. At an early age he came to the United States and settled in St. Louis, where he learned the printing buisiness. He came to the Pacific coast at an early date, residing, during his residence in California principally in Nevada county, where he was at one time associated with E. B. Waite in the publication of The Nevada Transcript. He was afterwards engaged in the milling business in Washoe valley and at the time of the Reese River excitement in 1863, he removed to Austin, where, up to the time of his death, he resided. In August, 1871, he and the present junior of The Sentinel purchased The Reese River Reveiile, of which deceased was editor and proprietor at the time of his his death. He wielded a forcible pen and as an annotatory writer had but few superiors among the journalists of the Pacific coast. * Generous to a fault, and scrupulously honest, he was universally respected and beloved, and his loss will be regarded as a public calamity by the community of which he was a member.—[Eureka Sentinel, Dec. 8.

Confusing Effects of the Small-Pox.

I was but little over sixteen, and had returned from school a very pretty-looking girl, with fine eyes, teeth, and hair, a clear vivid complection, and rather good features. The small-pox did not affect my three advantages first named, but, besides marking my face very perceptible, it rendered my complexion thick and muddy, and my features heavy and coarse, leaving me so moderate a share of good looks as quite to warrant my mother's satisfaction in saying, when I went on the stage, "Well, my dear, they can't say we have brought you out to exhibit your beauty." Plain I certainly was, but I by no means always looked so; and so great was the variation in my appearance at different times, that my comical old friend, Mrs. Fitzhugh, once exclaimed, "Fanny Kimble, you are the ugliest and the handsomest women in London!" And I am sure if a collection were made of the numerous portraits that have been taken of me, nobody would ever guess any two of them to be likenesses of the same person.—[Mrs. Kimble, in December Atlantic.

Palace Hotel Statistics.

P. M. Wellen, as foreman, had charge of receiving all the wood-work of the Palace Hotel, of which he kept a regular account. In summing up he finds some interesting facts, for instance:

There were 298 miles of mouldings used in the interior, around the doors and windows; 101 miles of casings, to doors and windows; 26½ miles of baseboards, and 22¼ miles of door jambs.

There were 1,963 window frames, 3,441 pairs of sash, and 60,126 feet of inside blinds. There are 2,125 turned and fluted columns in use as supports to the corridor, dining and breakfast-rooms, office, halls and bay-windows.

The sky-light over the court is 88x144 feet, the largest in the world. The glass is supported by 3½ miles of sash bars. The millions of brick, barrels of lime and cement, the tons of iron and tons of putty are not included in this statement. It is 136 feet from the lower floor to the top of the ridge pole of the sky-light.

Patents.

The following is a list of patents issued to inventors of California for the week ending December 4th, 1875, and each dated November 16th, 1875, furnishep this paper by Cox & Cox, Solicitors of Patents, Washington, D. C.: Windmills, A. Campbell, Oakland; Composition for destroying vermin, J. Steele, San Francisco; Sack Holder, H. Clark, Red Bluff; Machine for Operating Derricks, A. Jackson, Mohawk Valley; Cigar Machine, C. Talbotchare, San Francisco; Lock for Fire Arms, G. Williams, San Francisco; Pencil Sharpener and Erasers, J. Hall, San Francisco; Ore Roasting Furnace, W. McCall, San Francisco; Boiler Coverings, I Merrell, San Francisco.

Mind This.

To extinguish kerosene flames fling a cloth over them, or if the flour barrel is handier, throw on flour, which absorbs the fluid, kills the flames, and can be readily cleared up afterward.

—A story is going the rounds about a girl whose mother was frightened by a cat, and when the girl grew up, got married, and had a baby, she always litted it out of its crip by the back of its neck with her teeth. Such instances as this are not uncommon. There is a man in this town whose mother was frightened by a snake, and every once in a while he has snakes in his boots.—[Reveille.

—"Ma, ma! the preacher's coming here!" "Great Lands!" he heard her shout, "and my hair down, and I've got this old dress on! Run to the door, Bill, and tell him I went to Goose Island on a church excursion!" "Oh, no, I hate to," replied the boy. "Go, go quick—hurry up, or I'll tan you till you can't raise a foot," she urged, and the lad went to the door and discouraged the preacher from making his call.

—"Where do men go who deceive their fellowmen?" asked a Sunday school teacher of a pupil. "To Europe," was the prompt reply.

—A new name for tight boots—A corn crib.

The Mormons.

It is reported that the Mormons are maturing a plan to purchase the Holy Land and set themselves up in Jerusalem. The finances of the Sick Man of Europe are in a desperate condition, and it is intimated that he is willing to sell out for ready cash which he so much needs. The Mormons, it is likewise said, are more to the liking of the Turks than the "Christian dogs" who have been giving them so much trouble of late. So far as polygamy is concerned, Joe. Smith's doctrine agrees with that of Mahomet, and there is certainly a common standing ground between the two people that would not be possible on the part of any other Christian or European sect. The Mormons are bound to move somewhere from their present location or give up polygamy, which is their chief bond of unity. They have already moved twice to escape advancing civilization, and it is known that they have of late been casting ther eyes about for a new camping place. But it is not likely that the Christian Powers would ever allow the Holy Land to fall into the hands of such a motley crew. The sentiment of veneration is by no means dead. The Crimean war, which resulted in such fierce clash of arms and so much bloodshed, was started by a collision between the Latin and Greek monks at the Holy Sepulchre, with reference to the lighting of a particular lamp. It is not probable therefore that sanction could be obtained for the scheme proposed by the Mormons, even if it has already been formed.—[Idaho Avalanche.

—Hard times are complained of in Paris, and Worth, the man milliner, is said to be embarrassed through the failure of fashionable Americans.

Our Relations With Spain.

A Washington special says the following information respecting our relations with Spain has been obtained from high Gvernment authority. The Spanish note was received last Wednesday. It is very long, friendly and conciliatory, but it is not entirely satisfactory. The note refers to two subjects. First, the interpretation of the treaties between the United States and Spain, and the modifications recently proposed. Second, the present condition of affairs in Cuba, so far as they effect American commercial interests and rights of our citizens. It is probable that a perfect understanding may be reached upon the first subject, although it is not certain that all the modifications will be made which Minister Cushing has been laboring to secure. Spain has submitted five proposals, either one of which would relieve many of the present causes of dissatisfaction, but neither of which exactly accord with the ideas of the Administration. The note will probably be further considered on Tuesday next. The President and Cabinet have not yet decided what disposition they will finally make of it. Although it was announced in thd cable dispatches that this this note is the ultimation of the Madrid Cabinet, there is reason to believe that there will be further correspondence on the minor points of the proposition submitted. It is understood that Spain renews the assurance that it will remove all just causes of complaint growing out of the disregard of the rights of persons and property of our citizens. There has been no serious difference of opinion between the two countries as to what should be done. The natural tendency of the Spaniards to postpone has been greatly increased by the weakness of the home Government and the disregard of the authorities in Cuba of its decrees. As to slavery in Cuba the United States and Spain are agreed so far as diplomatic correspondence goes. Spain has made a decree of emancipation, but the United States has complained that it has not been enforced, and from present appearances it is difficult to believe that Spain will be able to enforce it in the near future. Many other questions are in almost the same condition. If the Spanish Government was able to accomplish what she promised, the United States would have little ground of complaint. The President has decided that the present condition of Cuba does not justify its recognition as an independent nation, or the recognition of their rights as belligerents. There is the highest authority for stating that the President does not contemplate intervention in Cuba, and that he considers no other policy would be more disastrous to the United States than the annexation of that island. It is understood that the President's plan of settling the Cuban question is to induce Spain to consent to make Cuba such a semi independent colony as Canada is, and that the President is believed to favor even consolidation of all the Spanish West India Islands in a Colonial Confederation. The annexation of the vast mass of ignorant Spaniards and half-breeds would be contrary to the President's views on educated suffrage, which he has set forth in his message.

Great Destitution Among Horses and Sheep in Arizona.

Parties recently arrived in this county from Arizona report that of 700 horses with which they started to Arizona two months ago, they only reached their destination with 150. Most of them were poisoned by drinking bad water. The bands of sheep which left California late in the Summer for that region died by hundreds on the desert. The feed on the other side of the Colorado was good, but on this side there was no subsistence for man or beast, and the great bulk of the stock driven during the past few months in that direction perished.—[Bakersfield Courier.

—Ten thousand panes of glass broken in Rolla, Missouri, by a hail storm. All hail! As usual, the hail stones were the size of the egg of a pigeon.

—A fatal epidemic prevails among the Indians at Tejon, Kern county, having the symptoms of a malignant form of Typhus fever.

A Mormon View of the Message.

If President Grant could have realized how his message was to be demolished by the priesthood of Mormondom, he probably would have made no reference to polygamy in Utah. The Deseret News, Brigham Young's Church organ, has the following singular criticism on that portion of the message devoted to affairs in Zion:

If a President considers polygamy such a dreadful crime, as President Grant appears to do, it is perfectly natural that he should call the attention of Congress to the subject, as one of the particulars showing the state of the Union.

From our standpoint, however, we see no necessity for the President to concern himself about the topic mentioned, as will appear by the following:

1. Polygamy is not a "crime against decency and morality."
2. Polygamy is not a "crime" at all of itself.
3. Polygamy is not an "unnatural vice."
4. Polygamy is not a "vice" at all. Therefore, it is not "anomalous" if not "preposterous" that "polygamy should exist in a free enlightened and Christian country." It would be "anomalous" and "preposterous" were it otherwise.
6. Therefore, polygamy should not be punished "as a crime." It should not be statutorily made a "crime." It should not "be banished from the land," and therefore no law is needed for that purpose.
7. Polygamy is one of the most natural things in the world.
8. Polygamy is a virtue.
9. Polygamy in Utah is wholly a religious institution, with which the civil law has constitutionaly nothing to do.
10. Therefore, Congress has not the shadow of a right to interfere with polygamy in Utah, it being outside of the constitutional purview of that body, excepting, perhaps, where it is made a civil contract or ceremony, any instance of which we do not know in this Territory.
11. Congress, however, has the power to make laws authorizing or forbidding polygamic civil marriages, but it has no such authority concerning polygamic religious marriages, a very essential distinction, which the President does not seem to realize.

Stimulants.

At the recent opening of the Winter session of the Newcastle College of Medicine, in connection with the Durham University in England, Mr. Henry Armstrong delivered the inaugural address to the students. In the course thereof, Mr. Armstrong submitted a few friendly hints as regards duty to patients, and on the question of stimulants he said: "In practice you will see much of the evil of the age, alcoholic intemperance, and unless you are careful, may be met by the ugly misgiving of having been the cause of it in some of your patients. 'My medical adviser tells me to take wine,' or 'My doctors say I require stimulants,' are expressions commonly used by persons who have long discontinued all other medicines, but regard the prescription of alcohol as a standing order, and thus acquire a pernicious habit. To avoid such an event, when prescribing the wine or spirit necessary for a case, you will do well to give it in stated doses, and at regular hours, or even to have it mixed with the drugs. Under all circumstances, see to its discontinuance at the proper time."—[Rescue.

Picking up a Pin.

We read of a young man who once went to the city of Paris to seek a situation. He had letters of recommendation to a large banking establishment. He called on the gentleman who was at the head of it, full of hope and confidence that he should find employment. The gentleman heard what he had to say, looked over his letters hastily, and then handed them back to him, saying, "We have nothing for you to do, sir." The young man felt his heart sink within him. He was ready to burst into tears. But there was no hep for it, so he made his bow and retired. As he was passing in front of the building, there was a pin lying on the pavement. He stooped down, and picked it up, and then stuck it carefully away under the bosom of his coat. The gentleman with whom he had just been speaking was standing at the window, and saw what took place. In an instant the thought occurred to him that the young man who had such habits of carefulness as to stop at such a moment of disappointment, and pick up a pin, would make a useful business man. He sent immediately and called him back. He gave him an humble position in his establishment. From that he rose by degrees, till he became the principal partner in the concern, and eventually a man of immense wealth and the chief banker in Paris. So much for good, careful habits.

—No young lady is so honest that she will refuse to hook a dress.

—Greatness stands upon a precipice, and if prosperity carries a man ever so little over his poise it overbears and dashes him to pieces.

—Truthfulness is a corner stone in character; and if not firmly laid in your youth, there will always be a weak spot in your character.

—They say that the reason why the ladies like the late style broad rim hats is, that they throw such a shadow around the neck as to make it feel like some fellow's arm.

Very Well.

[From The Los Angeles Express, Dec. 14]

THE INYO INDEPENDENT complains that The Express has not given that paper due credit for the part it took in bringing forward the project of a railroad to the Inyo interior from Los Angeles, and claims that it was an advocate of the road long before The Express took an active interest in it. As we have never claimed to ourselves any merit in the matter, but have merely in one instance reproduced a portion of an article on the subject from THE INDEPENDENT, we cannot see wherein we have offended. While on this subject, we may as well give, as a matter of interesting history, an incident which first brought this project prominently to our notice, although it had previously been discussed in a desultory manner by all the newspapers of Southern California. In the Fall of 1872, Mr. Prudent Beaudry, the present Mayor of Los Angeles, submitted to us a letter from his brother, Mr. Victor Beaudry, of Cerro Gordo, in which the latter stated that his company would build a narrow gauge road to this city themselves, in the event that a certain mine they were then working developed as largely as it promised. He then went into the details of the costs of the road and gave an estimate of its probable earnings. The scheme was set forth in so business-like and attractive a manner that it had great weight with us, and we translated the letter, which was in French and published it. That letter, at the time, was the subject of much earnest discussion, and, with us, at least, created a very deep impression. The transportation necessities of the great mine-owners of Cerro Gordo were really the inspiring power that gave this railroad project its first practical impetus, and from that time to this we have been an earnest and continuous advocate of the road, using every argument and every effort in our power to render the project popular and its construction among the events we might with certainty count on.

"Our Set."

As a rule, those most solicitous about social status have a reason for being so, and those who think least about it, have the most solid footing. It does not occur to him whose social position is unquestioned, to discuss it, but to him who is climbing, and has not exactly niched himself in the place he covets, it is an important and interesting question; hence his interminable talk about "family." This idea of making out that one's relatives and friends comprise a body of the superior to ordinary people has taken astonishing root in the soil of the Republic. A stranger can scarcely enter any village or town of the Union, without being confidentially informed as soon as he gets into the place that "the society is very good there." The young men and women of the large towns are constantly talking about "our set." There is diligent search after the genealogical tree and the coat of arms. The ancestral hall is propped up with documentary evidence. Coats of arms are exhibited on seal rings, cards, and letter paper; are found on a few carriage panels. One of these pieces of blazonry, belonging to a man of Irish descent, irreproachable in himself and his family, furnishes a clever satire. It is composed of a shield reposing on crossed shellalehs. On each corner of the shield is perched an owl, indicative of wisdom; on the top a pot of boiling potatoes; on its face a puissant arm and hand holding a potato on the end of a fork, with an inscription containing a Latin pun on a scroll beneath: Semper paratus.—[From The Galaxy for December.

Drowning of Charles G. Meyer.

The body of Charles G. Meyer was found floating in the bay at the Vallejo street wharf yesterday morning. Deceased was one of the oldest mining experts and assayers on the Pacific Coast. He came to California in 1849, on the first overland stage, and has been engaged in most of principal mining explorations of the Coast. He was well known in Virginia City and Washoe, and had been through all the mining districts of the Pacific Coast, Mexico, and Central and South America. Recently he was in the employ of Senators Stewart and Jones at Panamint. Deceased was 47 years of age, and unmarried. He was a native of Germany, where parents reside. From the fact that he lately seemed down hearted, it is surmised that he committed suicide.—[S. F. Alta, Dec. 18.

Sharpening Edge Tools.

The Mark Lane Express copies the following receipt for sharpening edged tools, from a German scientific journal, for the benefit of carpenters, mechanics, and laborers. It has long been known that the simplest method of sharpening a razor is to put it for half an hour in water to which has been added one-twentieth of its weight of muriatic or sulphuric acid, then lightly wipe it off, and after a few hours set it on a hone. The acid here supplies the place of a whetstone by corroding the whole surface evenly, so that nothing further than a smooth polish is necessary. The process never injuries good blades, while badly hardened ones are generally improved by it, although the cause of improvement remains unexplained.

—The Arizona Miner states that the contract for grading the Southern Pacific railroad to Fort Yuma has been let to Col. Hall, and he is to have the work done by the first of next July.

A Merry Christmas.

Once more THE INDEPENDENT greets its readers with a MERRY CHRISTMAS, and a sincere hope that the next may be more so for all.

Brainard's Musical World.

The December number of this popular musical monthly closes its twelfth yearly volume. The Musical World is not only the oldest and largest musical monthly in the country, but it is by far the best, cheapest and most popular. Each number contains thirty-six pages of the choicest new music, both vocal and instrumental, and original, interesting and instructive musical reading matter, edited by Karl Merz, the well known musical writer. The publishers have with business liberality reduced the price to $1 50 per annum, post-paid, and give each subscriber either a copy of Karl Merz' "Musical Hints for the Million,"—a book of 216 pages invaluable to any one interested in music,—or two portraits of musical celebrities, which can be selected from a list of forty-eight. A valuable list of premiums is also offered to clubs. Send 15 cents to S. Brainard's Sons, Publishers Cleveland, O., for specimen copy, (containing $2 worth of music) or $1 50 for The World one year, (containing over $20 worth of music) and a copy of the "Musical Hints," or two premium portraits.

A Large Sized Fraud.

A stupendous swindle has just been unearthed in Southeastern Missouri. It appears that deeds of lands in Northern Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri have been forged for some years past, and agencies for this work were established Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New York and Manchester, England. It is estimated that deeds to over 12,000,000 acres of land have been forged and disposed of, the valuation being about $30.000.000. The land operated upon is owned by non-residents, and as the records were mostly destroyed during the civil war the ring hae every facility to carry out the enormous swindle. The deeds have been sold all over the United States and in England. The Grand Jury of Shannon county, Missouri, have indicted Dr. Thomas K. Sherman, David B. Bingham and Jas A. Lawton for complicity. Lawton seems to be the executive man and operated extensively in England.

A Gigantic Steal in New York.

A trunk containing $15.000,000 worth of bonds was stolen from one of Dodd's Express wagons at Watt and Canal streets, on the night of Dec. 11th. The bonds were in care of the Minister of Guatemala, who arrived in New York the day before. They were to be used as part of the payment due the United States Government. The Minister, Senor Don Vicente Dardon, was staying at No. 12 Forty-second steet. On Saturday, intending to go to Washington, he packed the bonds in his trunk When the robbery was made known to the Minister he fell in a faint and required medical assistance to restore him. He said the bonds could not be replaced. He has gone to Washington. A man has been arrested and charged with participation in the robbery.

A Valuable Paper.

Chase & Boruck, of The California Spirit of the Times, have placed us under obligations for a copy of The Times consisting of almost half a quire of paper and containing a large number of engravings, portraits of prominent Californians, and descriptive articles o several public institutions, altogther making it what we may call a wonderfully fine paper. It has twenty large pages, one being entirely taken up with a splendid picture of the Palace Hotel, interior views of which are also given in other places. Stanford's famous horse Occident appears natural as life among the portraits of biped notabilities.

A Good Publication.

We have receivrd a copy of The Union Christian Worker which has been established as a permanent enterprise and 10.000 mailed to the different portions of this coast. It is a valuable paper for Churches, Sunday schools and families. It only costs 50 cents per annum, when 10 or more copies are sent to one address, $1 50 for a single copy. It has 16 pages, several of them specially devoted to Sunday schools It is edited by laymen of several different denominations. Address Cubery & Co., publishers, 414 Market street San Francisco.

—"Some sermonizers," said Sidney Smith, "preach as if sin were to be taken from men as Eve was from Adam, by casting them into a deep sleep."

TAXES BY INSTALLMENTS.

It is now rather late in the day to offer any objection to the bill pending in the Legislature to permit the payment of taxes by installments, to go into effect immediately. This latter point is its only objectionable feature that we now see. It is too late in the day to so completely upset the usual routine of public financial affairs. There is not the least question but to very many tax payers in Inyo as well as every other county a temporary release from even one-half the taxes due and payable on the first of next month, would be an immense relief and such a law would on that account be hailed as a decided help by very many. Yet it strikes us, as we intended to have set forth last week when it might have been of some avail, that there are some objections to such a sudden change, which upon the whole, will more then compensate the advantage of this temporary reclief to many tax payers. We cannot do better in explaining our own views upon this subject than to adopt the words used by The Kern County Gazette, to this effect:

"The proposition to disturb existing laws on this subject until the first of May, is one fraught with difficulty and mischief, and is unjust it its nature. It ought to be styled: "An Effort to enable Capitalists to evade the payment of Taxes as long as Possible." The Tax Collector has been at work now for weeks and many people have paid. These are almost exclusively men of small means, who own a little property and never rest easy until their taxes are settled. The rich men all hold back and pay when they can no longer defer. To pass an Act extending the time for their benefit when the taxes from the poorer have been received, would be grossly partial and unjust. Had such an Act gone into effect before the taxes became due, there would have been no objection to it on this score. But apart from this the proposed change would disturb the financial arrangements of nearly every county in the State. The moment the law postponing the time when taxes become delinquent went into effect, all payments would cease, and the county governments would be unable to meet their obligations The result would be disastrous and perplexing. It would be unjust to the holders of scrip and other public creditors, and result in no corresponding adequate benefit. The cry of hard times is always raised when taxes are to be paid, and if the time is postponed, the cry will be kept up until the end. People will make an excuse for not meeting other obligations, that they have to raise money to pay their taxes, whereas, if the existing law is not disturbed, the pinch will soon be over, and money paid to the State and counties will soon begin to flow back into the regular channels of trade.

"If it is deemed advisable as some propose, to make taxes payable semi-annually, the law should not take effect until another year, and in the mean time the State and counties can adjust their business so as to adapt it to the new order of things. They are not prepared for it now, and to compel them to wait for months for money to meet present needs would not be right, nor would it result in any benefit."

The principal argument in favor of the proposed law may be summed up in this: That it is easier for a debtor to pay a portion of his debt at a time, generally speaking, than the whole at once; and particularly when so many have to raise hard cash all about the same day, thereby effectually draining the country of nearly every surplus dollar, so that full amounts can hardly be obtained, often with the best collaterals. But the proposed relief is only temporary—the debt has to be paid, and interest besides if the extension is taken. It easier for a large proportion of tax payers to settle in January, so close after harvest, than in May, when they have no crops ready for market.

Whatever advantage may accrue temporarily to individual tax payers by this change, should it now take place, will more than be lost to the mass, themselves included, by another year or so. Scrip on the Expense Fund, now worth its face, and all county scrips would certainly depreciate full forty per cent. As county expenses would be enhanced in the same proportion of of course succeeding tax levies would have to be similarly raised or the county become bankrupt.

The Bremen Explosion.

News from Bermerhaven says that by the explosion at the quay of the Mosel there were altogether 57 persons killed and 93 wounded, the majority being residents of Bremen who went down to the dock as spectators of the shipment of passengers. The man who delivered the box of dynamite had planned that the explosion should take place on the ocean during the voyage of the Mosel outward.

Thanks.

We are indebted to some one, Hon. M. Griswold, we think, for the bound reports of numerous State officers, for which our thanks are hereby extended.

—A little boy, gazing upon an old picture of his mother, taken in a low dress, remarked, "Mamma, you was mos' ready for bed when dat picter was tooken."

A Most Diabolical Crime.

All civilization is aghast at a great slaughter which took place by accident, so to speak, at Bremer-haven, Germany, but a few days since, not so much at the disaster itself, great as it was, as at the diabolical intent of the man who caused it. The story in brief is that a man named Thomas had prepared an infernal machine in the shape of a barrel of dynamite, intended to be placed aboard the passenger steamer Mosel and so timed as to explode about the time she would reach mid ocean, inevitably send every living thing on that ship to eternity. It so happened the explosion took place by accident just as the machine was being put aboard the steamer, and while the immediate vicinity was crowded with people, not less than one hundred and eighty of whom were killed and wounded. Well may the world stand aghast when the object of this most wonderful crime is understood. It was simply that this devil incarnate, Thomas, might recover a large insurance he had effected upon the vessel or her cargo! Thomas was soon after arrested, and after confessing his scheme, made repeated and most desperate efforts to take his own life, in which, however, he has so far been thwarted, but only through the most unremitting attention from his guards. He was a blockade runner during the rebellion in this country, in which business he amassed a large fortune, and went to Germany to reside. He has a wife and four children, who, however innocent themselves, must, while life lasts, share the infamy of the worst criminal of the nineteenth century.

A Remarkable Escape.

One of the most remarkable escapes on record was that of a passenger on the fast express Monday. Soon after the train passed Charlton he attempted to go from one car to another, and the terrible wind actually blew him clean from the platform. The horrified brakeman, who saw the man go overboard, like a leaf in the gale, immediately pulled the signal cord, and the train was stopped, after running about the eighth of a mile. The brakeman sprang from the rear car and ran down the track with a red flag, when, wonderful to tell he met the man running to overtake the train, and apparently chiefly troubled lest the passengers should be inconvenienced by the detention. He got on at the rear of the train and made his way quickly to the seat where he had left and sat quietly down. His wife turned to him and remarked, "Why, they say a man was blown from the train just now?" "Is that so," said he. Presently a number of interested passengers, who had followed him to his place, asked so earnestly after his welfare that the true state of the case dawned upon his wife, and she exclaimed, "Why, was it for you the train stopped?" And he had to tell —[Worcester Spy.

Benton Bullion Shipments.

We are indebted to Mr. E R Miner Wells, Fargo's agent at Benton, Mono county, writing on the 22d, for the following items of interest: Our mills were mostly idle last Winter; previous to June shipped but $16,150 value of bullion; since then, $250.000, or an average of $35,714 per month. It is not much, but yet something for a little village. The Diana Mill & Mining Co.'s mill has started up with a prospect of running steadily all Winter. We have five new dwelling houses built here this season, besides two stables, two butcher shops, one blacksmith and one wood working and blacksmith shop, to say nothing of additions to other buildings A. Mack has been continually adding to, and improving his mill; he lately had an engine and machinery put on his principal mine for hoisting, and it will soon be in operation.

Dismissed.

Ex-Senator Henderson, who has been assisting the U. S. District Attorney in unearthing the St. Louis whisky frauds, was relieved from all further connection with the case by Attorney General Pierrepont, because of gross personal attacks on President Grant in his speech in the case. Mr. Henderson, occupying as he did a position as Government assistant, acted foolishly and certainly in bad taste, and his prompt removal will be endorsed by independent men of all parties.

Vice President Wilson's Unfinished Work.

The death of Vice President Wilson leaves his "History of the Rise and Fall of the Slave Power" unfinished. Two volumes were published last Summer, and sixteen chapters of the third volume are known to have been ready for the printers. It is believed that no more have been written. He had within a week asked one of the Washington correspondents to assist him in preparing two of the last chapters.

A Colored Senator.

Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Revolutionary Claims, is a portly affable mulatto. He was formerly a slave in Lexington, Missouri, bat after the war immigrated to Jackson, Mississippi, where he was first elected Sheriff and then United States Senator. He is a man of commanding appearance, polite manners and self-educated.

John S Nugent.

The following, from The Sonora Union Democrat, relating to the well known man whose names heads this article, will be of interest to our readers, independent of the fact that Mr. Nugent was for a time a resident of this county, at Panamint:

We are called upon to record the death of John S Nugent, an old and well known resident of Columbia, in this county. His career was somewhat check red and the mystery surrounding his birth almost verges upon romanticism. He was born in Dublin about 1807, and was consequently 68 years of age. He obtained his education in the Dublin University, his expenses being defrayed with funds from an unknown source. During his boyhood he went to Jamaica and afterwards emigrated to New York in 1850, where he was enabled through the generous pecuniary aid of his unknown friends to enter into a thriving wine business While in New York, he married Miss Fox, daughter of a merchant of the firm of Fox, Barclay & Livingston. A son by this marriage is now a prominent young lawyer in Utah. After his wife's death Nugent came to California having in his possession $50,000, the bulk of which he lost in San Francisco. With the remnant of his fortune he purchased a yarch and sailed for the Society Islands, his little vessel being in command of Captain William H. Clark, now a resident of Sonora. Returning to California he drifted to Tuolumne and settled in Columbia in 1854, where he remained until about six months ago, when through a general debility and constitutional decline, his mind gave way and he was sent to the Insane Asylum at Stockton where he died last Saturday He was very reticent in regard to his birth and parents, alleging that he knew little or nothing in regard to the matter, but from vague hints coming from nobody knows where, it has always been the general belief of his friends that he was the natural son of George the IV of England by his morganatic marriage with the actress, Mrs Fuzjames. If this is true another paragraph can be inserted in the celebrated "Memoirs."

Col. James Bowie.

A correspondent of The New York Tribune relates the following: "I remember a story I heard forty or fifty years ago. A stage coach was going along an Arkansas road. On the back seat were three women; on the middle one, two men, tall and muscular; while the forward seat held only a small man, wrapped up completely in a blanket After a time one of the powerful men on the middle seat lit a cigar and smoked. The smoke went full in the face of one of the women, who was both young and timid. She sickened and then requested the man to stop smoking. This aroused the ruffian in him and he roughly declared, 'I have paid my fare; it is customary to smoke, and I will smoke as much as I have a mind to.' Accordingly he took out a fresh cigar, and started the smoke cloud again. The woman could only add that 'smokers ought not to forget to be gentlemen' This remark excited the man's rage to white heat. At this point the small man on the front seat laid aside his blanket, put his left hand on the knee of the enraged ruffian, in order to withdraw his attention from the women and to himself, while in his right hand he drew a bowie knife from its case between his shoulder blades. Pointing the weapon at the heart of the brute, and looking him square in the eyes, the little man quickly said: 'I am Col James Bowie, and unless you throw that cigar away in one minute, I will put this knife into your heart as true as there is a God' The ruffian comprehended in an instant with whom he had to deal, and threw his cigar out of the window without adding a word Col Bowie replaced his weapon, drew his blanket about him, and relapsed into a condition of apparent indifference."

Beecher and the Bible in Public Schools—He Would Exclude It.

Rev Henry Ward Beecher's discourse lately advocating the exclusion of the Bible from the public schools as "only a fair policy" is attracting much attention from politicians and others who are looking forward to the future elections If only as a matter for reference, it is well enough to place the reverend gentleman's exact words on record: "It was not fair," he said, "to compel a Jew to pay taxes to support schools where the New Testament, in which he did not believe, was read every day to his children. Neither was it fair to his Roman Catholic brother to tax him to sustain a system of public education in which the Protestant Bible was conspicuously used. It was not right, either, should Catholics gain the ascendancy in affairs of State, to tax Protestants in support of schools where the Douay version of the Scriptures was read to the pupils. 'Fair play' is the motto."

LETTER FROM BENTON.

BENTON, DEC. 14.

MESSRS EDS:—I noticed some time ago an article in your paper dated at Benton to which we take some exceptions, and therefore hope you will give a small space in the columns of your valuable little paper for the purpose of correcting your correspondent and giving the actual facts of the case.

Your correspondent writes to this effect: "A. B. Williams mill and mine are at present under attachment for the payment of old security debts, but we trust that he will soon raise those attachments and turn out many Benton bits" This Mr. Editor is entirely incorrect. 'Tis true his property was at that time attached, but it was for the very material that built his mill and the provisions he used at the mine, and in fact for every thing he has made use of in the way of machinery, tools and chemicals that he has used for the last three or four years. These are the kind of debts Mr. Williams owed and for which his property was attached, and it would have been sold had the creditors not met en masse and brought the gentleman to time by demanding an equal show for their just dues, which was accordingly given them by the creditors taking the property. They have formed a co-partnership known as the Diana Mine & Milling Company, and with a full corps of officers have gone to work to see if A. W. B has made a fortune, as well as to get their money back which I believe they will do in less than a year.

'Tis said that figures won't lie, but in this case figures will lie or the said A. W. B. has made a fortune, because Mr. Williams is a close and good business man and has run his mill (with a capacity of five tons in twenty four hours) for eighteen months on ore that will mill on an average $150; the cost of mining and milling the ore will not exceed $50 and allowing one third of the time for repairs it cannot appear otherwise to a man of even one eye and very ordinary intelligence, but that A. W B has taken out at the least calculation $180.000 worth of bullion. The question arises what has he done with it, for everybody in and around Benton knows that he has paid for scarcely anything since he started his mill—what he did pay was paid in checks on F. Garishee, of Aurora, which were not honored and eventually protested. "Facts are stubborn things," and to enter into the details of the facts in reference to this case would occupy more space than I could ask you to contribute, though it be to vindicate the rights of this place as a mining town, for we do claim that the above is correct and that the way in which that business was conducted bears a falsehood upon the place, and will look to persons not living here as though the poor man had spent years of toil and had eventually been closed out by an unmerciful gang of creditors and all because the mines wouldn't pay. If people wish to know whether these mines pay or not let them examine the books of Wells, Fargo & Co. of this place and we think that they will conclude that the mines will pay.

Mr. A. Mack is not afraid to invest his capital here; his machinery for hoisting works arrived a few days since and will soon be in operation. By the time Mr Williams' creditors run his mill and mine six months they will consider themselves amply able to put up hoisting works on the Diana mine—at any rate the parties have gone to work with a will and seem to think that Diana stock is worth 100 cents on the dollar

An Important Verdict—A Test Case

The jury in the case of George Reynolds, at Salt Lake, December 10th, indicted for polygamy under the Act of Congress, found a verdict of guilty. Judge White's charge is pronounced to be the most stringent condemnation of polygamy that has ever been delivered from the Bench He charged that the efforts of the defendant to excuse himself on the ground of his religion was no defence; that crime could not be committed in the name of religion; that if the defendant's religion amounted to an inspiration, and he was thoroughly and honestly imbued with the notion that polygamy was a religious duty and practiced it accordingly, it was a violation of the Act of Congress denouncing it The delay of the jury was occasioned by three jurors who were Mormons, but not polygamists, being loth to convict This is regarded as a test case.

A Heavenly Study.

The young man, who had always manifested an interest in the heavens above him, paid his quarter, and was told to pick out any star he pleased and feast his eyes on it. He glued his optic to the small end of the tube, and after shoving the machine about for some seconds, suddenly became wrapped in the study of something which appeared to give him the highest satisfaction For several minutes he stood as immovable as a statue. "Guess he's going to grow there," growled a man waiting for a chance. "Perhaps he never saw a telescope before," said somebody else. "Young man," remarked the owner of the tube, "if you propose to monopolize the instrument, you must pay more." The only answer made by the fellow was to quietly put his hand in his pocket, and, without taking his eye away from the opening, handed the man ten cents. For nearly fifteen minutes the student of astronomy kept up a raptured and uninterrupted gaze upon the heavens, and paid his regular assessment every time he was called on. The owner of the instrument was taken in a rich harvest. Suddenly there was a long-drawn sigh, and, rising from his stooping position, the young man stood up "Mister, that's a good telescope, and I am satisfied with the show." Then he walked on, and the next man who went to look at the heavenly body didn't see it, from the simple fact that the house on Telegraph Hill which had been in the focus of that telescope for the past fifteen minutes was no longer illuminated, and the girl, whose chamber had been peered into so steadily, had gone to bed.—[Ex.

"That's My Boy!"

Two of our School Commissioners started out the other day to pay a visit to one of the schools On entering the yard they saw a little boy playing around, whose face, hands and clothes were not quite as clean as they might have been. One of the Commissioners called him up and told him he had better go home and get his mother to clean him a little and make him appear more decent. On the boy approaching the speaker the other Commissioner was heard to exclaim, "Why, dash it all! that's my boy!"—[Rochester Union.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

In Tribute to the Memory of a Good Woman.

The demise of Mrs. Captain Macgowan has thrown a gloom upon this community, and most profound over her more intimate acquaintances, all of whom without exception, have ever expressed a regard for her goodness of heart and action, her ladylike and sympathetic nature, rarely vouchsafed in higher degree to the dearest friend or relation. None, whether in civil or military life, whatever their station in life who have known her, but, without exception, speak in the highest terms of this truly good woman. We can offer no higher tribute to her worth than to say that she is missed by every member of the company her husband commands as would be an actual mother. It has ever been the pride and the pleasure of the members of the company, as we have been told months ago, to do every possible service for this estimable lady that lay in their power, to thus, in some degree, requite the many words of sympathy and encouragement in well doing, and christian like ministrations, she, on all suitable occasions, was ever ready to tender them and theirs. Captain Macgowan and his two motherless boys, now long miles away, have met a loss too severe for earth to fully heal, a grief too great for words of sympathy even from the whole world, to assuage, but to such words, he and they are entitled to the full, and for our own part, we tender them most feelingly.

Personal.

Dr. Blair started on Thursday evening for a holiday visit among old friends over at Visalia and vicinity....On the day previous Mrs. R. W. Woolard for Darwin to rejoin R. W., who has just finished up a cottage for a permanent stay in that burg. R. W, is boss clerk of the Defiance company....From Panamint we have Isaac Harris, of Harris & Rhine, who comes in to get partially civilized after staying out there so long, and also Thomas Kehoe.... Mr. M. A. Wheeler of the San Felipe company, was here during the week, but has since returned to San Francisco, for which place Paul Bennett, Esq. also started on Friday....Lieutenant Haskell, Co. B 12th Infantry, arrived at the Post during the week and received a warm welcome from many old friends. He has lately been on duty at San Francisco, where Co. B has been stationed since leaving Fort Yuma.

Blooded Stock Entered.

The Jockey Club are meeting with better success than was anticipated and there will be a showing of speed in the one mile race that will astonish everybody. We surmise this from the fact that among the horses already entered for the single dash of a mile is Jas. Jones' gray stallion, Glencoe Chief, and Bennett's bay stallion, Budd Doble. These horses are too well known to need description, but notwithstanding their notoriety they will have to "buckle down" to their work for we understand that a black horse—we haven't learned the name—is expected from Benton, also Eph. Harrington's Fireman, better known as the Cochran colt. Send in your entries, or make known to the Secretary your intentions as early as practicable for your own convenience as well as that of the Club.

The Defiance Furnace.

The Defiance furnace was started up again last Monday, but only run till about 11 o'clock that morning, getting out 34 bars, when the pump gave out, rendering it necessary to shut down again till that could be put in working order; started up again on Tuesday night with a fair prospect of a continuous run of two or three months. The first seven hours after starting on the last heat 51 bars were run out and at the end of that time was ready to tap again, so it will be seen this bids fair to be the champion furnace of the country, as the mine, so far undoubtedly is among mines.

Sudden Death.

Walter Buchanan while carrying the mail from this place to Lida Valley, was taken sick and expired almost immediately on the night of the 21st, just as he reached Gilbert's ranch, Deep Spring Valley, on his last outward trip. Mr. Beasley brought the body to Big Pine on the following day for burial Deceased was about 60 years of age, a native of New York, recently a resident of Bishop Creek. It is supposed he died of heart disease.

Duly Installed.

Mr. R. M. Briggs, our new Register of the Land Office arrived last Sunday, and is now fully installed in the office ready for business. Mr. Briggs is an elderly gentleman who, we feel sure, will have the respect and friendship of all who make his acquaintance. Mr. Briggs, though lately connected with the press, is a lawyer by profession and as will be seen by his card elsewhere given, offers his professional services to the Inyo public, mining matters being something of a specialty.

For Bishop.

Parties at Bishop Creek, also at Benton, awaiting a chance for good and reliable dental operations will please read Dr. Stockley's card under "New Advertisements."

To "Crowder."

An up country correspondent writing over the above non de plume, will bear in mind that we will not give place to such communications unless accompanied by the writer's true name.

Personal Advertisements.

We think it the right, not to say the duty, of every individual feeling aggrieved by reports affecting his honor to do all he can to vindicate himself before the community, and when that can be done through a public print, such vindications are generally admissible, as an advertisement if not otherwise. Within certain limits the right of hearing, especially by advertisement in such cases, is one that cannot be well denied by newspaper publishers, whatever their own opinions as to the subject matter. Speaking for ourselves, though, it is always with extreme reluctance we give place to such, concerning matters so exclusively and injuriously personal, but nevertheless a refusal to publish would often appear a denial of the right of vindication that would subject the paper to a charge of unfairness even though it was fully convinced the results aimed at by the parties at issue could be much better attained by other less public and entirely different means. In view of the acknowledged right above accorded it becomes only a question of where lines of exclusion for such personal advertisements shall be drawn and this is a point not so easily determined. We have in the past positively refused place to several proffered advertisements of this character, and again admitted some that would perhaps, have been better for all the parties concerned had they been similarly refused. All that we can now say in brief is, that henceforth we shall not allow as much latitude to this class of advertisers, no matter what the apparent exigency as viewed from their standpoint, as we have at times done heretofore.

Somewhat Peculiar.

Last week a suit brought by T. D. Lewis at Bishop Creek to recover money he claimed as due in account with some party not necessary to name, came up for trial, as previously set, before Justice Walcott of that locality. Lewis asked for a stay of proceedings for the reason that an important witness was then temporarily absent. His motion was denied and a jury empaneled. Before going into trial Lewis, the plaintiff, again asked for a postponement. He was ordered to sit down or he would be fined for contempt. Lewis asked what he had said that could be construed into contempt, claiming that he had committed none. Without further remark the Justice fined him $25 or in default, twenty-five days in the county jail, and ordered his immediate arrest. A commitment, directed to no one, was made out, and pursuant to order and his understanding of duty, Constable Brown brought Lewis to jail. On his arrival here, acting as his own counsel as before, he claimed a hearing before Judge Hannah of the county Court on writ of habeas corpus, and on that secured his release, not so much on the singular merits of the case, as set forth by himself, as upon the prima facie incompleteness and error of the commitment. It is said the Justice, in the original hearing, but before any trial was had, ordered the jury to retire to consider a verdict, but with instructions to find for the defense, after a short absence the jury reported their inability to agree under the instructions. They were ordered to retire again and to bring in a verdict for the defense, notwithstanding no evidence had been adduced, or they would each be fined for contempt and imprisoned in default of its payment. They then brought in a verdict as instructed. If the facts in this case were as they have been represented to us, we must say it looks as though Justice Walcott has arrogated about as much high authority to himself as we have yet heard of emanating from a Justice's Court, or any other. Let us hope there is another and better side to this story.

Another Darwin Incorporation.

The South extension of the Defiance, known as the Lauretta, formally and as yet in part we believe, belonging to Wilson, Colby and Reddy, is considered by some very good judges as even more promising and valuable than the original itself. This mine was recently incorporated by the Loretta Mining Company; capital stock divided into 100,000 shares, with a paid up working capital, P. Reddy, Esq. Superintendent. Mr Reddy commenced systematically on the 20th to develope the mine, and commenced taking out ore almost from the first strike of the pick.

A Serenade.

The other night our citizens generally were favored with an instrumental serenade for a special share of which the boys will please accept our appreciative thanks. The music was very good, but besides that, this occasion is worthy of remark considered in connection with December weather which, even for hours in the stilly night, gives no greater impediment to the nimble play of fingers upon strings and keys than would that of balmy June.

Spelling School.

Mr. Levin, our very efficient school teacher, gave a public spelling school at the school house on Thursday evening. Though the attendance was not very large, it was one of the pleasantest, and most generally enjoyed occasions we have seen for a long time. Other meetings will take place from time to time.

The First Shipment.

The Defiance Company made their first shipment of six and a half tons of bullion last Monday. This was a portion run out the first three days prior to having to shut down the furnace to repair the break in the bottom.

Ball at Bishop.

We are requested to announce that a ball first set for New Years at the Bishop Creek Hotel, is to take place on Friday, December 31st, and everybody is invited to come.

Recruits.

Some ten or twelve soldiers arrived here from below a day or two since, who, we believe, are new recruits for Co. D.

The Eclipse Mill.

Wednesday last we, through the courtesy of Judge Conklin, took a ride down to the Eclipse mill, which, it may be of interest to some to know, is ten miles south of this place on the east bank of Owens river. Since the Messrs. Eudey of the Eclipse, have, at their own expense built a good bridge across the river at the mill, it is much easier of access than formerly via the Bend City bridge and sandy road down the other side. A great deal of interest is felt in the result of the present operations of the Eclipse company as carried on by the efficient and thoroughly energetic gentlemen, Henry and Captain Jos. Eudey, who, at their own personal risk some time ago took it in hand determined to show to the world that the Eclipse mine

CAN BE MADE TO PAY,

notwithstanding previous failures and the unavailing expenditure of such vast sums of English sovereigns. The history of this mine since its location early in the decade beginning in 1861 forms a lengthy and most interesting chapter in the story of Inyo county mining operations, but we shall now forego all that; except to say that during all these years it has always been looked upon as the representative mine of its class—if it proved a success, in the ordinary acceptance of that term, it practically proved the success of scores, not to say hundreds of other gold bearing ledges cropping boldly out everywhere in the vicinity and along the whole length of the Inyo range in which it is located. If the Eclipse mine could be profitably worked, so could and would scores of others, and for this reason its fortunes have been watched with an interest quite beyond its own individuals merits and financial, importance. After conceding

AN UNLIMITED SUPPLY OF ORE,

there remained but two things to determine: First, how to save a fair percentage of the exceedingly fine gold the ores contain, and, second, to reduce the cost of manipulation to a minimum, so as to leaving a clear margin, however small, for profit. As the history of previous operations show these were matters of grave import. To mine, transport three miles and mill obstinate ores profitably, which, as whole does not exceed $15 per ton assay value, was a most serious undertaking in a country like this, where owing to lack of railroad and other facilities, $100 ore in fair quantities has generally been considered the minimum value per ton admitting profitable reduction, mill process, after making due allowance for the inevitable wastage attending the reduction of such ores, all more or less base. The present operations of the Messrs. Eudeys will soon definitely solve these two problems. Their work has been to arrange machinery and appliances of all sorts so as to reduce the cost of handling the ores from first to last to the lowest possible figure. Considering the limited means at their disposal, we do not see where anything more could be done in this direction than they have already accomplished; but it has required

MONTHS OF HARD LABOR

with their own hands, and most economical and persevering efforts. In this way they have fully demonstrated this fact: That the ores can be mined, transported three miles, crushed and amalgamated, expenses all told, for a sum not exceeding $7 50 per ton, our own estimate which, we believe is full twenty-five per cent. large. This fact established there remains but the matter of saving such a per centage out of such low grade ores to show a profit. As we assume the average value of the gold quartz to be not higher than $15 per ton it will be seen the margin for profits is quite limited, but from all we have seen, we feel perfectly confident that problem is almost, if not quite as satisfactorily demonstrated as the other, and yet, so far as our limited observation goes, by no unusual or extraordinary means as regards machinery or process We do not feel safe in offering a scientific statement of the component parts of the ores, particularly as we did not make that a special object of inquiry, or visit the mine itself. It is enough now to say that, mixed with the gold quartz, considerable quantities of valuable argentiferous galena is found, all of which, however, is, in the first place, carefully selected from the gold quartz and thrown aside, as the lead, of course, renders perfect amalgamation in the pans an impossibility. The next point to be attained is to effect a thorough scouring of the infinitessimal particles of iron coated gold, which has to be done in the pans as usual. When that scouring is well done, the whole difficulty of amalgamation is supposed to be effectually surmounted. Enough has already been done in the Eclipse mill under its present management to prove beyond doubt that all that is necessary for the purpose, when the ores have been properly assorted is the simple without roasting, or chemicals other than a partial use of the mixture embraced in the name "alkali," to be had everywhere around for the mere collection. As yet no grand clean up has been made, therefore we cannot say that the other problem is solved entirely beyond question, but yet enough has been done to quiet all fears on that important point—that is, to prove that these low grade ores are actually being worked with a greater or lesser margin of clear profit, the exact degree to yet to be determined after a general clean up, to take place perhaps not for two or three weeks yet. At present lack of pans and settlers will admit the employment of but twenty stamps a portion of each day, say ten hours, the other machinery running constantly. The average amount of ore put through in that time is about sixteen tons. Additional pans and settlers are to be put up as fast as circumstances will possibly admit until the thirty stamps now in place can be kept fully employed. The mill has been rebuilt in good part, the machinery all operating as true and smoothly as in the most pretentious mills on the Comstock. An eighteen-foot overshot water wheel has been added to the large turbine, which alone looks capable of giving all required power; but the duty of the overshot is confined exclusively to the operation of the settlers so to permit of independent action in case of accidents or other causes requiring the stopping of the powerful turbine. The water power is ample and available at all seasons, and its cheapness, compared with steam is a most valuable factor toward desired results. At present the pulp in the pans is worked cold, but they are to be heated with steam as soon as the boiler can be constructed from the prepared plates now on the ground, and put in place.

We shall defer some matters of detail concerning tramway, mine, mill, machinery, force employed, etc., until after a future visit we hope soon to make. In conclusion for the present we deem it proper to say the Messrs. Eudeys have worked unassumingly along from the first not inviting, perhaps not desiring any newspaper prominence for the property in their charge or their individual efforts, content to let only actual results demonstrate value and judgment. We feel it quite in place to acknowledge their courtesies and not less those from Mr. Willett, a prominent member of the company, now on a visit to the property, but who proposes soon to return to England.

Masonic.

At a stated meeting last Saturday night of the Inyo Lodge, No 221 F. & A. M., the following officers were elected: A. N. Bell, W. M.; John Shepherd, S. W.; C. F. Stoutenborough, J. W.; J. B. White, Treasurer; G. B. White, Secretary. It is the intention of the members, as they now have a P. M., to have a public installation of officers.

In Full Blast.

Through a private letter from Darwin dated on the 20th, we learn that the New Coso Furnace is again in full blast and running most successfully.

For the Holidays.

The Legislature has adjourned for the Holidays, without, so far as we know, having passed any law affecting us locally.

Still At It

The Greasers are still at it. Late advices from Fort Clark, Texas, say that the Mexicans crossed the river below San Felipe, and stole 800 head of cattle and 50 horses. Citizens threaten to take satisfaction, and are raising companies.

On Three Committees

Hon. M. Griswold. of Mono, Representative of our district, has been placed upon the following House Committees: Mines, State Hospital and Public Lands.

—The resignation of Surveyor-General Stratton has been placed in Senator Sargent's hands, to take effect Jan. 11th. Sargent will recommend as his successor H. G. Rollins, who has served as Register of the San Francisco Land Office during the past six years

"Getting Along."

[From The Young Crusader.]

There are different ways of getting along, as progress is sometimes called in this world. It does not always mean making a large sum of money, or being a great man for people to look at with wonder. Leaving off a bad habit for a good one is getting along; to be clean and tidy, instead of dirty and disorderly, is getting along; to be careful and saving, instead of thoughtless and extravagant, is getting along; to be active and industrious, instead of idle and lazy, is getting along; in short, when we see any one properly attentive to his duties, persevering through difficulties to gain such knowledge as will be of use to himself or others, offering a good example to his relatives and acquaintances, we may be sure that he is getting along in the world. Money is a very useful article in its way, but it is possible to get along with but small means; for it is a great mistake to suppose we must wait for a great deal of money before we can do anything. Perseverance is often better than a full purse. Many people fall behind, or miss the way altogether, because they do not perceive the simple and abundant means of getting along which surround them on every side; and it very often happens that these means are aids which can be had for the taking, but which money cannot purchase.

Those who really wish to get along in the world, in every sense of the word, must have a large stock of patience and perseverance, of hopeful faith, and confidence in God; be willing to learn and profit by the experience which may be learned every day from nearly every person with whom they come in contact; and, above all, a disposition not to be cast down by difficulties and disappointments.

Rum Cursed.

An Iowa paper says a family recently arrived at Dubuque, on their way East, and they laid around the levee all day in a drunken condition. The man was drunk, so was his wife, and, saddest of all, their daughter, fifteen years of age and quite good looking, was in the same condition. She lay with her head against her mother's shoulder, while the latter gazed idiotically around in a hopeless effort to appear sober. Two pretty little boys, one with a bright curly head, who were innocently playing about, completed the picture.

Pumpkin as a Poultice.

A correspondent of the New York Farmer's Club gives an instance in which a woman's arm was swelled to an enormous size and painfully inflamed. A poultice was made of stewed pumkins, which was renewed every fifteen minutes, and in a short time produced a perfect cure. The fever drawn out by the poultices made them extremely offensive as they were taken off.

"All nigger, all Spanish man, git grub, git hat, git blanket; Injun no git nuffin!" and Piute Jim turns his back upon the relief headquarters and secretes himself in the footprint of the Gold Hill girl who visited Virginia City after the fire.

—It is said that President Lincoln once said to Senator Fessenden: "What is your religion?" "Not much to boast of, but I suppose I am as much a Unitarian as anything." "Oh, a Unitarian," said Lincoln; "I thought you might be an Episcopalian. Seward is an Episcopalian, and I notice you swear about as he does."
